COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS

1. INTRODUCTION

(1) IN GENERAL

1. General meaning of 'company'.

The general sense of the word 'company' denotes an association of individuals formed together for some common purpose¹. The word is defined for the strict purposes of the Companies Act 2006 to mean a company that has been formed and registered under the Act (and, accordingly, is governed by its provisions)², although it may include companies formed and registered under earlier enactments³.

Company law has developed in such a way that it recognises an incorporated company to be an entity with a personality that is distinct from the members (or, where the company has a share capital, the shareholders) who collectively constitute the company⁴.

There are many other bodies corporate⁵ which, although they may largely or partially engage in trading or comparable activities, are not commonly described as companies. These fall broadly into two categories:

- 1 (1) those incorporated pursuant to some general Act of Parliament permitting incorporation to be effected by any body of persons which fulfils specified conditions: of these the chief examples are building societies⁶ and industrial and provident societies⁷; and
- 2 (2) those known as public corporations: these are created to fulfil in each case some special social or economic purpose, and are created either by royal charter⁸ or, more commonly, by statute⁹ which defines the objects, constitution and powers of the corporation: examples include the British Broadcasting Corporation¹⁰; the Office of Communications (OFCOM)¹¹; Transport for London¹²; the Coal Authority¹³; the Independent Police Complaints Commission¹⁴; and the Office of Rail Regulation¹⁵.

1 For present needs, there is an implication in the word 'company' that the purpose for which the individuals have joined together is of a more or less permanent character. Companies, particularly those formed under the Companies Acts, typically provide for investment in trade with a view to generating profits in order to benefit their proprietors: see eg Re a Company (No 00709 of 1992), O'Neill v Phillips [1999] 2 All ER 961 at 966, [1999] 1 WLR 1092 at 1098, HL, per Lord Hoffmann ('a company is an association of persons for an economic purpose, usually entered into with legal advice and some degree of formality'). Contrast with the legal definition of a club as a society of persons associated together, not for the principal purposes of trade, but for social reasons, the promotion of politics, sport, art, science or literature, or for any other lawful purpose: see CLUBS vol 13 (2009) PARA 201.

In a legal context, it has been said that the word 'company', while having no strictly technical meaning, involves two ideas, namely: (1) that the members of the association are so numerous that it cannot aptly be described as a firm or partnership; and (2) that a member may transfer his interest in the association without the consent of all the other members: Re Stanley, Tennant v Stanley [1906] 1 Ch 131 at 134 per Buckley J. As to the meanings of 'firm' and 'partnership' see PARTNERSHIP vol 79 (2008) PARA 1; and see Smith v Anderson (1880) 15

ChD 247 at 273, CA, per James LJ (discussing ordinary partnerships). However, in contrast to what is stated in head (1) above, a company formed and registered under the Companies Act 2006 may legally consist of only one person (see s 7; and PARA 102); and, in contrast to what is stated in head (2) above, the typical modern form of company is a private company limited by shares where restrictions on the transfer of the member's shares in the company are commonplace (see PARA 392 et seq). Note also that, while companies limited by shares typically are formed for the purposes of trade and profit, many companies limited by guarantee operate on a not-for-profit basis and in the community interest. Community interest companies (which are governed by the provisions of the Companies Acts, subject to the Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 Pt 2 (ss 26-63): see the Companies Act 2006 s 6; and PARA 82) also constitute a form of registered corporate vehicle whose activities are intended to be carried on for the benefit of the community rather than its members. As to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16; and as to the meanings of 'company limited by shares', 'company limited by guarantee' and 'private company' see PARA 102. As to Community interest companies see PARA 82 et seq.

There is no definitive authority for what constitutes 'trade'. The balance of authority indicates that 'trade' is a wider term than 'business' (see eg Re a Debtor (No 3 of 1926) [1927] 1 Ch 97, [1926] All ER Rep 337, CA; Re a Debtor (No 490 of 1935) [1936] Ch 237, CA), although it has been equated with 'business' (see Grainger & Son v Gough [1896] AC 325 at 343, HL, per Lord Morris). 'Business' is an occupation or duty which requires attention (Rolls v Miller (1884) 27 ChD 71 at 88, CA, per Lindley LJ) whether or not this involves economic activity or any profit or gain (Rael-Brook Ltd v Minister of Housing and Local Government [1967] 2 QB 65, [1967] 1 All ER 262). 'Gain' is not limited to pecuniary gain or confined to commercial profits only; and a company is formed for the acquisition of gain if it is formed to acquire something, as distinguished from a company formed for spending something: Re Arthur Average Association for British, Foreign and Colonial Ships, ex p Hargrove & Co (28 April 1875, unreported) per Jessel MR, cited in Re Arthur Average Association for British, Foreign and Colonial Ships, ex p Hargrove & Co (1875) 10 Ch App 542 at 546n, 547n. Business is 'carried on' only where there is a joint relation of persons for the common purpose of performing jointly a succession of acts, and not where the relation exists for a purpose which is to be completed by the performance of one act: Smith v Anderson (1880) 15 ChD 247, CA (overruling Sykes v Beadon (1879) 11 ChD 170); Dominion Iron and Steel Co Ltd v Invernairn [1927] WN 277. See also IRC v Marine Steam Turbine Co Ltd [1920] 1 KB 193, 12 TC 174 ('carrying on' business is not merely a question of whether there is business involved in what people are doing; the word 'business' means an active occupation or profession continually carried on). Business can be carried on where a company is still continuing to solicit for a particular type of work and retains the capacity to resume work of that kind were it given the opportunity so to do, even though that type of work is not presently being carried out: Pamment v Sutton (1998) Times, 15 December.

A single individual may, if he wishes, carry on business under the style of 'Such and such Company', but he does not thereby become a 'company'. The use of other stylings, which include the forms 'plc' or 'limited' as the last word, is prohibited unless certain conditions are met: see PARA 225. As to structures that might be used as an alternative to the registered company for the conduct of business see PARA 4.

2 As to the meaning of 'company' for the purposes of the Companies Acts see PARA 24. As to companies formed and registered under the Companies Act 2006, and the different forms that a company may take, see PARA 72 et seq. It is possible for a company, whether registered under the Companies Acts or not, to be illegally formed, in which case its existence is not recognised in law: see PARA 106 et seq.

3 The long title of the Companies Act 2006 states that it is an 'Act to reform company law and restate the greater part of the enactments relating to companies'. It is the successor to various earlier statutes which from time to time made general provision for companies to be established with a legal status and personality of their own ('incorporation') by means of registration with the registrar of companies: see PARAS 10-13. As to the meaning of 'registrar of companies' see PARA 131 note 2. Increasingly, incorporation by registration replaced the previous practice which had required the obtaining of a special Act of Parliament or a royal charter (see head (2) in the text): see PARA 10 note 1. As to the development of companies legislation leading up to the Companies Act 1985, and the review of company law which led to the Companies Act 2006 as enacted, see PARAS 14-16.

4 See PARAS 2, 121. The directors owe any fiduciary duties to the company, not to its members (whether treated as individuals or as a class or as a body): see PARA 532 et seq. Statute also imposes a duty on directors to have regard to the interests of the company's employees: see PARA 544.

5 For the purposes of the Companies Acts, 'body corporate' and 'corporation' include a body incorporated outside the United Kingdom, but do not include a corporation sole, or a partnership that, whether or not a legal person, is not regarded as a body corporate under the law by which it is governed: Companies Act 2006 s 1173(1). As to corporations sole see CORPORATIONS vol 9(2) (2006 Reissue) PARAS 1111, 1112. As to the legal personality of a partnership or firm generally see PARTNERSHIP vol 79 (2008) PARA 2. As to companies and corporations see further PARA 2.

In any Act, unless the contrary intention appears, 'United Kingdom' means Great Britain and Northern Ireland: Interpretation Act 1978 s 5, Sch 1. Neither the Isle of Man nor the Channel Islands are within the United Kingdom: see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 3. 'Great Britain' means England, Scotland and Wales: Union with Scotland Act 1706, preamble art I; Interpretation Act 1978 s 22(1), Sch 2 para 5(a). 'England' means, subject to any alteration of the boundaries of local government areas, the areas consisting of the counties established by the Local Government Act 1972 s 1 (see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARAS 5, 24), and Greater London and the Isles of Scilly: see the Interpretation Act 1978 s 5, Sch 1. As to local government areas in England see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 22 et seq; and as to boundary changes see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 54 et seq. As to Greater London see LONDON GOVERNMENT vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 29. 'Wales' means the combined areas of the counties created by the Local Government Act 1972 s 20 (as originally enacted) (see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARAS 5, 37), but subject to any alteration made under s 73 (consequential alteration of boundary following alteration of watercourse: see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 69 (2009) PARA 90): see the Interpretation Act 1978 Sch 1 (definition substituted by the Local Government (Wales) Act 1994 s 1(3), Sch 2 para 9). See further CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARAS 3, 41.

6 As to the general nature of building societies see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 50 (2008) PARA 1856.

7 As to the nature of industrial and provident societies see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 50 (2008) PARA 2394. Such societies are normally described as 'limited': see the Industrial and Provident Societies Act 1965 s 5(2); and FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 50 (2008) PARA 2439.

8 Companies created by royal charter fall within the provisions of the Companies Act 2006 that apply to 'unregistered companies': see s 1043; and PARA 1165. See also PARA 3.

9 When a corporation has been incorporated by an Act of Parliament, the Act becomes the charter of the corporation, declaring its rights and powers and prescribing its duties and obligations: see CORPORATIONS vol 9(2) (2006 Reissue) PARA 1145. Incorporation by special Act of Parliament was formerly much used, particularly where the company was intended to provide services of a quasi-public nature. (Most such corporations were dissolved in consequence of the nationalisation of their undertakings, eg by the Transport Act 1947 in the case of railway and canal companies, although some still survive). This method of incorporation is now rare: see CORPORATIONS vol 9(2) (2006 Reissue) PARA 1143 et seq; and see PARA 2 note 9. Companies created by special Act of Parliament are regulated by the Companies Clauses Acts (see PARAS 1667-1823) rather than by the Companies Acts.

10 The British Broadcasting Corporation is a body incorporated by royal charter: see TELECOMMUNICATIONS AND BROADCASTING vol 45(1) (2005 Reissue) PARA 306.

11 See the Office of Communications Act 2002 s 1; and TELECOMMUNICATIONS vol 97 (2010) PARA 2.

12 See the Greater London Authority Act 1999 s 154; and LONDON GOVERNMENT vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 269 et seq.

13 See the Coal Industry Act 1994 s 1, Sch 1; and MINES, MINERALS AND QUARRIES vol 31 (2003 Reissue) PARA 52 et seq.

14 See the Police Reform Act 2002 s 9; and POLICE vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 316 et seq.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/1. INTRODUCTION/(1) IN GENERAL/2. Companies and corporations.

2. Companies and corporations.

A company may be either incorporated (that is, a body corporate with perpetual succession¹) or unincorporated². An incorporated company is recognised by the law as having a personality which is distinct from the separate personalities of the members of the company in question³. An unincorporated company has no such separate existence and it is not in law an entity distinguishable from its members⁴.

Corporations may be classified according to their method of creation or by their nature and purpose⁵. By number, most corporations are formed for the purpose of securing a profit for their members, either by trading or by the holding of investments or other property, and are incorporated under the Companies Acts or one of the other statutes authorising the creation of corporate status by registration⁶. Although there are still a few privately owned trading corporations incorporated by royal charter⁷, and a number of such corporations incorporated by special Act of Parliament⁸, corporations formed for the profit of their members are no longer formed by these methods⁹. Corporations formed for public purposes are usually incorporated by public general Act of Parliament¹⁰. Incorporation by royal charter is now in practice limited to institutions such as universities and the principal scientific, cultural, professional or charitable organisations. Other organisations of these kinds are incorporated under the Companies Acts if they desire to have corporate status.

1 As to the meaning of 'body corporate' under the Companies Acts see PARA 1 note 5; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16. As to the creation of corporations generally see CORPORATIONS vol 9(2) (2006 Reissue) PARA 1128 et seq.

3 See the Companies Act 2006 s 16(2), (3); and PARA 120.

4 A company which is neither a corporation nor a partnership is a thing unknown to the common law: see Macintyre v Connell (1851) 1 Sim NS 225 at 233. As to unincorporated companies see PARA 3.

5 See CORPORATIONS vol 9(2) (2006 Reissue) PARA 1101 et seq.

8 See PARA 1 note 9.

9 A private Act of Parliament may sometimes be obtained to facilitate the merger of existing corporations by constituting one corporation the 'universal successor' (ie successor to the liabilities as well as the assets) of one or more other corporations: see eg the National Westminster Bank Act 1969, passed in connection with the merger of the National Provincial Bank Ltd and the Westminster Bank Ltd into the National Westminster Bank Ltd (which had itself been incorporated under the Companies Act 1948).

10 See PARA 1. In a few cases corporations having public functions of a local nature may be incorporated by local Act of Parliament: see eg the Chichester Harbour Conservancy, incorporated by the Chichester Harbour Conservancy Act 1971.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/1. INTRODUCTION/(1) IN GENERAL/3. Unincorporated companies and companies formed by royal charter.

3. Unincorporated companies and companies formed by royal charter.

Despite having origins which predate all the Companies Acts legislation, unincorporated companies and companies formed by royal charter remain as lawful company associations.

Notwithstanding the repeal of the Chartered Companies Act 1837 and the Chartered Companies Act 1884¹, the power of Her Majesty to grant a charter of incorporation of limited duration or to extend or renew such a charter or privileges of such a charter is not affected².

However, few, if any, unincorporated companies that were in existence before 2 November 1862³ now remain⁴.

1 le the Chartered Companies Act 1837 and the Chartered Companies Act 1884 (both repealed by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 1993 s 1(1), Sch 1 Pt V).

2 See the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 1993 s 1(2), Sch 2 para 11.

3 le the date when the Companies Act 1862 (see PARA 10) came into full operation: see s 2 (repealed).

4 Unincorporated companies were usually formed under deeds of settlement setting out the company's objects and constitution. The question sometimes arose as to whether such companies had power to transfer the whole of their undertaking to new companies: see Re Era Assurance Co, Williams' Case, Anchor Case (1860) 30 LJ Ch 137; Kearns v Leaf (1864) 1 Hem & M 681; Doman's Case (1876) 3 ChD 21, CA; Re Argus Life Assurance Co (1888) 39 ChD 571.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/1. INTRODUCTION/(1) IN GENERAL/4. Alternative structures to the registered company.

4. Alternative structures to the registered company.

The structure of a company registered under the Companies Acts¹ may not be appropriate for the conduct of a particular business². Alternative structures for a business include:

- 3 (1) a sole trader³;
- 4 (2) a firm or partnership⁴;
- 5 (3) a limited partnership⁵; and
- 6 (4) a limited liability partnership⁶.

One significant difference between a partnership and a company is that, in general, apart from the exceptions listed under heads (3) and (4) above, a partnership does not confer limited liability on the partners⁷.

1 As to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16. As to companies formed and registered under the Companies Acts see PARA 102 et seq.

2 As to the legal effect on a company of incorporation under the Companies Acts see PARA 120.

3 le an individual who is carrying on business and is not in partnership with any other person. As to the meaning of 'carry on business' generally see PARA 1 note 1. The stated policy objectives for the review of company law that led to the passing of the Companies Act 2006 included making the administrative burden for small private companies, which constituted the bulk of the number of companies formed and registered in the United Kingdom, lighter and more appropriate to their needs (the 'Think Small First' approach): see HM Government's White Paper Modernising Company Law (Cm 5553) (2002); and White Paper Company Law Reform (Cm 6456) (2005). Accordingly, the requirement for private companies to have a company secretary is abolished (see the Companies Act 2006 s 270; and PARA 601) and private companies may take decisions by means of written resolution, the need for Annual General Meetings (AGMs) having become optional (see s 288; and PARA 623). The Companies Act 2006 also provides for a single person to form a public company: see s 7; and PARA 102. As to the meanings of 'public company' and 'private company' see PARA 102.

4 As to the meanings of 'firm' and 'partnership' see PARTNERSHIP vol 79 (2008) PARA 1; and as to the legal personality of a partnership or firm generally see PARTNERSHIP vol 79 (2008) PARA 2.

5 le a partnership formed under the Limited Partnerships Act 1907 which allows a limited partner's liability to the creditors of the firm to be strictly limited: see PARTNERSHIP vol 79 (2008) PARA 218 et seq. See also the Legislative Reform (Limited Partnerships) Order 2009, SI 2009/1940, which clarifies some uncertainties about the application of the Limited Partnerships Act 1907, principally regarding the process for registration of limited partnerships by the registrar of companies.

6 le a body corporate, with legal personality separate from that of its members, which is governed primarily by the Limited Liability Partnerships Act 2000, the Limited Liability Partnerships Regulations 2001, SI 2001/1090, and the Limited Liability Partnerships (No 2) Regulations 2002, SI 2002/913: see PARTNERSHIP vol 79 (2008) PARA 234 et seq. As to the application of certain company law provisions to limited liability partnerships see PARA 30.

7 See PARTNERSHIP vol 79 (2008) PARA 3.

NOTE 6--SI 2002/913 revoked: SI 2009/1804.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/1. INTRODUCTION/(1) IN GENERAL/5. European companies.

5. European companies.

A small, but increasing, number of EC regulations provides for new forms of trading entity to be formed whose legal personality is recognised by all member states¹. For the purposes of making further provision in relation to these EC regulations, Parliament makes secondary legislation, some of whose provisions typically apply relevant sections of the Companies Acts² to these structures, notably in relation to their formation and registration, but also in relation to other subjects for which provision is required under the parent EC regulation³. The following structures have been provided for under EC Regulations:

- 7 (1) European Economic Interest Grouping⁴;
- 8 (2) European Company (Societas Europaea)⁵; and a proposal for a regulation on the Statute for a European Private Company (Societas Privata Europaea) has been made⁶.

1 As to EC regulations that have relevance to company law generally see PARA 22.

2 As to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

3 Subjects such as accounts or employee participation are sometimes specifically provided for in the parent EC regulation. As to formation and registration under the Companies Acts see PARA 102 et seq.

4 See EC Council Regulation 2137/85 of 25 July 1985 (OJ L199, 31.07.1985, p 1) on the European Economic Interest Grouping (EEIG); and PARA 1631. The EEIG provides a vehicle for smaller commercial undertakings to cooperate with others from different member states in the European Union, and to provide common support activities for members with unlimited liability, by pooling resources or skills to the benefit of the group, and by allowing for the development of academic or technical advancements that would not have been achievable by individual concerns acting alone. For the purposes of making further provision in relation to this regulation, the European Economic Interest Grouping Regulations 1989, SI 1989/638, and the Registrar of Companies (Fees) (European Economic Interest Grouping and European Public Limited-Liability Company) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2403, have been made: see PARA 1632. From the date of registration of an EEIG in the United Kingdom, an EEIG is a body corporate: see the European Economic Interest Grouping Regulations 1989, SI 1989/638, reg 3; and PARA 1632. As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 1 note 5.

5 See EC Council Regulation 2157/2001 (OJ L294, 10.11.2001, p 1) on the Statute for a European Company; and PARA 1633 et seq. See also EC Council Directive 2001/86 (OJ L294, 10.11.2001, p 22) supplementing the Statute for a European Company with regard to the involvement of employees. For the purposes of implementing the Directive, and for making further provision in relation to the Regulation, the European Public Limited-Liability Company Regulations 2004, SI 2004/2326, the European Public Limited-Liability Company (Employee Involvement) (Great Britain) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2401, and the Registrar of Companies (Fees) (European Economic Interest Grouping and European Public Limited-Liability Company) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2403, have been made: see PARAS 1637, 1639. A European Company is a form of public limited-liability company and it has legal personality: see EC Council Regulation 2157/2001 (OJ L294, 10.11.2001, p 1) art 1; and PARA 1633.

6 The European Private Company Statute (Societas Privata Europaea) is intended to provide for a limited liability private company with its own legal personality. Currently, the European Private Company Statute exists as a proposal only (see Proposal for a Council Regulation on the Statute for a European private company (Brussels, COM(2008) 396/3)) but with a target implementation date of mid-2010.

(2) SECRETARY OF STATE

6. The Secretary of State.

In any enactment, 'Secretary of State' means one of Her Majesty's principal Secretaries of State¹. The office of Secretary of State is a unified office, and in law each Secretary of State is capable of performing the functions of all or any of them².

For the purposes of the Companies Acts³, the powers of the Secretary of State are exercised in practice by the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills⁴. However, provision is made for certain statutory functions of the Secretary of State to be contracted out or formally delegated and this power has been exercised by the Secretary of State in relation to certain of his powers under the Companies Acts⁵.

Except as otherwise provided, or the context otherwise requires, the provisions of the Companies Act 2006 extend to the whole of the United Kingdom⁶.

1 See the Interpretation Act 1978 s 5, Sch 1.

2 See CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 355.

3 As to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

4 The Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills Order 2009, SI 2009/2748, came into force on 13 November 2009 (see art 1); and provided for the functions of the Secretary of State for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform, and for the functions of the Secretary of State for Innovation, Universities and Skills, to be transferred to the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills (see art 4). As to the corresponding transfers of property, rights and liabilities see art 5; as to the incorporation of the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills see art 3; and as to other supplemental provision see arts 6, 7. The responsibilities entrusted to the Secretary of State for Business, Innovation and Skills were described in a press notice issued by the Prime Minister's Office on 5 June 2009, which was referred to in the Prime Minister's written statement to Parliament: see 494 HC Official Report (6th series), 18 June 2009, written ministerial statements col 452W.

6 See the Companies Act 2006 s 1299; and PARA 29.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/1. INTRODUCTION/(2) SECRETARY OF STATE/7. Functions of the Secretary of State subject to contracting out and delegation.

7. Functions of the Secretary of State subject to contracting out and delegation.

The numerous functions of the Secretary of State¹ in relation to the formation and supervision of companies are considered elsewhere in this title².

Any function of the Secretary of State which is conferred by or under any enactment and which, by virtue of any enactment or rule of law, may be exercised by an officer of his and which is not otherwise excluded³ may, if the Secretary of State by order so provides, be exercised by, or by employees of, such person (if any) as may be authorised in that behalf by the Secretary of State⁴.

Such an order may provide that any function to which it applies may be exercised, and an authorisation given by virtue of such an order may, subject to the provisions of the order, authorise the exercise of such a function⁵:

- 9 (1) either wholly or to such extent as may be specified in the order or authorisation⁶;
- 10 (2) either generally or in such cases or areas as may be so specified⁷; and
- 11 (3) either unconditionally or subject to the fulfilment of such conditions as may be so specified⁸.

An authorisation given by virtue of such an order:

- 12 (a) must be for such period, not exceeding ten years, as is specified in the authorisation⁹;
- 13 (b) may be revoked at any time by the Secretary of State¹⁰; and
- 14 (c) must not prevent the Secretary of State or any other person from exercising the function to which the authorisation relates¹¹.

Where by virtue of such an order a person is authorised to exercise any function of the Secretary of State¹², anything done or omitted to be done by or in relation to the authorised person (or an employee of his) in, or in connection with, the exercise or purported exercise of the function is to be treated for all purposes as done or omitted to be done¹³ by or in relation to the Secretary of State in his capacity as such¹⁴. However, this provision does not apply¹⁵:

- 15 (i) for the purposes of so much of any contract made between an authorised person and the Secretary of State as relates to the exercise of the function¹⁶; or
- 16 (ii) for the purposes of any criminal proceedings brought in respect of anything done or omitted to be done by the authorised person (or any employee of his)¹⁷.

Where by virtue of such an order a person is authorised to exercise any function of the Secretary of State¹⁸ and the order or authorisation is revoked at a time when a relevant contract¹⁹ is subsisting²⁰, the authorised person is entitled to treat the relevant contract as repudiated by the Secretary of State (and not as frustrated by reason of the revocation)²¹.

1 As to the Secretary of State generally see PARA 6.

2 See PARA 24 et seq.

3 Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994 s 69(1). The text refers to any function which is not otherwise excluded from s 69 by s 71: see s 69(1). A function is excluded by s 69 if:

- 1 (1) its exercise would constitute the exercise of jurisdiction of any court or of any tribunal which exercises the judicial power of the state (s 71(1)(a)); or
- 2 (2) its exercise, or a failure to exercise it, would necessarily interfere with or otherwise affect the liberty of any individual (s 71(1)(b)); or
- 3 (3) it is a power or right of entry, search or seizure into or of any property (s 71(1)(c)); or
- 4 (4) it is a power or duty to make subordinate legislation (s 71(1)(d)).

The provisions of s 71(1)(b), (c) (see heads (2), (3) above) do not exclude any function of the official receiver attached to any court: s 71(2). As to the official receiver see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 503 et seq.

4 Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994 s 69(2). In exercise of the powers so conferred the Secretary of State has made the Contracting Out (Functions in relation to the Registration of Companies) Order 1995, SI 1995/1013, art 5, Sch 3: see PARA 8. As to contracting out the functions of the registrar of companies see PARAS 133-134. 8. Contracted out functions of the Secretary of State; delegated functions.

Any function of the Secretary of State¹ which is listed in any of heads (1) to (3) below may be exercised by, or by employees of, such person (if any) as may be authorised in that behalf by the Secretary of State²:

- 17 (1) functions conferred by or under the following provisions of the Companies Acts:
 1. (a) those³ relating to the prohibition on registration of certain names except with the approval of the Secretary of State⁴;
 2. (b) those⁵ relating to the extension by the Secretary of State of the period allowed for laying and delivering accounts and reports⁶;
 3. (c) those⁷ relating to the extension of the period for delivering accounts and reports of an overseas company⁸;
 - 18 (2) functions conferred⁹ relating to the prohibition of use of certain business names¹⁰;
 - 19 (3) functions as conferred under head (2) above¹¹ but as applied¹² to European Economic Interest Groupings¹³.

In addition, most of the functions of the Secretary of State relating to statutory auditors which have been conferred by or under the Companies Act 2006¹⁴ have been transferred to the Professional Oversight Board established under the articles of association of the Financial Reporting Council Limited¹⁵.

(3) THE STATUTORY FRAMEWORK

(i) In general

9. The statutory framework.

The main piece of legislation governing company law currently is the Companies Act 2006¹. Although some statutes were repealed as a consequence of this Act, and although most of the provisions of the predecessor Companies Act 1985 are restated therein, the 2006 Act itself was not considered to be properly a consolidating measure², and provision continues to be made under earlier Acts in relation to certain discrete areas of the law, such as company investigations³, orders imposing restrictions on shares following an investigation⁴, and community interest companies⁵. Other measures which are not considered to fall within the strict purview of company law also continue to be relevant and are discussed in this title, most pertinently those surviving provisions of the Companies Act 1989 which confer powers to require information and documents to assist overseas regulatory authorities⁶, and those provisions of the Companies (Audit Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 which govern the supervision of accounts and reports⁷ and bodies concerned with professional accounting standards⁸.

Other notable pieces of legislation related to company law which are discussed in this title concern the disqualification of persons from being directors of companies or otherwise concerned with a company's affairs⁹, the criminal offence of insider dealing¹⁰, and insolvency matters¹¹.

Since 1986, there has been a growing body of primary and secondary legislation (supplemented by significant non-statutory rules) governing financial markets and securities regulation¹². These matters had previously been dealt with primarily under companies legislation but they now constitute a separate (albeit still related) area of law, which develops along its own path, with boundaries between the two areas continuing to shift¹³.

1 See PARA 24 et seq. As to legislation that applies when a company is not registered under the Companies Act 2006 see PARA 1. The statutory scheme based upon the Companies Act 2006 relies to a certain extent on HM Government's definition of what is and what is not a 'company law' provision: see PARA 16. Only the Companies Act 2006 Pts 1-39 (ss 1-1181), and Pts 45-47 (ss 1284-1300) so far as they apply for the purposes of Pts 1-39, are 'company law' provisions according to this definition. (See also the definition of the 'Companies Acts' in the Companies Act 2006 s 2 (cited in PARA 16)). It follows that Pts 40-44 (ss 1182-1283) do not constitute 'company law' provisions in these terms, despite lying within the 2006 Act. Parts 40-44 make provision in the following areas:

- 5 (1) company directors subject to foreign disqualification (see Pt 40 (ss 1182-1191); and PARAS 1617-1621);
- 6 (2) business names (see Pt 41 (ss 1192-1208); and PARAS 223-226);
- 7 (3) statutory auditors (see Pt 42 (ss 1209-1264); and PARA 957 et seq);
- 8 (4) transparency obligations (see Pt 43 (ss 1265-1273); PARA 23; and FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 415 et seq); and
- 9 (5) miscellaneous matters (see Pt 44 (ss 1274-1283), mostly amending provisions).

Conversely, although the provisions mentioned in the text and notes 3-5 lie outside the Companies Act 2006, they continue to constitute 'company law' provisions under the current statutory scheme. Further to head (1) above, the equivalent domestic provisions are contained in the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 (see the text and note 9; and PARA 1578 et seq).

2 The long title of the Companies Act 2006 states that it is an 'Act to reform company law and restate the greater part of the enactments relating to companies'. See also PARA 16.

3 Ie the Companies Act 1985 Pt XIV (ss 431-453D): see PARA 1541 et seq. Although these provisions can apply to bodies other than companies, they are still regarded as company law provisions under the statutory scheme mentioned in note 1. As to the meaning of 'company law provisions' for these purposes see PARA 16 note 6.

4 Ie the Companies Act 1985 Pt XV (ss 454-457): see PARAS 1548-1550. The Companies Act 2006 ss 797-802 impose similar restrictions to those set out in the Companies Act 1985 ss 454-457: see PARAS 446-449.

5 Ie the Companies (Audit Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 Pt 2 (ss 26-63): see PARA 82 et seq. Note that, although the provisions which govern community interest companies are still regarded as company law provisions under the statutory scheme mentioned in note 1, they are, however, regarded under that scheme as forming a distinct body of regulation which is additional to, and sits alongside, company law rather than forming part of it. The provisions of the Companies Acts, apart from the Companies Act 2006 s 6 (see PARA 82), have effect subject to the Companies (Audit Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 Pt 2: see the Companies Act 2006 s 6(2); and PARA 82.

6 Ie the Companies Act 1989 Pt III (ss 55-91) (overseas regulation): see PARA 1568 et seq. The provisions contained in Pt VII (ss 154-191) (Financial Markets and Insolvency) also are not regarded as company law provisions under the statutory scheme mentioned in note 1 and have not been repealed by the Companies Act 2006: see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 509 et seq.

7 Ie the Companies (Audit Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 ss 14, 15, which allows for the appointment of a body, the Financial Reporting Review Panel (FRRP), to review the accounts of all listed companies, whether Companies Act companies or otherwise, and to review compliance with the accounting requirements of the Listing Rules (as to which see PARA 697 et seq). These provisions are considered to relate more to financial services law than to company law under the statutory scheme mentioned in note 1. As to the Financial Services Authority's Listing Rules see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 385.

8 Ie the Companies (Audit Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 ss 16, 17: see PARA 699. Because these provisions govern the operation and funding of the Financial Reporting Council (FRC), Accounting Standards Board (ASB), and the Financial Reporting Review Panel (FRRP), rather than the conduct of companies generally, they are not regarded as company law provisions under the statutory scheme mentioned in note 1.

9 Ie the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986: see PARA 1578 et seq.

10 Ie the Criminal Justice Act 1993 Pt V (ss 52-64): see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE.

11 Ie matters governed by the Insolvency Act 1986: see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 reissue) PARA 1 et seq.

12 The parallel development of financial markets and securities law led to the enactment of the Financial Services Act 1986 (repealed) (see now the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000, especially Pt VI (ss 72-103) (Official Listing); and FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 385 et seq).

13 See PARA 1066 et seq. The provisions about the FRRP (see the text and notes 7-8) are regarded as relating more to financial services law than to company law under the statutory scheme mentioned in note 1 but are discussed in this title: see PARA 697 et seq. Many developments in company law and in financial services and securities regulation have their origin in EC legislative programmes: see PARA 19 et seq.

(ii) Historical Development of Companies Legislation prior to 1985

10. The Companies Act 1862.

Such of the earlier statutes as were then in force were repealed by the Companies Act 1862¹, but this repeal did not affect the incorporation of any company registered under any Act so repealed².

The Companies Act 1862 governed all companies registered after 2 November 1862³, until 1 April 1909⁴, and its provisions (except Table A) also applied to companies formed and registered, or registered but not formed, under the Joint Stock Companies Acts⁵, or any of them, as if they had been formed and registered under that Act (as companies limited by shares or unlimited as the case might be) with the necessary qualifications as to reference to the date of registration, and as to the power of altering Table B of the Joint Stock Companies Act 1856⁶.

The Companies Act 1862 permitted registration under the Act of every then existing company (including those registered under the Joint Stock Companies Acts) consisting of seven or more members, and any company thereafter formed in pursuance of any Act (except the Companies Act 1862) or letters patent, or being a company working mines within and subject to the stannaries jurisdiction, or being otherwise duly constituted by law, and consisting of seven or more members⁷. The registration might be with unlimited liability, or with liability limited by shares or by guarantee; and the registration might take place with a view to the company being wound up⁸. This enactment was subject to certain exceptions and regulations⁹ practically identical with the exceptions and regulations in regard to the power for existing companies to register under the Companies Act 2006¹⁰.

Restrictions on the formation of new companies, associations or partnerships for the purpose of carrying on business for gain without being registered under the Act were imposed by the Companies Act 1862¹¹. Similar provisions imposed by the Companies Act 1985 have since been repealed¹².

1 Companies Act 1862 s 205, Sch 3 (repealed). The earlier Acts include: (1) An Act to Regulate Joint Stock Companies (1844); (2) An Act to Regulate Joint Stock Banks in England (1844); (3) the Limited Liability Act 1855; (4) the Joint Stock Companies Act 1856; (5) the Joint Stock Companies Act 1857; (6) the Joint Stock Banking Companies Act 1857; (7) the Joint Stock Companies Amendment Act 1858; (8) An Act to enable Joint Stock Banking Companies to be formed on the principle of Limited Liability (1858) (all repealed). The Joint Stock Companies Act of 1844 (see head (1) above) introduced the concept that all new businesses of a certain size were to be set up as companies with a legal status and personality of their own (rather than as conventional partnerships), ie to be 'incorporated', and that incorporation was to be accomplished by means of registration (rather than by Act of Parliament or royal charter) with the Registrar of Companies. The Limited Liability Act of 1855 (see head (3) above) introduced the concept of limited liability for shareholders. Other statutes (collectively referred to as the Companies Clauses Acts) contain provisions that remain generally applicable to companies incorporated by special statutes for public purposes and these are considered in PARA 1667 et seq.

11. Legislation between 1908 and 1929.

The Companies Act 1862 was amended by subsequent statutes, and was, with those statutes, repealed by the Companies (Consolidation) Act 1908, which incorporated most of their provisions. That Act was amended by the Companies Act 1913, the Companies (Particulars as to Directors) Act 1917 and the Companies Act 1928, and on 1 November 1929 those Acts were in their turn repealed and consolidated, together with certain other enactments, by the Companies Act 1929¹. The Companies Act 1929, and all subsequent companies legislation until the advent of the Companies Act 2006, extended to Great Britain only².

1 The provisions of various enactments, including the Companies Act 1929, were later consolidated by the Companies Act 1948: see PARA 12.

2 As to the geographical extent of the Companies Acts see PARA 29. As to the meaning of 'Great Britain' see PARA 1 note 5.

12. Legislation of 1947.

The Companies Act 1929 was itself substantially amended by the Companies Act 1947¹, a few sections of which were brought into force on 1 December 1947². The remainder of the Companies Act 1947 came into force on 1 July 1948³, only to be almost wholly repealed and replaced by the Companies Act 1948⁴, which came into operation on the same day⁵. The Companies Act 1948 consolidated many of the earlier provisions.

13. Legislation between 1948 and 1985.

The Companies Act 1948 was substantially amended by Part I of the Companies Act 1967¹, which came into force at various dates between 27 October 1967 and 27 July 1968². Meanwhile, the concept of a floating charge was for the first time introduced into the law of Scotland by the Companies (Floating Charges) (Scotland) Act 1961³. The 1948 and 1961 Acts and Part I of and Schedules 1 to 4 to the 1967 Act were collectively referred to as the Companies Acts 1948 to 1967⁴. The Companies (Floating Charges) (Scotland) Act 1961 was repealed and replaced by the Companies (Floating Charges and Receivers) (Scotland) Act 1972. The European Communities Act 1972⁵ contained provisions implementing the First EC Council Directive on company law⁶. The Stock Exchange (Completion of Bargains) Act 1976, which was passed mainly to facilitate the adoption of a computerised settlement and stock transfer system, affected the procedures relating to the issue of certificates and the maintenance of registers and other records. The Insolvency Act 1976 provided for the disqualification of directors in certain circumstances from the management of companies⁷. The general law of companies was again amended, principally in relation to accounts, disclosure of interests in shares and disqualification orders, by the Companies Act 1976 which came into force at various dates between 24 January 1977 and 1 January 1985⁸. The Companies Act 1948, Parts I and III of the Companies Act 1967, the Companies (Floating Charges and Receivers) (Scotland) Act 1972, the European Communities Act 1972⁹, the Stock Exchange (Completion of Bargains) Act 1976¹⁰, the Insolvency Act 1976¹¹, and the Companies Act 1976 were collectively referred to as the Companies Acts 1948 to 1976¹².

The Companies Act 1980 was intended mainly to implement the Second EC Council Directive on company law¹³, in so far as not previously enacted. The 1980 Act regulated the formation of public companies, and provided for the maintenance of their capitals. It also dealt with the duties of directors and conflicts of interest, and made insider dealing a criminal offence. It came into force at various dates between 23 June 1980 and 1 October 1983¹⁴. The Companies Acts 1948 to 1980 comprised the Acts cited as the Companies Acts 1948 to 1976 together with the 1980 Act¹⁵.

The Companies Act 1981 was intended mainly to implement the Fourth EC Council Directive on company law¹⁶. It dealt with the form and content of company accounts. It also dealt with company and business names, share capital and the disclosure of interests in voting shares in public companies. It came into force at various dates between 1 January 1984 and 1 January 1985¹⁷. The Acts cited as the Companies Acts 1948 to 1980 together with the 1981 Act¹⁸ were known as the Companies Acts 1948 to 1981¹⁹. With a view to facilitating the consolidation of the Companies Acts, the Companies Act 1981²⁰ contained novel provisions offering an alternative to the normal parliamentary procedure applicable to consolidation bills²¹. It was provided that Her Majesty might, by Order in Council, make such amendments of the Companies Acts²² and of any other enactment relating to companies, whenever passed, as might be jointly recommended by the Law Commission and the Scottish Law Commission as desirable to enable a satisfactory consolidation of the whole or the greater part of the Companies Acts to be produced²³. Such an Order in Council could not be made unless a draft of the Order had been laid before and approved by a resolution of each House of Parliament²⁴; nor would it come into force unless there was passed either a single Act consolidating the whole or the greater part of the Companies Acts (with or without other enactments relating to companies) or a group of two or more Acts which between them consolidated the whole or the greater part of those Acts (with or without other enactments so relating)²⁵. If such an Act or group of Acts was passed, the Order would come into force on the day on which that Act or group of Acts came into force²⁶. Pursuant to the consolidation provisions, two Orders in Council were made²⁷ amending the Companies Acts 1948 to 1983²⁸, thus paving the way for their consolidation²⁹.

The Stock Transfer Act 1982 contained minor amendments of the Companies Act 1948 relating to transfers³⁰; and the Employment Act 1982 amended the Companies Act 1967³¹ in relation to the contents of the directors' report concerning the involvement of employees in the affairs of the company³².

The Companies (Beneficial Interests) Act 1983, which came into force on 26 July 1983³³, dealt with the beneficial interest of companies in shares. That Act, and the Companies Acts 1948 to 1981, were cited together as the Companies Acts 1948 to 1983³⁴.

(iii) The Consolidating Legislation of 1985

14. The consolidating legislation of 1985.

The consolidating legislation of 1985¹ consisted of four Acts, which all came into force on 1 July 1985²:

- 20 (1) the Companies Act 1985, which consolidated the main provisions of earlier companies legislation³;
- 21 (2) the Company Securities (Insider Dealing) Act 1985⁴;
- 22 (3) the Business Names Act 1985⁵; and
- 23 (4) the Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985, which made provision for transitional matters and savings, repeals (including, in accordance with the recommendations of the Law Commission⁶, the repeal of certain provisions of the Companies Act 1948 which were no longer of practical utility)⁷ and consequential amendment of other Acts.

No repeal brought about by this consolidation affected the incorporation of any company registered or re-registered under the former Companies Acts⁸. Most such companies, as well as any company formed and registered under the Companies Act 2006, are now regulated by that Act⁹.

1 As to preparations made for the consolidation of the Companies Acts see PARA 13.

2 See the Companies Act 1985 s 746 (prospectively repealed); the Company Securities (Insider Dealing) Act 1985 s 18 (repealed) (see note 4); the Business Names Act 1985 s 10 (repealed) (see note 5); and the Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 s 34.

3 The Companies Act 1985 was passed to consolidate the Companies Acts 1948 to 1983 (see PARA 13) other than the provisions dealing with insider dealing (see head (2) in the text) and business names (see head (3) in the text). As to the effect of the consolidation on the incorporation of any company registered or re-registered under any repealed enactment see the text and notes 8-9. As to the Acts which may be cited as the 'Companies Acts 1948 to 1983' see PARA 13.

4 The Company Securities (Insider Dealing) Act 1985 has been repealed and replaced by the Criminal Justice Act 1993 Pt V (ss 52-64) (see PARA 15; and see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE): see the Criminal Justice Act 1993 s 79(14), Sch 6 Pt I.

5 See the Business Names Act 1985 (repealed): see now the Companies Act 2006 Pt 5 (ss 53-85), Pt 41 (ss 1192-1208); and PARA 196 et seq.

7 See the Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 ss 28, 29, Sch 1 (s 28 repealed). So much of the Companies Act 1967 Pt II (ss 58-108) (insurance companies) as was then unrepealed was left outstanding: see the Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 Sch 1.

8 See the Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 s 31(8)(a); and PARA 17. For these purposes, the 'former Companies Acts' means the Joint Stock Companies Acts, the Companies Act 1862, the Companies (Consolidation) Act 1908, the Companies Act 1929 and the Companies Acts 1948 to 1983: see the Companies Act 1985 s 735(1)(c) (repealed); Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 s 32. 'Joint Stock Companies Acts' means the Joint Stock Companies Act 1856, the Joint Stock Companies Acts 1856, 1857, the Joint Stock Banking Companies Act 1857 and the Act to enable Joint Stock Banking Companies to be formed on the principle of limited liability, or any one or more of those Acts (as the case may require), but does not include the Joint Stock Companies Act 1844: Companies Act 1985 s 735(3) (repealed).

15. Legislation subsequent to the 1985 consolidation.

Subsequent to the consolidation of company law effected in 1985¹, there was much further legislation of major importance in company law.

The Insolvency Act 1985 was passed on 30 October 1985. Part II of that Act dealt with company insolvency, and substantially altered the provisions of the Companies Act 1985 in relation to winding up, besides introducing an entirely new procedure in the shape of the making of an administration order², and facilitating the making of voluntary arrangements³. It also altered the law relating to receivers, whether appointed in or out of court⁴, and introduced the new concept of an 'administrative receiver'⁵. The Act was directed to be brought into force on such a day as the Secretary of State might, by order made by statutory instrument, appoint, with power for different days to be appointed for different purposes and for different provisions⁶. The Act was brought into effect piecemeal between 1 February and 29 December 1986⁷. It was itself largely repealed by the Insolvency Act 1986⁸, which consolidated the winding-up provisions of the Companies Act 1985 and of the Insolvency Act 1985, and related matters. The Insolvency Act 1986 was directed to come into force on the day appointed for the coming into force of Part III of the Insolvency Act 1985, immediately after that Part of that Act came into force for England and Wales, which proved to be 29 December 1986⁹. The remainder of the Insolvency Act 1985, in so far as it dealt with companies, was concerned with the disqualification of company directors, and the provisions for this were consolidated with the like provisions of the Companies Act 1985 by the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986, which was directed to come into force simultaneously with the Insolvency Act 1986¹⁰.

The Financial Services Act 1986, whose main concern is indicated in its title¹¹, had considerable effect in relation to prospectuses¹², takeover offers¹³, and insider dealing¹⁴. The Act was brought into effect piecemeal from 15 November 1986¹⁵. It has been wholly repealed and replaced by the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000¹⁶, which shares the same focus as its predecessor while introducing some new elements; the provisions most of note for present purposes being those dealing with the official listing of companies¹⁷, the powers to impose penalties for market abuse¹⁸ and powers of enforcement and investigation¹⁹. While some provisions of this Act came into force immediately²⁰, it was provided that the rest should come into force on such day as the Treasury might by order appoint, and that different days might be appointed for different purposes²¹. The Act was brought into effect piecemeal from 25 February 2001²².

The Companies Act 1989 was passed to amend (inter alia) the law relating to company accounts; to make new provision with respect to the persons eligible for appointment as company auditors; to amend the provisions of the Companies Act 1985 and certain other enactments with respect to investigations and powers to obtain information and to confer new powers exercisable to assist overseas regulatory authorities; and to make new provision with respect to the registration of company charges (although these latter provisions were never brought into force)²³. The Act was brought into effect piecemeal from 16 November 1989²⁴.

The Foreign Corporations Act 1991 was passed to make provision about the status in the United Kingdom of bodies incorporated or formerly incorporated under the laws of certain territories outside the United Kingdom²⁵, and came into force on 25 September 1991²⁶; and the Oversea Companies and Credit and Financial Institutions (Branch Disclosure) Regulations 1992²⁷ introduced new provisions relating to the disclosure requirements in respect of branches opened by certain companies in a member state and the publication of annual accounting documents by credit and financial institutions with effect from 1 January 1993²⁸.

Part V of the Criminal Justice Act 1993²⁹ repealed the Company Securities (Insider Dealing) Act 1985 and introduced new provisions relating to insider dealing with effect from 1 March 1994³⁰.

The Insolvency Act 1994 was passed to amend the law relating to contracts of employment adopted by administrators, administrative receivers and certain other receivers³¹ in respect of contracts of employment adopted on or after 15 March 1994³²; and the Insolvency (No 2) Act 1994 was passed to amend the law relating to corporate insolvency and winding up, so far as it concerns the adjustment of certain prior transactions³³, with effect from 26 July 1994³⁴.

The Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994 contains (inter alia) provisions to reduce certain of the burdens affecting the Secretary of State, the registrar of companies and the official receiver³⁵.

The Political Parties, Elections and Referendums Act 2000 made provision for the control of political donations made by companies and for the disclosure of political donations and expenditure in directors' reports³⁶ with effect from 16 February 2001³⁷.

The Insolvency Act 2000 introduced the concept of a company voluntary arrangement with a moratorium³⁸; and it also amended the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 in order to allow the Secretary of State to accept disqualification undertakings³⁹. Most of the provisions of this Act were brought into effect piecemeal from 2 April 2001⁴⁰.

The Enterprise Act 2002 introduced a new regime for administration (replacing Part II of the Insolvency Act 1986⁴¹) as well as making provision in relation to preferential debts and unsecured creditors⁴². Most of the provisions of this Act were brought into effect piecemeal from 18 March 2003⁴³.

(iv) The Reform of Company Law and the Companies Act 2006

16. The Company Law Review and the Companies Act 2006.

Much of the policy that informed what became the Companies Act 2006 had its origins in the Company Law Review, a fundamental review of domestic company law which was conducted under the auspices of the then Department of Trade and Industry between 1998 and 2001¹. Subsequently, proposals for reform were set out in two white papers². The Bill that was introduced in late 2005 to effect these reforms was originally cast as an amending provision³. However, the huge scope of the proposed legislation tested the usual legislative procedures to breaking point and the Companies Act 2006 emerged as a comprehensive (albeit not a definitive) restatement of company law⁴. Although the 2006 Act is not properly a consolidating measure, some statutes are repealed as a consequence and most of the provisions that were previously contained in the Companies Act 1985 are restated in the 2006 Act⁵. Accordingly, for the purposes of the Companies Act 2006, the 'Companies Acts' means: the company law provisions of that Act⁶; Part 2 of the Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004⁷; and the provisions of the Companies Act 1985 and of the Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 that remain in force⁸.

The Companies Act 2006 also made statutory provision for the first time in some new areas: it codifies directors' duties (many of which were previously contained in diffuse case law)⁹ and also provides a statutory basis for derivative actions in some areas¹⁰; it allows auditors to limit their liability¹¹, introduces new reporting requirements to be included in the business review in annual reports¹², recalibrates criminal liability (primarily in respect of how such liability may fall with regard to the company and its officers) and brings in protections for directors and auditors¹³; and facilitates where possible the use of electronic communications¹⁴.

1 The starting point of the Company Law Review (CLR) was the publication of a Consultation Paper called Modern Company Law for a Competitive Economy (March 1998). Its stated aim was to modernise company law in order to provide a simple, efficient and cost-effective framework for British business: see paras 1.1-1.6. The CLR was conducted by a Steering Group (CLRSG) comprising an independent group of experts and practitioners from business, law, commerce, accountancy and academia, with the support of a broadly based Consultative Group. The CLRSG issued various interim recommendations and consultation documents (each covering particular areas of interest) and presented its Final Report on 26 July 2001 (see Modern Company Law: For A Competitive Economy - Final Report (2001) (URN 01/943)).

2 See HM Government's White Paper Modernising Company Law (Cm 5553) (2002), which formed the government's response to the recommendations of the CLRSG (see note 1); and White Paper Company Law Reform (Cm 6456) (2005). Further consultations followed the publication of each of these papers. Some of the Review's recommendations were given legislative effect in the mean time by the Companies (Audit Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 which sought not only to establish a new business form (the community interest company) but also to re-establish confidence in corporate governance and the auditing process in the wake of contemporary corporate scandals (see PARA 82 et seq).

3 The bill had a remarkable legislative history, starting in the House of Lords, where alone there were over 1,400 amendments in Committee and nearly 500 on Report.

4 The long title of the Companies Act 2006 states that it is an 'Act to reform company law and restate the greater part of the enactments relating to companies'.

5 The revised statutory scheme relies to a certain extent on HMG's definition of what is and what is not a pure 'company law' provision. See 686 HL Official Report (5th series), 2 November 2006, col 431 per Lord

Sainsbury ('All the company law provisions of the 1985, 1989 and 2004 Acts have been brought into the Bill, other than the self-standing provisions on community enterprise companies and the provisions on investigations which go wider than companies'). As to the general statutory scheme which is set up thereby see PARA 9. As to the provisions of earlier enactments that are still regarded as company law provisions under this statutory scheme and which have not been repealed see the Companies Act 1985 Pt XIV (ss 431-453D) (cited in PARA 1541 et seq); Pt XV (ss 454-457) (cited in PARAS 1548-1550); and the Companies (Audit Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 Pt 2 (ss 26-63) (cited in PARA 82 et seq), although it should be noted that those provisions of the 2004 Act are regarded as forming a distinct body of regulation which is additional to, and sits alongside, company law rather than forming part of it. The following provisions are not regarded as company law provisions under the statutory scheme and have not been repealed by the Companies Act 2006: the Companies Act 1989 Pt III (ss 55-91) (overseas regulation) (see PARA 1568 et seq); Pt VII (ss 154-191) (Financial Markets and Insolvency) (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 509 et seq); and the Companies (Audit Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 ss 14-17 (cited in PARA 697 et seq). As to the continuity of the law following the enactment of the Companies Act 2006 see PARA 17.

12 See PARA 1421 et seq.

13 See PARA 1622 et seq. The general principle adopted as to whether a company should be liable for a breach of requirements of the Companies Acts is that where the only victims of the offence are the company or its members, the company should not be liable for the offence; on the other hand, where other persons may be victims of the offence, then the company should be potentially liable for a breach, whether or not the offence may also harm the company or its members: see PARA 315.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/1. INTRODUCTION/(3) THE STATUTORY FRAMEWORK/(iv) The Reform of Company Law and the Companies Act 2006/17. Continuity of the law.

17. Continuity of the law.

Subject to any specific transitional provision or saving contained in the Companies Act 2006¹, where any provision of that Act re-enacts (with or without modification) an enactment repealed by that Act², the repeal and re-enactment does not affect the continuity of the law³. Anything done (including subordinate legislation made), or having effect as if done, under or for the purposes of the repealed provision that could have been done under or for the purposes of the corresponding provision of the Companies Act 2006, if in force or effective immediately before the commencement of that corresponding provision, has effect thereafter as if done under or for the purposes of that corresponding provision⁴.

Any reference (express or implied) in the Companies Act 2006 or any other enactment, instrument or document to a provision of the Companies Act 2006 must be construed (so far as the context permits) as including, as respects times, circumstances or purposes in relation to which the corresponding repealed provision had effect, a reference to that corresponding provision⁵. Any reference (express or implied) in any enactment, instrument or document to a repealed provision must be construed (so far as the context permits), as respects times, circumstances and purposes in relation to which the corresponding provision of the Companies Act 2006 has effect, as being or (according to the context) including a reference to the corresponding provision of the Companies Act 2006⁶.

The following provision for continuity in the law was made for the purposes of consolidating legislation of 1985 and it still has effect⁷.

So far as anything done or treated as done under or for the purposes of any provision of the old Acts⁸ could have been done under or for the purposes of the corresponding provision of the consolidating legislation (the 'new Acts'), it is not invalidated by the repeal of that provision but has effect as if done under or for the purposes of the corresponding provision of the new Acts⁹. Any order, regulation or other instrument made or having effect under any provision of the old Acts is, in so far as its effect is preserved by these provisions, to be treated for all purposes as made and having effect under the corresponding provision of the new Acts¹⁰.

Where any period of time specified in a provision of the old Acts was current immediately before 1 July 1985, the new Acts have effect as if the corresponding provision had been in force when the period began to run¹¹. Without prejudice to the above, any period of time so specified and current is deemed for the purposes of the new Acts to run from the date or event from which it was running immediately before 1 July 1985, and to expire (subject to any provision of the new Acts for its extension) whenever it would have expired if the new Acts had not been passed¹². Any rights, priorities, liabilities, reliefs, obligations, requirements, powers, duties or exemptions dependent on the beginning, duration or end of such a period as mentioned above are to be under the new Acts as they were or would have been under the old Acts¹³.

Where in any provision of the new Acts there is a reference to another provision of those Acts, and the first-mentioned provision operates, or is capable of operating, in relation to things done or omitted, or events occurring or not occurring, in the past (including in particular past acts of compliance with any enactment, failures of compliance, contraventions, offences and convictions of offences), the reference to that other provision is to be read as including a reference to the corresponding provision of the old Acts¹⁴.

Where an offence for the continuance of which a penalty was provided has been committed under any provision of the old Acts, proceedings may be taken under the new Acts in respect of the continuance of the offence after 1 July 1985 in the like manner as if the offence had been committed under the corresponding provisions of the new Acts¹⁵; and the repeal of any transitory provision of the old Acts (not replaced by any corresponding provision of the new Acts) requiring a thing to be done within a certain time does not affect a person's continued liability to be prosecuted and punished in respect of the failure, or continued failure, to do that thing¹⁶.

A reference in any enactment, instrument or document (whether express or implied, and in whatever phraseology) to a provision which is replaced by a corresponding provision of the new Acts is to be read, where necessary to retain for the enactment, instrument or document the same force and effect as it would have had but for the passing of the new Acts, as, or as including, a reference to that corresponding provision¹⁷.

Nothing in the new Acts affects: (1) the registration or re-registration of any company under the former Companies Acts¹⁸, or the continued existence of any company by virtue of such registration or re-registration¹⁹; or (2) the operation of any enactment providing for any partnership, association or company being wound up, or being wound up as a company or as an unregistered company under any of the former Companies Acts²⁰.

Where any provision of the new Acts was, immediately before 1 July 1985, contained in or given effect by a statutory instrument (whether or not made under a power in any of the old Acts), then the above provisions have effect as if that provision was contained in the old Acts, and in so far as the provision was, immediately before 1 July 1985, subject to a power (whether or not under the old Acts) of variation or revocation, nothing in the new Acts is to be taken as prejudicing any future exercise of the power²¹.

All the above provisions are without prejudice to the operation of the Interpretation Act 1978²² which provides for savings from, and the effect of, repeals²³.

1 See the Companies Act 2006 s 1297(6). References in s 1297 to the Companies Act 2006 include subordinate legislation made under that Act: s 1297(7). For these purposes, 'subordinate legislation' has the same meaning as in the Interpretation Act 1978 (see STATUTES vol 44(1) (Reissue) PARA 1232): Companies Act 2006 s 1297(8).

Although certain provisions of the Companies Act 2006 came into force on 8 November 2006 (ie the day the Act was passed), most of its provisions came into force on such days as could be appointed by order of the Secretary of State or the Treasury: see s 1300. The Secretary of State or the Treasury may by order make such transitional provision and savings as they consider necessary or expedient in connection with the commencement of any provision made by or under the Companies Act 2006: s 1296(1). Such orders are subject to negative resolution procedure (ie the statutory instrument containing the order is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament): ss 1289, 1296(4). As to the making of orders under the 2006 Act generally see ss 1288-1292. An order may, in particular, make such adaptations of provisions brought into force as appear to be necessary or expedient in consequence of other provisions of that Act not yet having come into force: s 1296(2). Transitional provision and savings that are so made are additional, and without prejudice, to those made by or under any other provision of the 2006 Act: s 1296(3). The following orders have been made under the powers so conferred: the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 1, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2006, SI 2006/3428; the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 2, Consequential Amendments, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2007, SI 2007/1093; the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 3, Consequential Amendments, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2007, SI 2007/2194; the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 4 and Commencement No 3 (Amendment)) Order 2007, SI 2007/2607; the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 5, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2007, SI 2007/3495; the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 6, Saving and Commencement Nos 3 and 5 (Amendment)) Order 2008, SI 2008/674; the Companies Act 2006 (Consequential Amendments etc) Order 2008, SI 2008/948; the Companies Act 2006 (Consequential Amendments) (Taxes and National Insurance) Order 2008, SI 2008/954; the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 7, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/1886; the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860; the Companies Act 2006 (Part 35) (Consequential Amendments, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2009, SI 2009/1802; the Limited Liability Partnerships (Application of Companies Act 2006) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1804; the Companies Act 2006 (Consequential Amendments, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2009, SI 2009/1941; and the Registrar of Companies (Fees) (Limited Partnerships and Newspaper Proprietors) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2392.

Accordingly, all the provisions of the Companies Act 2006 that affect the law in England and Wales had come into force by 1 October 2009, although the following four provisions not have been commenced, namely: s 327(2)(c) and s 330(6)(c) (both of which will be repealed due to drafting errors); s 1175 as it applies in Northern Ireland; and s 1175, Sch 9 Pt 2 (relating to the Companies (Northern Ireland) Order 1986, SI 1986/1032 (NI 6)). Where transitional provisions that are contained in the orders still have effect at the date at which this volume states the law, those provisions are mentioned in the text where they so have effect. As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6. As to the Treasury see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARAS 512-517.

2 See the Companies Act 2006 s 1297(1). As to repeals made by the Companies Act 2006 see s 1295, Sch 16. In the Companies Act 2006, unless the context otherwise requires, 'enactment' includes an enactment contained in subordinate legislation within the meaning of the Interpretation Act 1978 (see STATUTES vol 44(1) (Reissue) PARA 1232), an enactment contained in, or in an instrument made under, an Act of the Scottish Parliament, and an enactment contained in, or in an instrument made under, Northern Ireland legislation within the meaning of the Interpretation Act 1978: Companies Act 2006 s 1293.

3 See the Companies Act 2006 s 1297(2). Without prejudice to s 1297(2), where a provision creating an offence is repealed and re-enacted without modification by or under the Companies Act 2006, an offence committed before the commencement of the new law is to be charged under the old law; an offence committed after the commencement of the new law is to be charged under the new law; and an offence committed partly before and partly after the commencement of the new law is to be charged under the new law and not under the old: see the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, art 7(1), (4). For this purpose, an offence is committed partly before and partly after the commencement of the new law if a relevant event occurs before commencement and another relevant event occurs after commencement, where 'relevant event' means an act, omission or other event (including any result of one or more acts or omissions) proof of which is required for conviction of the offence: art 7(2), (3).

4 Companies Act 2006 s 1297(3). This provision applies:

- 10 (1) in relation to a company to which the Companies Act 1985 s 675(1) (repealed) (companies formed and registered under earlier companies legislation) applied as if the company had been formed and registered under Pt 1 (ss 1-42) (repealed) (Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, art 5, Sch 2 para 1(2)(a));
- 11 (2) in relation to a company to which the Companies Act 1985 s 676(1) (repealed) (companies registered but not formed under earlier companies legislation) applied as if the company had been registered under Pt 22 Ch 2 (ss 680-690) (repealed) (Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, Sch 2 para 1(2)(b));
- 12 (3) in relation to a company to which the Companies Act 1985 s 677(1) (repealed) (companies re-registered under earlier companies legislation) applied as if the company had been re-registered under Pt 2 (ss 43-55) (repealed) (Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, Sch 2 para 1(2)(c)).

A reference in any enactment to a company formed and registered under the Companies Act 2006, to a company registered but not formed under that Act, or to a company re-registered under that Act, includes a company treated as so formed and registered, registered or re-registered by virtue of s 1297(3), including that provision as applied by the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, art 5, Sch 2 para 1(2): see the Companies Act 2006 (Consequential Amendments, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2009, SI 2009/1941, art 3.

Nothing in the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, Sch 2 para 1 or in the Companies Act 2006 s 1297(3) is to be read as affecting any reference to the date on which a company was registered or re-registered: Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, Sch 2 para 1(3). For the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 s 1297(3) as it applies to treat a company formed and registered under the Companies Act 1985 Pt 1 (see head (1) above) as if formed and registered under the corresponding provisions of the Companies Act 2006, the registration of a company on an application to which the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, Sch 2 para 2(3) applies (see PARA 24) is to be regarded as in force and effective immediately before the commencement of the Companies Act 2006 Pt 1 (ss 1-6): Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, Sch 2 para 2(5). For the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 s 1297(3) as it applies to treat the registration of a company under the Companies Act 1985 Pt 22 Ch 2 (see head (2) above) as if done under the corresponding provisions of the Companies Act 2006, the registration of a company on an application to which the Companies Act 1985 Pt 22 Ch 2 continues to apply is to be regarded as in force and effective immediately before the commencement of the Companies Act 2006 Pt 33 Ch 1 (ss 1040-1042): see the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, Sch 2 para 93(6). For the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 s 1297(3) as it applies to treat a company re-registered under the Companies Act 1985 (see head (3) above) as if re-registered under the corresponding provisions of the Companies Act 2006, the re-registration of a company on an application to which the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, Sch 2 para 22(3) applies is to be regarded as in force and effective immediately before the commencement of the Companies Act 2006 Pt 7 (ss 89-111): Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, Sch 2 para 22(6). A company that is formed and registered, or re-registered, under the Companies Act 1985 on or after 1 October 2009 by virtue of the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, Sch 2 para 2(3) or Sch 2 para 22(3) is known as a 'transitional company': see art 2. See also PARA 18.

7 The consolidating legislation of 1985 came into force on 1 July 1985: see the Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 s 34. As to the consolidating legislation of 1985 see PARA 14.

8 For these purposes, 'old Acts' means the Companies Acts 1948 to 1983 and any other enactment which is repealed by the Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 and replaced by a corresponding provision in the new Acts: Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 s 31(1)(b). For these purposes, 'new Acts', means the Companies Act 1985, the Business Names Act 1985, the Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 and the Company Securities (Insider Dealing) Act 1985: Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 ss 31(1)(a), 32. The Company Securities (Insider Dealing) Act 1985 has been repealed (see PARA 14 note 4): see now the Criminal Justice Act 1993 Pt V (ss 52-

64); PARA 15; and see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE. The Business Names Act 1985 has been repealed by, and replaced by, the Companies Act 2006: see now Pt 5 (ss 53-85), Pt 41 (ss 1192-1208); and PARA 196 et seq. As to the Acts which may be cited as the 'Companies Acts 1948 to 1983' see PARA 13.

14 Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 s 31(4).

15 Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 s 31(1)(c), (5)(a).

16 Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 s 31(5)(b).

17 Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 s 31(6). The generality of this provision is not affected by any specific conversion of references made by the Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985, nor by the inclusion in any provision of the new Acts of a reference (whether express or implied, and in whatever phraseology) to the provision of the old Acts corresponding to that provision, or to a provision of the old Acts which is replaced by a corresponding provision of the new Acts: Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 s 31(7).

18 As to the meaning of 'former Companies Acts' see the Companies Act 1985 s 735(1)(c) (repealed); and PARA 14 note 8 (definition applied by virtue of the Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 s 32).

19 Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 s 31(8)(a).

20 Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 s 31(8)(c). As to the continuation of former Table A provisions see PARA 18.

21 Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 s 31(1)(c), (10).

22 In the Interpretation Act 1978 ss 16, 17 (see STATUTES vol 44(1) (Reissue) PARAS 1303, 1306): see the Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 s 31(11). For the purposes of the Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2) (construction of references to enactments repealed and replaced; continuity of powers preserved in repealing enactment), any provision of the old Acts which is replaced by a provision of the Companies Act 1985, the Company Securities (Insider Dealing) Act 1985 (repealed) (see now the Criminal Justice Act 1993 Pt V (ss 52-64); and see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE) or the Business Names Act 1985 (repealed) (see now the Companies Act 2006 Pt 5 (ss 53-85), Pt 41 (ss 1192-1208); and PARA 196 et seq) is deemed to have been repealed and re-enacted by that one of the new Acts and not by the Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985: s 31(11). Anything saved from repeal by the Companies Act 1948 s 459, and still in force immediately before 1 July 1985, remains in force notwithstanding the repeal of the whole of that Act: Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 s 31(1)(c), (9).

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/1. INTRODUCTION/(3) THE STATUTORY FRAMEWORK/(iv) The Reform of Company Law and the Companies Act 2006/18. General savings for existing companies under the Companies Act 2006.

18. General savings for existing companies under the Companies Act 2006.

Nothing in the Companies Act 2006 affects:

- 24 (1) the registration or re-registration of a company under the former Companies Acts, or the continued existence of a company by virtue of such registration or re-registration¹; or
- 25 (2) the application in relation to an existing company of²:
- 3
- 4. (a) Table B in the Joint Stock Companies Act 1856³; or
- 5. (b) Table A in the former Companies Acts⁴;
- 6. (c) the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985⁵.

In relation to companies registered on or after 1 October 2009, new model articles have been made in place of those tables mentioned under head (2) above⁶.

1 Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, art 5, Sch 2 para 1(1)(a). Nothing in Sch 2 para 1 or in the Companies Act 2006 s 1297(3) (see PARA 17) is to be read as affecting any reference to the date on which a company was registered or re-registered: Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, Sch 2 para 1(3).

In the Companies Acts, the 'former Companies Acts' means the Joint Stock Companies Acts, the Companies Act 1862, the Companies (Consolidation) Act 1908, the Companies Act 1929, the Companies Acts 1948 to 1983, and the provisions of the Companies Act 1985 and the Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 that are no longer in force: see the Companies Act 2006 s 1171. The 'Joint Stock Companies Acts' means the Joint Stock Companies Act 1856, the Joint Stock Companies Acts 1856, 1857, the Joint Stock Banking Companies Act 1857, and the Act to enable Joint Stock Banking Companies to be formed on the principle of limited liability (1858), but does not include the Joint Stock Companies Act 1844: see the Companies Act 2006 s 1171. As to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16. As to the Acts which may be cited as the 'Companies Acts 1948 to 1983' see PARA 13; and as to the provisions of the Companies Act 1985 and the Companies Consolidation (Consequential Provisions) Act 1985 that are no longer in force see PARA 16.

2 Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, Sch 2 para 1(1)(b). For these purposes, 'existing company' means a company that immediately before 1 October 2009 was formed and registered under the Companies Act 1985 or was an existing company for the purposes of that Act (as to which see PARA 24 note 5): Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, art 2.

3 Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, Sch 2 para 1(1)(b)(i). As to the preservation of such a company's power under the Joint Stock Companies Act 1856 to make contracts in writing signed by its agents see Prince v Prince (1866) LR 1 Eq 490.

4 Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, Sch 2 para 1(1)(b)(ii). The Companies Act 1948 Sch 1, Table A was divided into two parts, Part II applying to private companies as then defined. Part II was repealed by the Companies Act 1980 s 88, Sch 4, which also made minor changes in various articles in Table A Part 1. A new Table A intended to come into force 'on the day on which there comes into force an Act to consolidate the greater part of the Companies Acts' was proposed to be introduced by the Companies (Alteration of Table A etc) Regulations 1984, SI 1984/1717, but those regulations were revoked before they could come into effect by the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, made on 22 May 1985. These latter regulations themselves came into effect on 1 July 1985: Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, reg 1. As they were made before 1 July 1985 (ie the date on which the Companies Act 1985 came into force), they were made in exercise of the powers conferred on the Secretary of State by the Companies Act 1948 s 454(2) (repealed), as well as under the powers conferred by the Companies Act 1985 s 3 (repealed) and s 8 (repealed). As to the effect of this see PARA 17. As to the treatment under the Companies Act 2006 of articles made pursuant to the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, see PARA 230.

5 Ie the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805 (see note 4): Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, Sch 2 para 1(1)(b)(iii).

6 See the Companies (Model Articles) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3229, which came into force on 1 October 2009 (see reg 1); and see PARAS 228-230.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/1. INTRODUCTION/(4) REQUIREMENTS OF EC LAW/(i) Requirements of the EC Treaty/19. EC Treaty requirements in general.

(4) REQUIREMENTS OF EC LAW

(i) Requirements of the EC Treaty

19. EC Treaty requirements in general.

Companies or firms¹ formed in accordance with the law of a member state of the European Community² and having their registered office, central administration or principal place of business within the Community must, for the purpose of applying the provisions of the EC Treaty dealing with the right of establishment³, be treated in the same way as natural persons who are nationals of member states⁴.

Member states of the European Community must, so far as is necessary, engage in negotiations with each other with a view to ensuring for the benefit of their nationals⁵:

- 26 (1) the mutual recognition of companies or firms⁶;
- 27 (2) the retention of their legal personality in the event of transfer of their seat from one country to another⁷; and
- 28 (3) the possibility of mergers between companies or firms governed by the laws of different countries⁸.

Member states of the European Community must accord nationals of other member states the same treatment as their own nationals as regards participation in the capital of companies or firms⁹.

1 For these purposes, 'companies or firms' means companies or firms constituted under civil or commercial law, including co-operative societies and other legal persons governed by public or private law, save for those which are not profit-making: Treaty Establishing the European Community (Rome, 25 March 1957; TS 1 (1973); Cmnd 5179) (the 'EC Treaty') art 48 para 2 (art 48 formerly art 58; renumbered by virtue of the Treaty of Amsterdam: see Treaty Citation (No 2) (Note) [1999] All ER (EC) 646, ECJ). Legislation which predates the Treaty of Amsterdam may refer to 'companies within the meaning of the second paragraph of Article 58 of the Treaty'.

20. Freedom of establishment.

The EC Treaty¹ prohibits restrictions on the freedom of establishment of nationals of a member state of the European Community² in the territory of another member state³. This prohibition also applies to restrictions on the setting up of agencies, branches or subsidiaries by nationals of any member state established in the territory of any member state⁴. Freedom of establishment includes the right to take up and pursue activities as self-employed persons and to set up and manage undertakings and companies under the conditions laid down by the law of the country of establishment for its own nationals and prohibits the member state of origin from hindering the establishment in another member state of one of its nationals or a company incorporated under its legislation and having its registered office, central administration or principal place of business within the European Community⁵.

However, the problems associated with transferring a company's registered office, central administration or principal place of business from one member state to another, whilst retaining their status as companies incorporated under the law of the first member state, is not resolved by the Treaty provisions governing freedom of establishment⁶.

³ EC Treaty art 43 para 1 (art 43 formerly art 52; renumbered by virtue of the Treaty of Amsterdam: see Treaty Citation (No 2) (Note) [1999] All ER (EC) 646, ECJ). The prohibition mentioned in the text applies within the framework of the provisions set out in the EC Treaty Title III Ch 2 arts 43-48 (formerly arts 52-58; renumbered by virtue of the Treaty of Amsterdam: see Treaty Citation (No 2) (Note) [1999] All ER (EC) 646, ECJ): see the EC Treaty art 43 para 1 (as so renumbered). See also PARA 19.

A company may exercise its right of establishment where national legislation, under which the company is incorporated, hinders its establishment in another member state: Case C-200/98 X AB and Y AB v Riksskatteverket [2000] 3 CMLR 1337, [1999] ECR I-8261, ECJ (refusal of tax relief for intra-group transfers, on ground that two or more subsidiaries involved in the transfers had seats in different member states, contravened EC Treaty art 177 (now art 234)). The same principle applies where a member state hinders the establishment in another member state of one of its own nationals: Case C-251/98 Baars v Inspecteur der Belastingdienst Particulieren/Ondernemingen (Gorinchem) [2000] ECR I-2787, [2002] 1 CMLR 1437, ECJ (freedom of establishment includes the right of individuals to set up and manage companies in another member state). See also Case C-168/01 Bosal Holdings BV v Staatssecretaris van Financien [2003] All ER (EC) 959, [2003] 3 CMLR 674, ECJ (deductibility of costs arising from a parent company's holding in the capital of a subsidiary established in another member state).

In addition to setting up agencies, branches, or subsidiaries, a company may also exercise its right of establishment by taking part in the incorporation of a company in another member state: see Case 81/87 R v HM Treasury, ex p Daily Mail and General Trust plc [1989] QB 446, [1989] 1 All ER 328, ECJ.

⁵ EC Treaty art 43 para 2 (as renumbered: see note 3); Case 81/87 R v HM Treasury, ex p Daily Mail and General Trust plc [1989] QB 446, [1989] 1 All ER 328, ECJ. The right of establishment is subject to the provisions of the EC Treaty relating to capital (arts 56-60): art 43 para 2 (as so renumbered).

The right of establishment cannot be interpreted as conferring on companies incorporated under a law of a member state the right to transfer their central management and control and their central administration to another member state while retaining their status as companies incorporated under the legislation of the first member state: R v HM Treasury, ex p Daily Mail and General Trust plc (although the EC Treaty placed, as connecting factors, the registered office, central administration and principal place of business on the same footing, national legislation differs too widely in regard to the connecting factors required for incorporation and in how the connecting factor subsequently may be modified). In Case C-208/00 Überseering BV v Nordic Construction Co Baumanagement GmbH [2002] ECR I-9919, [2005] 1 WLR 315, ECJ, it was inferred that the question whether a company formed in accordance with the legislation of one member state could transfer its registered office or de facto centre of administration to another member state without losing its personality under the law of the member state of incorporation, and in some circumstances the rules relating to that transfer, were determined by the national law in accordance with which the company was incorporated. Accordingly, a member state is able, in the case of a company incorporated under its national law, to make the company's right to retain its legal personality under that law subject to restrictions on the transfer to a foreign country of the country's actual centre of administration: Überseering BV v Nordic Construction Co Baumanagement GmbH.

6 Case 81/87 R v HM Treasury, ex p Daily Mail and General Trust plc [1989] QB 446, [1989] 1 All ER 328, ECJ; Case C-208/00 Überseering BV v Nordic Construction Co Baumanagement GmbH [2002] ECR I-9919, [2005] 1 WLR 315, ECJ; and see PARA 23 note 23.

In Case C-210/06 Cartesio Oktató és Szolgáltató bt [2009] All ER (EC) 269, [2009] 1 CMLR 1394, ECJ, it was confirmed that a member state had the power to define both the connecting factor required of a company if it was to be regarded as incorporated under the law of that state (and, as such, capable of enjoying the right of establishment) and the connecting factor required if the company was to be able subsequently to maintain that status (eg following a cross-border merger). Accordingly, as Community law stood, EC Treaty art 43 was to be interpreted as not precluding legislation of a member state under which a company incorporated under the law of that member state might not transfer its seat to another member state whilst retaining its status as a company governed by the law of the member state of incorporation: Case C-210/06 CARTESIO Oktató és Szolgáltató bt. See also Case C-212/97 Centros Ltd v Erhvervs-og Selskabsstyrelsen [2000] Ch 446, [1999] ECR I-1459, ECJ (the fact that a company was formed in a particular member state for the sole purpose of enjoying more favourable legislation did not in itself constitute an abuse, even if that company conducted its activities entirely or mainly in a second state); and Case C-167/01 Kamer van Koophandel en Fabrieken voor Amsterdam v Inspire Art Ltd [2003] ECR I-10155, ECJ. The issue raised in Case C-411/03 Re SEVIC Systems AG [2006] All ER (EC) 363, [2005] ECR I-10805, [2006] 2 BCLC 510, ECJ (national law which refuses registration of a merger proposed across member states constitutes a restriction within the meaning of EC Treaty art 43 if a merger within the member state would be registered) has been resolved by European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2005/56 of 26 October 2005 (OJ L310, 25.11.2005, p 1) on cross-border mergers of limited liability companies (see PARA 23).

21. Free movement of capital.

The EC Treaty¹ prohibits all restrictions on the movement of capital between member states of the European Community² and between member states and third countries³. All restrictions on payments between member states and between member states and third countries are also prohibited⁴.

These provisions are without prejudice to the right of member states⁵:

- 29 (1) to apply the relevant provisions of their tax law which distinguish between taxpayers who are not in the same situation with regard to their place of residence or with regard to the place where their capital is invested⁶;
- 30 (2) to take all requisite measures to prevent infringements of national law and regulations, in particular in the field of taxation and the prudential supervision of financial institutions, or to lay down procedures for the declaration of capital movements for purposes of administrative or statistical information, or to take measures which are justified on grounds of public policy or public security⁷.

The provisions relating to capital and payments⁸ are without prejudice to the applicability of restrictions on the right of establishment⁹ which are compatible with the EC Treaty¹⁰. Such measures and procedures¹¹ must not constitute a means of arbitrary discrimination or a disguised restriction on the free movement of capital and payments¹².

The retention of a degree of influence within privatised undertakings (by the use of 'golden shares') by the governments of member states has been declared liable to impede the acquisition of shares in those undertakings and to dissuade investors in other member states from investing in their capital so as to constitute a restriction on the freedom of movement of capital. Such a restriction may be implemented only by national rules justified by reasons referred to in EC Treaty art 58 para 1 or by overriding requirements of the general interest and, in order to be so justified, the national legislation must accord with the principle of proportionality: see Case C-367/98 EC Commission v Portugal, Case C-483/99 EC Commission v France, Case C-503/99 EC Commission v Belgium [2003] QB 233, [2002] 2 CMLR 1265, ECJ (national measures granted the state prerogatives ('golden shares') to intervene in the share structure and management of privatised undertakings in strategically important areas of the economy); Case C-463/00 EC Commission v Spain [2003] All ER (EC) 878, [2003] 2 CMLR 557, ECJ (disposal of certain shareholdings in some strategically important industries subject to a system of prior administrative approval); Case C-98/01 EC Commission v United Kingdom [2003] All ER (EC) 878, [2003] 2 CMLR 598, ECJ (special share held by the United Kingdom government made some of the company's operations subject to prior administrative approval and prevented the substantial acquisition of the voting capital by any person); C-463/04 and C-464/04 Federconsumatori v Comune di Milano [2007] ECR I-10419, [2008] 1 CMLR 1187, ECJ (by giving public shareholders an instrument enabling them to restrict the possibility of the other shareholders participating in the company with a view to establishing or maintaining lasting and direct economic links with it such as to enable them to participate effectively in the management of that company or in its control, a national provision such as the one at issue was liable to deter direct investors from other member states from investing in the company's capital).

22. EC Regulations.

In addition to the EC Directives that relate to company law and related areas¹, EC Regulations make further provision, for example, by applying International Accounting Standards (IAS) to the consolidated accounts of companies which trade on regulated markets² or by providing for certain types of cross-border insolvency proceedings³.

EC Regulations have also made provision for new forms of trading entity whose legal personality is recognised by all member states, namely the European Economic Interest Grouping (EEIG)⁴ and the European Company (Societas Europaea)⁵; and a proposal for a regulation on the Statute for a European Private Company (Societas Privata Europaea) has been made⁶. Other forms have been provided for by means of EC Regulation but the focus for these are of less significance for the United Kingdom⁷.

European Parliament and EC Council Regulation 1606/2002 (OJ L243, 11.9.2002, p 1) provides a framework for the adoption of international accounting standards (IAS) to the consolidated accounts of all companies whose securities are admitted for trading on a regulated market (mandatory) and to other types of company (permissive). The IAS are published by the International Accounting Standards Board (IASB) and the IAS provisions themselves may be modified by the EC before they are adopted by means of EC Regulation. (The IAS are now known as the International Financial Reporting Standards (IFRS)). (iii) EC Directives relating to Company Law

23. EC Directives.

The EC Council is required to issue Directives¹ in order to attain freedom of establishment², in particular by co-ordinating to the necessary extent the safeguards which, for the protection of interests of members and others, are required by member states of companies³ with a view to making such safeguards equivalent throughout the European Community⁴. The following Directives have been issued or proposed:

- 31 (1) the First Company Law Directive of 9 March 1968, which governs the co-ordination of national provisions concerning disclosure of basic documents and other information, the validity of obligations entered into by limited liability companies, and the 'nullity' of such companies⁵;
- 32 (2) the Second Company Law Directive of 13 December 1976, which applies to public companies (including those limited by guarantee) having a share capital and which governs the formation and capital of such companies⁶;
- 33 (3) the Third Company Law Directive of 9 October 1978, relating to particular types of mergers of public limited liability companies⁷;
- 34 (4) the Fourth Company Law Directive of 25 July 1978, relating to annual accounts of certain types of companies (known as one of the 'Accounting Directives', together with the Seventh Company Law Directive)⁸;
- 35 (5) a draft Fifth Company Law Directive relating to the structure of public limited liability companies and the powers and obligations of their organs; but this has been withdrawn⁹;
- 36 (6) the Sixth Company Law Directive of 17 December 1982, relating to the division of public limited liability companies¹⁰;
- 37 (7) the Seventh Company Law Directive of 13 June 1983, relating to consolidated accounts (known as one of the 'Accounting Directives', together with the Fourth Company Law Directive)¹¹;
- 38 (8) Directives have been issued amending the Fourth and Seventh Company Law Directives (the 'Accounting Directives'):

7. (a) to provide for accounting exemptions for small and medium-sized companies¹²;
 8. (b) to extend the scope of the Directives to accounts of certain partnerships and unlimited companies¹³;
 9. (c) to allow for fair value accounting for certain financial instruments¹⁴;
 10. (d) to update and modernise the Accounting Directives so as to ensure consistency and transparency¹⁵;
 11. (e) to confirm the collective responsibility of board members, increase transparency in transactions with related parties and off-balance-sheet arrangements, and improve disclosure about corporate governance practices applied in a company¹⁶; and
 12. (f) to provide for certain disclosure requirements for medium-sized companies and the obligation to draw up consolidated accounts¹⁷;
- 39 (9) the Eighth Company Law Directive on the approval of persons responsible for carrying out the statutory audits of accounting documents, originally adopted on 10 April 1984, but now repealed and replaced by the 'Audit Directive' of 17 May 2006¹⁸;
 - 40 (10) a draft Ninth Company Law Directive on group relations; but this has been withdrawn¹⁹;
 - 41 (11) a Company Law Directive of 26 October 2005 on cross-border mergers of limited liability companies (commonly referred to as the 'Tenth Company Law Directive')²⁰;
 - 42 (12) the Eleventh Company Law Directive of 21 December 1989, concerning disclosure requirements in respect of branches opened in a member state by certain types of company governed by the law of another state²¹;
 - 43 (13) the Twelfth Company Law Directive of 30 December 1989, on single-member private limited liability companies²²;
 - 44 (14) the Thirteenth Company Law Directive of 21 April 2004, on takeover bids (the 'Takeovers Directive')²³;
 - 45 (15) a proposed Fourteenth Company Law Directive, on the transfer of a company's seat from one member state to another²⁴.

A further Directive governs the exercise of certain shareholder rights attached to voting shares in relation to general meetings of companies incorporated in a member state and admitted to trading on a regulated market in a member state²⁵. A number of other Directives that are more closely related to the regulation of financial markets and securities have some relevance to company law²⁶. Among the latter category are those Directives which govern: the admission of securities to official stock exchange listing and on information to be published on those securities (the 'Consolidated Admissions and Reporting Directive' or 'CARD')²⁷; the prospectus to be published when transferable securities are offered to the public or admitted to trading²⁸; the harmonisation of transparency requirements with regard to information about issuers whose securities are admitted to trading on a regulated market (the 'Transparency Directive')²⁹; and insider dealing and market manipulation (market abuse)³⁰.

Other Directives of note in a more general context are those which govern the safeguarding of employees' rights in the event of transfers of undertakings or businesses or parts of them (the 'Acquired Rights Directive')³¹, and the establishment of a general framework for informing and consulting employees in the European Community³².

6 Ie EC Council Directive 77/91 (OJ L26, 31.1.77, p 1) on co-ordination of safeguards, which for the protection of the interests of members and others, are required by member states of companies, in respect of the formation of public limited liability companies and the maintenance and alteration of their capital, with a view to making such safeguards equivalent throughout the Community (amended by EC Council Directive 92/101 (OJ L347, 28.11.92, p 64); European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2006/68 (OJ L264, 25.09.2006, p 32)).

7 Ie EC Council Directive 78/855 (OJ L295, 20.10.78, p 36) (amended by European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2007/63 (OJ L300, 17.11.2007, p 47)). See the Companies Act 2006 Pt 27 (ss 902-941) (mergers and divisions of public companies); and PARA 1449 et seq. See also PARA 144.

8 Ie EC Council Directive 78/660 (OJ L222, 14.8.78, p 11) (amended by EC Council Directive 84/569 (OJ L314, 4.12.84, p 28); EC Council Directive 89/666 (OJ L395, 30.12.89, p 36); EC Council Directive 90/604 (OJ L317, 16.11.90, p 57); EC Council Directive 90/605 (OJ L317, 16.11.90, p 60); EC Council Directive 94/8 (OJ L82, 25.3.94, p 33); EC Council Directive 99/60 (OJ L162, 26.6.99, p 65); EC Council Directive 2001/65 (OJ L283, 27.10.2001, p 28); EC Council Directive 2003/38 (OJ L120, 15.5.2003, p 22); EC Council Directive 2003/51 (OJ L178, 17.7.2003, p 16); European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2006/43 of 17 May 2006 (OJ L157, 09.06.2006, p 87); European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2006/46 of 14 June 2006 (OJ L224, 16.08.2006, p 1); EC Council Directive 2006/99 of 20 November 2006 (OJ L363, 20.12.2006, p 137); European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2009/49 of 18 June 2009 (OJ L164, 26.6.2009, p 42)). As to the amendments which have been made to this Directive see further head (8) in the text.

9 A Fifth Directive was first proposed in 1972 (see OJ C131, 13.12.72, p 49) and the proposal was amended at various times thereafter but agreement among member states could not be achieved. Proposals for reform have been made in related areas of corporate governance, including directors' duties and shareholder rights.

10 Ie EC Council Directive 82/891 (OJ L378, 31.12.82, p 47) (amended by European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2007/63 (OJ L300, 17.11.2007, p 47)). See the Companies Act 2006 Pt 27 (ss 902-941) (mergers and divisions of public companies); and PARA 1449 et seq. See also PARA 144.

11 Ie EC Council Directive 83/349 (OJ L193, 18.7.83, p 1) (amended by EC Council Directive 89/666 (OJ L395, 30.12.89, p 36); EC Council Directive 90/604 (OJ L317, 16.11.90, p 57); EC Council Directive 90/605 (OJ L317, 16.11.90, p 60); EC Council Directive 2001/65 (OJ L283, 27.10.2001, p 28); EC Council Directive 2003/51 (OJ L178, 17.7.2003, p 16); European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2006/43 of 17 May 2006 (OJ L157, 09.06.2006, p 87); European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2006/46 of 14 June 2006 (OJ L224, 16.08.2006, p 1); EC Council Directive 2006/99 of 20 November 2006 (OJ L363, 20.12.2006, p 137); European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2009/49 of 18 June 2009 (OJ L164, 26.6.2009, p 42)). See PARA 708 et seq. As to the amendments which have been made to this Directive see further head (8) in the text.

12 Ie EC Council Directive 90/604 (OJ L317, 16.11.90, p 57) (amended so as to raise the financial ceilings for small and medium-sized companies by EC Council Directive 94/8 (OJ L82, 25.3.94, p 33) and EC Council Directive 2003/38 (OJ L120, 15.5.2003, p 22)). See PARA 693 et seq.

14 Ie EC Council Directive 2001/65 (OJ L283, 27.10.2001, p 28) regarding the valuation rules for the annual and consolidated accounts of certain types of companies as well as of banks and other financial institutions (the 'Fair Value Directive'). As to the measures that are intended to implement this Directive see PARA 693 et seq.

15 Ie EC Council Directive 2003/51 (OJ L178, 17.7.2003, p 16) amending Directives 78/660, 83/349, 86/635 and 91/674 on the annual and consolidated accounts of certain types of companies, banks and other financial institutions and insurance undertakings (the 'Modernisation Directive').

16 Ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2006/46 of 14 June 2006 (OJ L224, 16.8.2006, p 1) (amending EC Council Directive 78/660 on the annual accounts of certain types of companies, EC Council Directive 83/349 on consolidated accounts, EC Council Directive 86/635 (OJ L60, 03.03.1987, p 17) on the annual accounts and consolidated accounts of banks and other financial institutions and EC Council Directive 91/674 (OJ L374, 31.12.1991, p 7) on the annual accounts and consolidated accounts of insurance undertakings). For the purposes of implementing Directive 2006/46, the Companies Act 2006 (Amendment) (Accounts and Reports) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/393, the Small Companies and Groups (Accounts and Directors' Report) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/409, the Large and Medium-sized Companies and Groups (Accounts and Reports) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/410, and the Companies Act 2006 (Accounts, Reports and Audit) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1581, have been made: see PARA 693 et seq.

17 Ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2009/49 of 18 June 2009 (OJ L164, 26.6.2009, p 42) amending EC Council Directive 78/660 (OJ L222, 14.8.78, p 11) (see head (4) in the text) and EC Council Directive 83/349 (OJ L193, 18.7.83, p 1) (see head (7) in the text) as regards certain disclosure requirements for medium-sized companies and the obligation to draw up consolidated accounts.

18 See European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2006/43 (OJ L157, 09.06.2006, p 87) on statutory audits of annual accounts and consolidated accounts (the 'Audit Directive') (amended by European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2008/30 of 11 March 2008 (OJ L81, 20.03.2008, p 53)). Head (9) in the text refers also to the predecessor Eighth Company Law Directive, ie EC Council Directive 84/253 (OJ L126, 12.5.84, p 20), which was repealed by European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2006/43 (OJ L157, 09.06.2006, p 87).

19 See Modernising Company Law and Enhancing Corporate Governance in the European Union--A Plan to Move Forward (Com (2003) 284 final, 21.5.2003) para 3.3. A draft Ninth Company Law Directive on the conduct of groups containing a public limited company as a subsidiary, which would have introduced parent liability for subsidiaries, as well as adding further disclosure obligations, was circulated by the EC Commission in December 1984 for consultation. Particular issues associated with groups have been addressed by specific reforms.

20 Ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2005/56 of 26 October 2005 (OJ L310, 25.11.2005, p 1) on cross-border mergers of limited liability companies (commonly referred to as the 'Tenth Company Law Directive'). For the purposes of implementing Directive 2005/56, the Companies (Cross-Border Mergers) Regulations 2007, SI 2007/2974, have been made: see PARA 1451.

21 Ie EC Council Directive 89/666 (OJ L395, 30.12.89, p 36). This Directive essentially extends the First, Fourth, Seventh and Eighth Company Law Directives (see heads (1), (4), (7)-(9) in the text) to branches (ie rather than to subsidiaries) in other member states. For the purposes of implementing Directive 89/666, the Overseas Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1801, have been made: see PARA 1824 et seq.

22 Ie EC Council Directive 89/667 (OJ L395, 30.12.89, p 40). Accordingly, a company is formed under the Companies Act 2006 by one or more persons: see s 7; and PARA 102.

23 Ie EC Council Directive 2004/25 (OJ L142, 30.4.2004, p 12). For the purposes of implementing Directive 2004/25, the Companies Act 2006 Pt 28 (ss 942-992) has been made: see PARA 1480 et seq.

24 A Fourteenth Company Law Directive has been under discussion for many years because the problems associated with transferring a company's registered office (or de facto head office) from one member state to another are not resolved by the Treaty provisions governing the right of establishment: see PARAS 19, 20.

In the absence of a harmonizing directive, a fundamental problem arises where a company wishes to re-establish itself in another member state because it has to wind up in the home state then follow local law in re-establishing its presence elsewhere (and the applicable national laws either make such an operation impossible or at least contingent on complicated legal arrangements): see Modernising Company Law and Enhancing Corporate Governance in the European Union--A Plan to Move Forward (Com (2003) 284 final, 21.5.2003) p 20. In order to address this problem, the original member states of the European Community had negotiated the Convention on the Mutual Recognition of Companies and Bodies Corporate (Brussels, 29 February 1968; EC Bulletin (Supp) 2/69), but this Convention was never ratified by the Netherlands and it did not come into force.

25 Ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2007/36 (OJ L184, 14.07.2007, p17) on the exercise of certain rights of shareholders in listed companies. For the purposes of implementing the Directive, the Companies (Shareholders' Rights) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1632, have been made, amending the Companies Act 2006 Pt 13 (ss 281-361) (see PARA 617 et seq).

26 Although public issues and offers of securities used to be governed domestically by company law legislation (see PARA 9), EC law has had an impact that has seen the development of financial markets and securities regulation as a separate (albeit related) strand of law (see EC Council Directive 79/279 of 5 March 1979 (OJ L66, 16.03.1979, p 21) coordinating the conditions for the admission of securities to official stock exchange listing (repealed); EC Council Directive 80/390 of 17 March 1980 (OJ L100, 17.04.1980, p 1) coordinating the requirements for the drawing up, scrutiny and distribution of the listing particulars to be published for the admission of securities to official stock exchange listing (repealed); and EC Council Directive 82/121 of 15 February 1982 (OJ L48, 20.02.1982, p 26) on information to be published on a regular basis by companies the shares of which have been admitted to official stock-exchange listing (repealed); and see now European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2001/34 (OJ L184, 6.7.2001, p 1) on the admission of securities to official stock exchange listing and on information to be published on those securities (the 'Consolidated Admissions and Reporting Directive') (cited in the text and note 27). The pre-eminent principle of current EC regulation of the public issue of securities is to ensure that disclosures are made regarding the issuing company and the shares on offer: see eg European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2003/71 (OJ L345, 31.12.2003, p 64) on the prospectus to be published when securities are offered to the public or admitted to trading (cited in the text and note 28). The concept of regulated markets has also overtaken 'official listing' as one of the guiding principles: see European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.04.2004, p 1) of 21 April 2004 on markets in financial instruments (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 385 et seq); European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/109 of 15 December 2004 (OJ L390, 31.12.2004, p 38) on the harmonisation of transparency requirements in relation to information about issuers whose securities are admitted to trading on a regulated market (cited in the text and note 29); and EC Council Directive 2003/6 (OJ L96, 12.4.2003, p 16) on insider dealing and market manipulation (market abuse) (cited in the text and note 30).

27 Ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2001/34 (OJ L184, 6.7.2001, p 1) on the admission of securities to official stock exchange listing and on information to be published on those securities (amended by European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2003/6 (OJ L96, 12.4.2003 p16); European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2003/71 (OJ L345, 31.12.2003, p 64); European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/109 of 15 December 2004 (OJ L390, 31.12.2004, p 38); European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2005/1 of 9 March 2005 (OJ L79, 24.03.2005, p 9)). Provision has also been made by way of amendment to the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 and the Financial Services Authority's Listing Rules (see PARA 1066 et seq) for the purposes of implementing Directive 2001/34: see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 391 et seq.

28 Ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2003/71 (OJ L345, 31.12.2003, p 64) on the prospectus to be published when securities are offered to the public or admitted to trading and amending Directive 2001/34 (see note 27). For the purposes of implementing this directive, the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 ss 84-87R have been made, and the Prospectus Regulations 2005, SI 2005/1433, made thereunder: see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 395 et seq.

29 Ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/109 of 15 December 2004 (OJ L390, 31.12.2004, p 38) on the harmonisation of transparency requirements in relation to information about issuers whose securities are admitted to trading on a regulated market (amended by European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2008/22 of 11 March 2008 (OJ L76, 19.03.2008, p 50)). See also the related EC Commission Directive 2007/14 of 8 March 2007 (OJ L69, 09.03.2007, p 27) laying down detailed rules for the implementation of certain provisions of European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/109.

For the purposes of implementing these measures, the Companies Act 2006 Pt 43 (ss 1265-1273) has been made, largely by means of making amendments to the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 415 et seq) and by making provision in the Financial Services Authority's Disclosure and Transparency Rules using powers under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000: see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 415 et seq. Accordingly, the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 890 (added by the Companies Act 2006 s 1269) enables rules to be made for the purposes of European Community obligations relating to corporate governance, as defined in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 890: see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 425 et seq. This power goes wider than the Transparency Obligations Directive. In addition, the Secretary of State may make regulations: (1) for the purpose of implementing, enabling the implementation of or dealing with matters arising out of or related to, any Community obligation relating to the corporate governance of issuers who have requested or approved admission of their securities to trading on a regulated market (Companies Act 2006 s 1273(1)(a)); (2) about corporate governance in relation to such issuers for the purpose of implementing, or dealing with matters arising out of or related to, any Community obligation (s 1273(1)(b)). As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6. For these purposes, 'corporate governance', in relation to an issuer, includes: (a) the nature, constitution or functions of the organs of the issuer (s 1273(2)(a)); (b) the manner in which organs of the issuer conduct themselves (s 1273(2)(b)); (c) the requirements imposed on organs of the issuer (s 1273(2)(c)); (d) the relationship between different organs of the issuer (s 1273(2)(d)); (e) the relationship between the organs of the issuer and the members of the issuer or holders of the issuer's securities (s 1273(2)(e)). For these purposes, 'issuer', 'securities' and 'regulated market' have the same meaning as in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt VI (ss 72-103) (Official Listing) (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 387 et seq): Companies Act 2006 s 1273(6). The regulations may make provision by reference to any specified code on corporate governance that may be issued from time to time by a specified body, may create new criminal offences (subject to s 1273(4)) and may make provision excluding liability in damages in respect of things done or omitted for the purposes of, or in connection with, the carrying on, or purported carrying on, of any specified activities: s 1273(3). For these purposes, 'specified' means specified in the regulations: s 1273(3). The regulations may not create a criminal offence punishable by a greater penalty than (on indictment) a fine or (on summary conviction) a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum or (if calculated on a daily basis) £100 a day:

s 1273(4). As to the meaning of the 'statutory maximum' see PARA 1622. Regulations under s 1273 are subject to negative resolution procedure (ie the statutory instrument containing the regulations is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament): ss 1273(5), 1289. As to the making of regulations under the Companies Act 2006 generally see ss 1288-1292. At the date at which this volume states the law, no such regulations have been made in exercise of the power conferred by s 1273.

30 Ie EC Council Directive 2003/6 (OJ L96, 12.4.2003, p 16) on insider dealing and market manipulation (market abuse). Several implementing measures have been adopted by the EC Commission pursuant to Directive 2003/6:

- 13 (1) EC Commission Regulation 2273/2003 of 22 December 2003 (OJ L336, 23.12.2003, p 33) implementing Directive 2003/6/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council as regards exemptions for buy-back programmes and stabilisation of financial instruments;
- 14 (2) EC Commission Directive 2003/124 of 22 December 2003 (OJ L339, 24.12.2003, p 70) implementing Directive 2003/6/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council as regards the definition and public disclosure of inside information and the definition of market manipulation;
- 15 (3) EC Commission Directive 2003/125 of 22 December 2003 (OJ L339, 24.12.2003, p 73) implementing Directive 2003/6/EC of the European Parliament and of the Council as regards the fair presentation of investment recommendations and the disclosure of conflicts of interest;
- 16 (4) EC Commission Directive 2004/72 (OJ L162, 30.4.2004, p 70) implementing Directive 2003/6 as regards accepted market practices, the definition of inside information in relation to derivatives on commodities, the drawing up of lists of insiders, the notification of managers' transactions and the notification of suspicious transactions.

EC Council Directive 2003/6 (OJ L96, 12.4.2003, p 16) replaced EC Council Directive 89/592 (OJ L334, 11.11.89, p 30), for the purpose of implementing which the Criminal Justice Act 1993 Pt V (ss 52-64) was made (see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE).

31 Ie EC Council Directive 2001/23 (OJ L82, 22.3.2001, p 16) on the approximation of the laws of the Member States relating to the safeguarding of employees' rights in the event of transfers of undertakings, businesses or parts of undertakings or businesses. This Directive replaced EC Council Directive 77/187 (OJ L61, 5.3.77, p 26) (amended by EC Council Directive 98/50 (OJ L201, 17.7.98, p 88)), for the purpose of implementing which the Transfer of Undertakings (Protection of Employment) Regulations 2006, SI 2006/246 have been made (see EMPLOYMENT vol 39 (2009) PARA 111 et seq).

32 Ie European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2002/14 (OJ L80, 23.2.2002, p 29) of 11 March 2002.

See also European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2009/38 (OJ L122, 16.5.2009, p 28) of 6 May 2009 on the establishment of a European Works Council or a procedure in Community-scale undertakings and Community-scale groups of undertakings for the purposes of informing and consulting employees, which repealed EC Council Directive 94/45 (OJ L254, 30.9.94, p 64) (repealed) on the establishment of a European Works Council and EC Council Directive 97/74 (OJ L10, 16.1.98, p 22) (repealed) which extended EC Council Directive 94/45 to the United Kingdom, and for the purpose of implementing which the Transnational Information and Consultation of Employees Regulations 1999, SI 1999/3323, were made (see EMPLOYMENT vol 41 (2009) PARA 1205 et seq).

NOTES 6, 7, 10, 20--Directive 77/91, Directive 78/855, Directive 82/891, and Directive 2005/56 amended: European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2009/109 (OJ L259, 2.10.2009, p 14).

NOTE 22--Directive 89/667 replaced: European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2009/102 (OJ L258, 1.10.2009, p 20).

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(1) IN GENERAL/(i) Application of the Present Statute Law/24. Meanings of 'company' and 'UK-registered company' in the Companies Acts.

2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS

(1) IN GENERAL

(i) Application of the Present Statute Law

24. Meanings of 'company' and 'UK-registered company' in the Companies Acts.

In the Companies Acts¹, unless the context otherwise requires, 'company' means a company formed and registered under the Companies Act 2006², that is:

- 46 (1) a company so formed and registered after the commencement of Part 1 of the 2006 Act³; or
- 47 (2) a company that, immediately before the commencement of Part 1 of the 2006 Act, either: (a) was formed and registered under the Companies Act 1985⁴; or (b) was an existing company for the purposes of the 1985 Act⁵, which is to be treated on commencement as if formed and registered under the Companies Act 2006⁶.

In the Companies Acts, 'UK-registered company' means a company registered under the Companies Act 2006, but does not include an overseas company⁷ that has complied with the statutory duty to register particulars in specified circumstances⁸.

1 As to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' for these purposes see PARA 16.

2 Companies Act 2006 s 1(1). As to company formation and registration under the Companies Act 2006, and the different forms that such a company may take, see PARA 72 et seq. As to companies not registered, or registered but not formed, under the Companies Act 2006, and as to overseas companies, see PARA 32. As to the meaning of 'company' more generally see PARA 1.

3 Companies Act 2006 s 1(1)(a). The date of commencement for Pt 1 (ss 1, 3-6) was 1 October 2009: see the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, art 3(a). The dates of commencement for the Companies Act 2006 Pt 1 (s 2) were 1 January 2007 and 20 January 2007 for certain purposes (see the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 1, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2006, SI 2006/3428, arts 2(2)(a), 3(2)(a)) and 6 April 2007 for remaining purposes (see the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 2, Consequential Amendments, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2007, SI 2007/1093, art 2(1)(a)).

In the definition of 'company' in the Companies Act 2006 s 1, the reference to a company formed and registered after the commencement of Pt 1 (ss 1-6) must be read as a reference to a company formed and registered on an application received by the registrar on or after 1 October 2009 and made in accordance with ss 7-16 (see PARA 102 et seq): see the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, art 5, Sch 2 para 2(1), (6)(a).

4 Companies Act 2006 s 1(1)(b)(i). Head (2)(a) in the text applies equally to a company that was formed and registered under the Companies (Northern Ireland) Order 1986, SI 1986/1032 (NI 6): see the Companies Act 2006 s 1(1)(b)(i).

In the definition of 'company' in s 1, the reference to a company formed and registered under the Companies Act 1985 immediately before the commencement of the Companies Act 2006 Pt 1 includes a company formed and registered on an application for registration if it is received by the registrar, and if the requirements as to registration that are set out in the corresponding provisions of the Companies Act 1985 are met in relation to it, before 1 October 2009: see the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, Sch 2 para 2(3), (6)(b). See PARA 17 note 4.

5 Companies Act 2006 s 1(1)(b)(ii). Head (2)(b) in the text applies equally to a company that was an existing company for the purposes of the Companies (Northern Ireland) Order 1986, SI 1986/1032 (NI 6): see the Companies Act 2006 s 1(1)(b)(ii). As to general savings for existing companies etc under the Companies Act 2006 see PARA 18.

For the purposes of the Companies Act 1985, 'existing company' was defined as a company formed and registered under the former Companies Acts, but did not include a company registered under the Joint Stock Companies Acts, the Companies Act 1862 or the Companies (Consolidation) Act 1908 in what was then Ireland: Companies Act 1985 s 735(1)(b) (repealed). The 'former Companies Acts' were defined as the Joint Stock Companies Acts, the Companies Act 1862, the Companies (Consolidation) Act 1908, the Companies Act 1929 and the Companies Acts 1948 to 1983: Companies Act 1985 s 735(1)(c) (repealed). The 'Joint Stock Companies Acts' were defined as the Joint Stock Companies Act 1856, the Joint Stock Companies Acts 1856, 1857, the Joint Stock Banking Companies Act 1857 and the Act to enable Joint Stock Banking Companies to be formed on the principle of limited liability, or any one or more of those Acts (as the case may require), but did not include the Joint Stock Companies Act 1844: Companies Act 1985 s 735(3) (repealed). As to the meaning of the 'former Companies Acts' for the purposes of the Companies Acts, which restates the definition of the 'Joint Stock Companies Acts' given above, see PARA 18 note 1. As to the Acts which may be cited as 'the Companies Acts 1948 to 1983' see PARA 13.

7 As to the meaning of 'overseas company' see PARA 1824.

8 Companies Act 2006 s 1158. The text refers to an overseas company that has registered particulars under s 1046 (see PARA 1826): see s 1158.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(1) IN GENERAL/(i) Application of the Present Statute Law/25. Meanings of 'subsidiary', 'holding company' and 'wholly-owned subsidiary'.

25. Meanings of 'subsidiary', 'holding company' and 'wholly-owned subsidiary'.

A company¹ is a 'subsidiary' of another company, its 'holding company', if that other company:

- 48 (1) holds a majority of the voting rights in it²; or
- 49 (2) is a member of it and has the right to appoint or remove a majority of its board of directors³; or
- 50 (3) is a member of it and controls alone, pursuant to an agreement with other members, a majority of the voting rights in it⁴, or if it is a subsidiary of a company which is itself a subsidiary of that other company⁵.

A company is a 'wholly-owned subsidiary' of another company if it has no members except that other and that other's wholly-owned subsidiaries or persons acting on behalf of that other or its wholly-owned subsidiaries⁶.

Rights which are exercisable only in certain circumstances are taken into account only when the circumstances have arisen, and for so long as they continue to obtain, or when the circumstances are within the control of the person having the rights⁷. Rights which are normally exercisable but are temporarily incapable of exercise must continue to be taken into account⁸.

Rights held by a person⁹ in a fiduciary capacity are treated as not held by him¹⁰.

Rights held by a person as nominee for another are treated as held by the other¹¹.

Rights attached to shares held by way of security are treated as held by the person providing the security¹²:

- 51 (a) where apart from the right to exercise them for the purpose of preserving the value of the security, or of realising it, the rights are exercisable only in accordance with his instructions¹³;
- 52 (b) where the shares are held in connection with the granting of loans as part of normal business activities and apart from the right to exercise them for the purpose of preserving the value of the security, or of realising it, the rights are exercisable only in his interests¹⁴.

Rights are treated as held by a company if they are held by any of its subsidiary companies¹⁵. However, nothing in the provisions relating to rights held by one person as nominee for another¹⁶, or in the provisions relating to rights attached to shares held by way of security¹⁷ is to be construed as requiring rights held by a company to be treated as held by any of its subsidiaries¹⁸.

The voting rights in a company are to be reduced by any rights held by the company itself¹⁹.

The Secretary of State²⁰ may by regulations²¹ amend the provisions which relate to the meanings of 'subsidiary', 'holding company' and 'wholly-owned subsidiary'²² so as to alter the meanings of those expressions²³.

1 For the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 s 1159 and s 1159(3), Sch 6, 'company' includes any body corporate: s 1159(4). As to the meaning of 'body corporate' for the purposes of the Companies Acts see PARA 1 note 5; and as to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24. As to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' for these purposes see PARA 16.

2 Companies Act 2006 s 1159(1)(a). For the purposes of s 1159(1)(a), (c) (see heads (1) and (3) in the text), the references to the voting rights in a company are references to the rights conferred on shareholders in respect of their shares or, in the case of a company not having a share capital, on members, to vote at general meetings of the company on all, or substantially all, matters: Sch 6 paras 1, 2. As to the meaning of 'member' see PARA 321; and as to the meaning of 'share' and 'company having a share capital' see PARA 1042. As to share capital, including the allotment of shares, see PARA 1042 et seq; and as to shareholders and membership of companies generally see PARA 321 et seq. As to company meetings see PARA 629 et seq.

3 Companies Act 2006 s 1159(1)(b). For the purposes of s 1159(1)(b), the reference to the right to appoint or remove a majority of the board of directors is a reference to the right to appoint or remove directors holding a majority of the voting rights at meetings of the board on all, or substantially all, matters: Sch 6 paras 1, 3(1). For these purposes: (1) a company is treated as having the right to appoint to a directorship if a person's appointment to it follows necessarily from his appointment as director of the company or if the directorship is held by the company itself (Sch 6 paras 1, 3(2)); and (2) a right to appoint or remove which is exercisable only with the consent or concurrence of another person must be left out of account unless no other person has a right to appoint or, as the case may be, remove in relation to that directorship (Sch 6 paras 1, 3(3)). As to the meaning of 'director' see PARA 478. As to meetings of directors, and the rights of appointment etc, see PARA 528 et seq.

NOTE 5--Enviroco, cited, reversed: [2009] EWCA Civ 1399, [2009] All ER (D) 206 (Dec).

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(1) IN GENERAL/(i) Application of the Present Statute Law/26. Meanings of 'parent undertaking', 'subsidiary undertaking' etc in the Companies Acts.

26. Meanings of 'parent undertaking', 'subsidiary undertaking' etc in the Companies Acts.

For the purposes of the Companies Acts¹, the expressions 'parent undertaking' and 'subsidiary undertaking' are to be construed as follows².

An undertaking is a 'parent undertaking' in relation to another undertaking, a 'subsidiary undertaking', if:

- 53 (1) it holds a majority of the voting rights³ in the undertaking⁴;
- 54 (2) it is a member of the undertaking and has the right to appoint or remove a majority of its board of directors⁵;
- 55 (3) it has the right to exercise a dominant influence over the undertaking⁶ by virtue of provisions contained in the undertaking's articles⁷ or by virtue of a control contract⁸; or
- 56 (4) it is a member of the undertaking and controls alone, pursuant to an agreement with other shareholders or members, a majority of the voting rights⁹ in the undertaking¹⁰.

For these purposes, an undertaking is treated as a member of another undertaking if any of its subsidiary undertakings is a member of that undertaking or if any shares in that other undertaking are held by a person acting on behalf of the undertaking or any of its subsidiary undertakings¹¹.

An undertaking is also a parent undertaking in relation to another undertaking, a 'subsidiary undertaking', if it has the power to exercise, or actually exercises, dominant influence¹² or control over it¹³, or if it and the subsidiary undertaking are managed on a unified basis¹⁴.

A parent undertaking is treated as the parent undertaking of undertakings in relation to which any of its subsidiary undertakings are, or are to be treated as, parent undertakings; and references to its subsidiary undertakings must be construed accordingly¹⁵.

References in the Companies Acts to 'fellow subsidiary undertakings' are to undertakings which are subsidiary undertakings of the same parent undertaking but are not parent undertakings or subsidiary undertakings of each other¹⁶.

1 As to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

2 Companies Act 2006 s 1162(1). The expressions 'parent undertaking' and 'subsidiary undertaking' are defined by s 1162 and s 1162(6), Sch 7 for the purposes mentioned in the text: see s 1162(1). See also PARA 27. In the Companies Acts, 'undertaking' means either a body corporate or partnership, or an unincorporated association carrying on a trade or business, with or without a view to profit (s 1161(1)); and 'parent company' means a company that is a parent undertaking (as defined by s 1162, Sch 7) (s 1173(1)). Other expressions appropriate to companies are to be construed, in relation to an undertaking which is not a company, as references to the corresponding persons, officers, documents or organs, as the case may be, appropriate to undertakings of that description: s 1161(3). This is subject to provision in any specific context providing for the translation of such expressions: s 1161(3). As to the meanings of 'carry on', 'business' and 'gain' generally see PARA 1 note 1. As to the meaning of 'body corporate' for the purposes of the Companies Acts see PARA 1 note 5; and as to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24. As to the meaning of 'officer' generally under the Companies Act 2006 see PARA 607. As to companies and corporations and partnerships etc see PARAS 2-4.

3 For the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 s 1162(2)(a), (d) (see heads (1) and (4) in the text), the references to the voting rights in an undertaking are references to the rights conferred on shareholders in respect of their shares or, in the case of an undertaking not having a share capital, on members, to vote at general meetings of the undertaking on all, or substantially all, matters: Sch 7 paras 1, 2(1). In relation to an undertaking which does not have general meetings at which matters are decided by the exercise of voting rights, the references to the holding of a majority of the voting rights in the undertaking are to be construed as references to having the right under the constitution of the undertaking to direct the overall policy of the undertaking or to alter the terms of its constitution: Sch 7 paras 1, 2(2). As to the meaning of 'member' see PARA 321; and as to the meanings of 'share' and 'company having a share capital' see PARA 1042. As to share capital, including the allotment of shares, see PARA 1042 et seq; and as to shareholders and membership of companies generally see PARA 321 et seq. As to company meetings see PARA 629 et seq.

In s 1162 and Sch 7, references to shares, in relation to an undertaking, are to allotted shares: s 1162(7). In the Companies Acts, references to shares: (1) in relation to an undertaking with capital but no share capital, are references to rights to share in the capital of the undertaking (Companies Act 2006 s 1161(2)(a)); and (2) in relation to an undertaking without capital, are references to interests conferring any right to share in the profits or liability to contribute to the losses of the undertaking, or to interests giving rise to an obligation to contribute to the debts or expenses of the undertaking in the event of a winding up (s 1161(2)(b)). As to winding up in general see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 432 et seq.

4 Companies Act 2006 s 1162(2)(a).

5 Companies Act 2006 s 1162(2)(b). For these purposes, the reference to the right to appoint or remove a majority of the board of directors is a reference to the right to appoint or remove directors holding a majority of the voting rights at meetings of the board on all, or substantially all, matters: Sch 7 paras 1, 3(1). An undertaking is treated as having the right to appoint to a directorship if a person's appointment to it follows necessarily from his appointment as director of the undertaking, or if the directorship is held by the undertaking itself: Sch 7 paras 1, 3(2). A right to appoint or remove which is exercisable only with the consent or concurrence of another person must be left out of account unless no other person has a right to appoint or, as the case may be, remove in relation to that directorship: Sch 7 paras 1, 3(3). As to the meaning of 'director' see PARA 478. As to meetings of directors, and the rights of appointment etc, see PARA 528 et seq.

6 For these purposes, an undertaking is not to be regarded as having the right to exercise a dominant influence over another undertaking unless it has a right to give directions with respect to the operating and financial policies of that other undertaking which its directors are obliged to comply with whether or not they are for the benefit of that other undertaking: Companies Act 2006 Sch 7 paras 1, 4(1). However, Sch 7 para 4 is not to be read as affecting the construction of the expression 'actually exercises a dominant influence' in s 1162(4)(a) (see the text and notes 12-13): Sch 7 paras 1, 4(3).

7 As to the meaning of references to a company's 'articles' see PARA 228 note 2. As to a company's articles of association generally see PARA 228 et seq.

8 Companies Act 2006 s 1162(2)(c). For these purposes, a 'control contract' means a contract in writing conferring such a right which is of a kind authorised by the articles of the undertaking in relation to which the right is exercisable, and which is permitted by the law under which that undertaking is established: Sch 7 paras 1, 4(2). See also note 6.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(1) IN GENERAL/(i) Application of the Present Statute Law/27. Rights in relation to parent and subsidiary undertakings.

27. Rights in relation to parent and subsidiary undertakings.

In relation to parent and subsidiary undertakings¹, rights which are exercisable only in certain circumstances are to be taken into account only when the circumstances have arisen (and only for so long as they continue to obtain), or when the circumstances are within the control of the person having the rights². Rights which are normally exercisable but are temporarily incapable of exercise must continue to be taken into account³.

Rights held by a person⁴ in a fiduciary capacity are to be treated as not held by him⁵.

Rights held by a person as nominee for another are to be treated as held by the other⁶.

Rights attached to shares⁷ held by way of security are to be treated as held by the person providing the security⁸:

- 57 (1) where, apart from the right to exercise them for the purpose of preserving the value of the security, or of realising it, the rights are exercisable only in accordance with his instructions⁹; and
- 58 (2) where the shares are held in connection with the granting of loans as part of normal business activities and apart from the right to exercise them for the purpose of preserving the value of the security, or of realising it, the rights are exercisable only in his interests¹⁰.

Rights are to be treated as held by a parent undertaking if they are held by any of its subsidiary undertakings¹¹. However, nothing in the provisions relating to rights held by a person as nominee for another¹², or in the provisions relating to rights attached to shares held by way of security¹³ is to be construed as requiring rights held by a parent undertaking to be treated as held by any of its subsidiary undertakings¹⁴.

The voting rights in an undertaking must be reduced by any rights held by the undertaking itself¹⁵.

8 Companies Act 2006 Sch 7 paras 1, 8. See note 4.

9 Companies Act 2006 Sch 7 paras 1, 8(a). For these purposes, rights are to be treated as being exercisable in accordance with the instructions or in the interests of an undertaking if they are exercisable in accordance with the instructions of or, as the case may be, in the interests of any group undertaking: Sch 7 paras 1, 9(3). In the Companies Acts, 'group undertaking', in relation to an undertaking, means an undertaking which is either a parent undertaking or subsidiary undertaking of that undertaking, or a subsidiary undertaking of any parent undertaking of that undertaking: s 1161(5).

28. Meaning of 'dormant company'.

For the purposes of the Companies Acts¹, a company² is 'dormant' during any period in which it has no significant accounting transaction³.

In determining whether or when a company is dormant, there must be disregarded⁴:

- 59 (1) any transaction arising from the taking of shares⁵ in the company by a subscriber to the memorandum⁶ as a result of an undertaking of his in connection with the formation of the company⁷;
- 60 (2) any transaction consisting of the payment of: (a) a fee to the registrar⁸ on a change of the company's name⁹; (b) a fee to the registrar on the re-registration of the company¹⁰; (c) a penalty¹¹ for failure to file accounts¹²; or (d) a fee to the registrar for the registration of an annual return¹³.

Any reference in the Companies Acts to a body corporate¹⁴ other than a company being dormant has a corresponding meaning¹⁵.

29. Geographical extent of the Companies Acts.

Except as otherwise provided (or the context otherwise requires), the provisions of the Companies Act 2006 extend to the whole of the United Kingdom¹.

Specific provision is made also to extend the Companies Acts² and related legislation to Northern Ireland³.

In the Companies Acts, 'EEA company' and 'EEA undertaking' mean a company⁴ or undertaking governed by the law of an EEA State⁵.

1 Companies Act 2006 s 1299. Since 1929, and before the advent of the Companies Act 2006, Companies Acts legislation had extended to Great Britain only: see PARA 11. As to the meanings of 'Great Britain' and 'United Kingdom' see PARA 1 note 5. One of the main aims of the Company Law Review Steering Group (CLRSG) (as to which see PARA 16 note 1) was to make company law a less devolved matter than previously: see Modern Company Law: For A Competitive Economy - Final Report (2001) (URN 01/943) paras 11.21-11.33. Nevertheless, certain provisions of the Companies Act 2006 do not extend to Scotland (see eg s 42 (constitutional limitations: companies that are charities) (see PARA 265); s 45 (common seal) (see PARA 283); s 49(3) (the official seal when duly affixed to a document has the same effect as the company's common seal) (see PARA 290); s 181 (modification of provisions in relation to charitable companies) (see PARA 533); s 508 (guidance for regulatory and prosecuting authorities: England, Wales and Northern Ireland) (see PARA 937); s 1084 (records relating to companies that have been dissolved etc) (see PARA 146)); and other provisions of the 2006 Act either have particular application to Scotland or form part of the law of Scotland only (see eg s 48 (formalities of doing business under the law of Scotland); Pt 11 Ch 2 (ss 265-269) (derivative proceedings in Scotland); s 483 (Scottish public sector companies: audit by Auditor General for Scotland); s 509 (guidance for regulatory authorities: Scotland); s 742 (debentures to bearer (Scotland)); s 781 (offences in connection with share warrants (Scotland)); Pt 25 Ch 2 (ss 878-892) (company charges: companies registered in Scotland); and ss 1020-1022 (effect of Crown disclaimer: Scotland)).

Despite the main geographical extent of the Companies Act 2006, registration must remain separate for England and Wales, for Scotland and for Northern Ireland due to differences in other aspects of the law that affect companies; also, language provisions may allow a company to elect to locate its registered office in Wales: see PARAS 129, 130.

2 As to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

3 See the Companies Act 2006 Pt 45 (ss 1284-1287). This extension may have definitional consequences because, under the Companies Act 2006, companies fall under the umbrella of 'UK companies' rather than 'GB companies' or 'Northern Ireland companies': see PARA 24. However, this extension does not affect the legislative competence of Northern Ireland: formally, company law remains a transferred matter (see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS), and a future Northern Ireland Assembly could separately amend or repeal the Companies Act 2006 in Northern Ireland if that were so desired: see Explanatory Notes to the Companies Act 2006 paras 12, 1706.

4 As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24.

5 Companies Act 2006 s 1170. For these purposes, 'EEA state', in relation to any time, means a state which at that time is a member state or any other state which at that time is a party to the EEA agreement, where 'EEA Agreement' means the Agreement on the European Economic Area (Oporto, 2 May 1992; EC 7 (1992); Cm 2183) as adjusted by the Protocol (Brussels, 17 March 1993; EC 2 (1993); Cm 2183), as modified or supplemented from time to time: see the Interpretation Act 1978 s 5, Sch 1 (definitions added by the Legislative and Regulatory Reform Act 2006 s 26(1)); definition of 'EEA state' applied by the Companies Act 2006 s 1170 (definition substituted by SI 2007/732). As to the meaning of 'member state' see the European Communities Act 1972 s 1(2), Sch 1 Pt II; and the Interpretation Act 1978 s 5, Sch 1.

UPDATE

30 Application of the statute law to other forms of business organisation

NOTE 1--SI 2008/1911 amended: SI 2009/1804.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(1) IN GENERAL/(i) Application of the Present Statute Law/31. Companies and associations incapable of registration.

31. Companies and associations incapable of registration.

The companies or associations which may not be registered under the Companies Act 2006 are:

- 61 (1) trade unions and other organisations of workers¹;
- 62 (2) one or more persons associated together for any unlawful purpose²; and
- 63 (3) companies not formed under the companies legislation and prohibited in express terms by the Companies Act 2006 from registering thereunder³.

1 A trade union, other than a special register body, may not be registered as a company under the Companies Act 2006; and any such registration of a trade union, whenever effected, is void: see the Trade Union and Labour Relations (Consolidation) Act 1992 ss 10(3)(a), 117(3)(a)(ii); and EMPLOYMENT vol 40 (2009)

PARA 852. As to the meaning of 'special register body' for these purposes see EMPLOYMENT vol 40 (2009) PARA 854.

2 See the Companies Act 2006 s 7(1), (2), which specifies that a company duly formed under the Act by one or more persons may not be so formed for an unlawful purpose; and see PARAS 102, 106.

3 See the Companies Act 2006 s 1040; and PARA 33.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(1) IN GENERAL/(i) Application of the Present Statute Law/32. Companies not registered, or registered but not formed, under the Companies Act 2006; overseas companies.

32. Companies not registered, or registered but not formed, under the Companies Act 2006; overseas companies.

Certain specified provisions of the Companies Acts¹ apply to: (1) companies² registered, but not formed, under the Companies Act 2006³; (2) bodies incorporated in the United Kingdom⁴ but not registered under the 2006 Act⁵; (3) companies incorporated outside the United Kingdom (overseas companies)⁶.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(1) IN GENERAL/(ii) Companies not Formed under Companies Legislation but Authorised to Register/A. IN GENERAL/33. Classes of company not formed under companies legislation but authorised to register.

(ii) Companies not Formed under Companies Legislation but Authorised to Register

A. IN GENERAL

33. Classes of company not formed under companies legislation but authorised to register.

Any of the following companies¹ may on making application register² under the Companies Act 2006³:

- 64 (1) any company that was in existence on 2 November 1862⁴, including any company registered under the Joint Stock Companies Acts⁵;
- 65 (2) any company formed after 2 November 1862, whether before or after 1 October 2009⁶, either in pursuance of an Act of Parliament (other than the Companies Act 2006 or any of the former Companies Acts)⁷ or in pursuance of letters patent⁸, or any such company that is otherwise duly constituted according to law⁹.

Such a company may¹⁰ register as an unlimited company¹¹, as a company limited by shares¹², or as a company limited by guarantee¹³.

However, a company having the liability of its members¹⁴ limited by Act of Parliament or letters patent:

- 66 (a) may not so register¹⁵ unless it is a joint stock company¹⁶; and
- 67 (b) may not so register¹⁷ as an unlimited company or a company limited by guarantee¹⁸.

A company that is not a joint stock company may not so register¹⁹ as a company limited by shares²⁰.

The registration of a company in this way²¹ is not invalid by reason that it has taken place with a view to the company being wound up²². However, registration after the commencement of a winding up is a nullity²³.

A company governed by a deed of settlement may register under the Companies Acts with a view to going into voluntary liquidation, and then selling its assets to another company under the statutory provisions relating to winding up²⁴. However, by registering in this way, a company may lose powers which it possessed under its former constitution²⁵.

The Secretary of State²⁶ may make provision by regulations²⁷:

- 68 (i) for and in connection with the registration of companies so authorised to register²⁸ under the Companies Act 2006²⁹; and
- 69 (ii) as to the application to companies so registered of the provisions of the Companies Acts³⁰.

Without prejudice to the generality of that power, such regulations may make provision corresponding to any provision formerly made by those sections of the Companies Act 1985³¹ that governed companies not formed under companies legislation but authorised to register³².

Accordingly, provisions have been made in regulations³³ which apply in relation to the registration of a company³⁴ under the Companies Act 2006³⁵ in cases where companies have not been formed under companies legislation but are authorised to register thereunder³⁶.

1 As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

2 As to the provision that may be made for registration see the text and notes 26-32. As to registration under the Companies Act 2006 generally see PARA 111 et seq.

B. REQUIREMENTS FOR REGISTRATION

34. Requirement for assent before registration of companies authorised to register.

A company must not register¹ without the assent of a majority of such of its members² as are present in person or by proxy (in cases where proxies are allowed) at a general meeting summoned for the purpose³. Where a company not having the liability of its members limited by an enactment or letters patent wishes to register as a limited company⁴, the majority required to assent that is required⁵ is not less than 75 per cent of the members present in person or by proxy at the meeting⁶.

1 le in pursuance of the Companies Act 2006 s 1040 (see PARA 33). The provisions of the Companies (Companies Authorised to Register) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2437, Pt 2 (regs 2-12) (see also PARAS 35-37, 40) apply in relation to the registration of a company under the Companies Act 2006 in pursuance of the Companies Act 2006 s 1040 (companies not formed under companies legislation but authorised to register): see the Companies (Companies Authorised to Register) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2437, reg 2(1); and PARA 33. As to the meaning of references to a company and to registration for these purposes see PARA 33 note 34.

2 As to membership of companies generally see PARA 321 et seq.

3 Companies (Companies Authorised to Register) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2437, reg 3(1). Where the company proposes to register as a company limited by guarantee, the members' assent to its being registered must be accompanied by a resolution containing a statement of guarantee: see reg 6(1); and PARA 35. As to company meetings see PARA 629 et seq. As to the meanings of 'company limited by shares', 'company limited by guarantee' and 'limited company' see PARA 102.

4 As to the meaning of 'limited company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 102.

5 le as required by the Companies (Companies Authorised to Register) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2437, reg 3(1) (see the text and notes 1-3): see reg 3(2).

6 Companies (Companies Authorised to Register) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2437, reg 3(2). In computing any majority under reg 3 when a poll is demanded, regard is to be had to the number of votes to which each member is entitled according to the company's regulations: reg 3(3).

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(1) IN GENERAL/(ii) Companies not Formed under Companies Legislation but Authorised to Register/B. REQUIREMENTS FOR REGISTRATION/35. Application for registration where a company is authorised to register.

35. Application for registration where a company is authorised to register.

An application for the registration of a company which has been authorised to register under the Companies Act 2006¹ must be delivered to the registrar of companies together with the documents that are required² and a statement of compliance³. The application for registration must state:

- 70 (1) the name with which the company is proposed to be registered⁴;
- 71 (2) whether the company's registered office⁵ is to be situated in England and Wales⁶ (or in Wales), in Scotland or in Northern Ireland⁷;
- 72 (3) whether the liability of the members of the company is to be limited, and if so whether it is to be limited by shares or by guarantee⁸; and
- 73 (4) whether the company is to be a private or a public company⁹.

The application must contain (in the case of a joint stock company¹⁰) a statement of capital and initial shareholdings¹¹, (in the case of a company that is to be limited by guarantee) a statement of guarantee¹², and a statement of the company's proposed officers¹³. The application also must contain a statement of the intended address of the company's registered office¹⁴, and a copy of any enactment, royal charter, letters patent, deed of settlement, contract of partnership or other instrument constituting or regulating the company¹⁵. The application must be delivered to the registrar of companies for England and Wales, if the registered office of the company is to be situated in England and Wales (or in Wales)¹⁶.

1 le in pursuance of the Companies Act 2006 s 1040 (see PARA 33). The provisions of the Companies (Companies Authorised to Register) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2437, Pt 2 (regs 2-12) (see also PARAS 33-34, 36-37, 40) apply in relation to the registration of a company under the Companies Act 2006 in pursuance of the Companies Act 2006 s 1040 (companies not formed under companies legislation but authorised to register): see the Companies (Companies Authorised to Register) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2437, reg 2(1); and PARA 33. As to the meaning of references to a company and to registration for these purposes see PARA 33 note 34.

2 le required by the Companies (Companies Authorised to Register) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2437, reg 4 (see the text and notes 10-15): see reg 4(1).

3 Companies (Companies Authorised to Register) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2437, reg 4(1). The statement of compliance required to be delivered to the registrar is a statement that the requirements of Pt 2 (see also PARAS 33-34, 36-37, 40) as to registration have been complied with: reg 8(1). The registrar may accept the statement of compliance as sufficient evidence of compliance: reg 8(2). As to the registrar of companies see PARA 131 et seq. As to the delivery of documents to the registrar see PARA 141; and as to the requirements generally for the proper delivery of documents to the registrar see PARA 142.

4 Companies (Companies Authorised to Register) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2437, reg 4(2)(a). As to the company's name see PARA 37. As to restrictions on the use of company names and trading names generally see PARA 196 et seq.

5 As to the company's registered office see PARA 129.

6 As to the meanings of 'England' and 'Wales' see PARA 1 note 5.

9 Companies (Companies Authorised to Register) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2437, reg 4(2)(d). As to the meanings of 'private company' and 'public company' see PARA 102.

10 As to the meaning of 'joint stock company' for these purposes see PARA 33 note 16.

11 Companies (Companies Authorised to Register) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2437, reg 4(3)(a). As to the statement of capital and initial shareholdings required in the case of a joint stock company see reg 5: see reg 4(3)(a). Accordingly, the statement of capital and initial shareholdings that is required to be delivered in the case of a joint stock company must comply with reg 5: reg 5(1). It must state:

- 19 (1) the total number of shares of the company that on a date specified in the statement (the 'reference date') are held by members of the company (reg 5(2)(a));
- 20 (2) the aggregate nominal value of those shares (reg 5(2)(b));
- 21 (3) for each class of shares: (a) the particulars specified in heads (i) to (iv) below of the rights attached to the shares (reg 5(2)(c)(i)); (b) the total number of shares of that class (reg 5(2)(c)(ii)); and (c) the aggregate nominal value of shares of that class (reg 5(2)(c)(iii)); and
- 22 (4) the amount to be paid up and the amount (if any) to be unpaid on each share (whether on account of the nominal value of the share or by way of premium) (reg 5(2)(c)(iv)).

For these purposes, the reference date must be not more than 28 days before the date of the application for registration: reg 5(3). The particulars referred to in head (3)(a) above are: (i) particulars of any voting rights attached to the shares, including rights that arise only in certain circumstances (reg 5(4)(a)); (ii) particulars of any rights attached to the shares, as respects dividends, to participate in a distribution (reg 5(4)(b)); (iii) particulars of any rights attached to the shares, as respects capital, to participate in a distribution (including on winding up) (reg 5(4)(c)); and (iv) whether the shares are to be redeemed or are liable to be redeemed at the option of the company or the shareholder (reg 5(4)(d)). As to the nominal value of shares, and as to paid up and unpaid shares, see PARA 1042 et seq. As to classes of shares, and rights attached to classes of shares generally, see PARA 1057 et seq; as to redeemable shares see PARAS 1052, 1229 et seq; and as to distributions and dividends see PARA 1389 et seq. As to winding up in general see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 432 et seq.

The statement of capital and initial shareholdings must also state the names and service addresses of all persons who on the reference date were members of the company (reg 5(5)(a)), and, with respect to each member of the company, the number, nominal value (of each share) and class of shares held by that member on that date (reg 5(5)(b)(i)), and the amount to be paid up and the amount (if any) to be unpaid on each share (whether on account of the nominal value of the share or by way of premium) (reg 5(5)(b)(ii)). For the purposes of reg 5(5)(a), a person's 'name' means his Christian name (or other forename) and surname, except that in the case of a peer, or an individual usually known by a title, the title may be stated instead of his Christian name (or other forename) and surname or in addition to either or both of them: reg 5(6). Where a member of the company holds shares of more than one class, the information required under reg 5(5)(b)(i) is required for each class: reg 5(7).

12 Companies (Companies Authorised to Register) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2437, reg 4(3)(b). As to the statement of guarantee required in the case of a company that is to be limited by guarantee see reg 6: see reg 4(3)(b). Where the company proposes to register as a company limited by guarantee, the members' assent to its being registered (see reg 3; and PARA 34) must be accompanied by a resolution containing a statement of guarantee: reg 6(1). The statement of guarantee required is a statement that each member undertakes that, if the company is wound up while he is a member, or within one year after he ceases to be a member, he will contribute to the assets of the company such amount as may be required for (reg 6(2)):

- 23 (1) payment of the debts and liabilities of the company contracted before he ceases to be a member (reg 6(2)(a));
- 24 (2) payment of the costs, charges and expenses of winding up (reg 6(2)(b)); and
- 25 (3) adjustment of the rights of the contributories among themselves (reg 6(2)(c)), not exceeding a specified amount (reg 6(2)). The statement of guarantee required to be delivered to the registrar in the case of a company that is to be limited by guarantee is a copy of the resolution containing the statement of guarantee: reg 6(3).

13 Companies (Companies Authorised to Register) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2437, reg 4(3)(c). The text refers to the statement of the company's proposed officers whose required particulars are specified in reg 7: see reg 4(3)(c). Accordingly, the statement of the company's proposed officers required to be delivered to the registrar must contain the required particulars of:

- 26 (1) the person who is, or persons who are, to be the first director or directors of the company on registration (reg 7(1)(a));
- 27 (2) in the case of a company that is to be a private company, any person who is (or any persons who are) to be the first secretary (or joint secretaries) of the company on registration (reg 7(1)(b));
- 28 (3) in the case of a company that is to be a public company, the person who is (or the persons who are) to be the first secretary (or joint secretaries) of the company on registration (reg 7(1)(c));
- 29 (4) a consent by each of the persons named as a director, as secretary or as one of joint secretaries, to act in the relevant capacity (reg 7(1)(d)).

The required particulars are the particulars that will be required to be stated:

- 30 (a) in the case of a director, in the company's register of directors and register of directors' residential addresses (see the Companies Act 2006 ss 162-165; and PARAS 499-500) (Companies (Companies Authorised to Register) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2437, reg 7(2)(a));
- 31 (b) in the case of a secretary, in the company's register of secretaries (see the Companies Act 2006 ss 277-279; and PARA 605) (Companies (Companies Authorised to Register) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2437, reg 7(2)(b)).

As to a company's directors see PARA 483 et seq; and as to the company secretary see PARA 601 et seq.

The Companies (Disclosure of Address) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/214, reg 7 (application on behalf of proposed directors to withhold protected information) (see PARA 508) applies as if references to a subscriber to the memorandum of association were to any member of the company, and as if references to the proposed company were to the company proposing to register: Companies (Companies Authorised to Register) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2437, reg 7(3).

Registration of a joint stock company as a public company.

36. Registration of a joint stock company as a public company.

A joint stock company¹ may be registered² as a public company limited by shares³ if⁴:

- 74 (1) the following conditions are met⁵, namely: (a) that the requirements of the Companies Act 2006⁶ are met as regards its share capital⁷; (b) the requirements of the Companies Act 2006⁸ are met as regards its net assets⁹; and (c) if the provisions of the Companies Act 2006 governing the recent allotment of shares for non-cash consideration apply¹⁰, that the requirements of those provisions are met¹¹; and
- 75 (2) the application for registration is accompanied by the documents specified as follows¹², namely: (a) a copy of the resolution that the company be a public company¹³; (b) a copy of the balance sheet¹⁴ prepared as at a date not more than seven months before the date on which the application to re-register is delivered to the registrar of companies¹⁵, an unqualified report¹⁶ by the company's auditor on that balance sheet¹⁷, and a written statement by the company's auditor that in his opinion at the balance sheet date the amount of the company's net assets was not less than the aggregate of its called-up share capital and undistributable reserves¹⁸; and (c) if the provisions of the Companies Act 2006 governing the recent allotment of shares for non-cash consideration apply¹⁹, a copy of the valuation report²⁰ (if any)²¹.

The statement of compliance required to be delivered with the application is a statement that the requirements as to registration²² as a public company have been complied with²³. The registrar may accept the statement of compliance as sufficient evidence that the company is entitled to be registered as a public company²⁴.

Authorised to Register/B. REQUIREMENTS FOR REGISTRATION/37. Name of company on registration.

37. Name of company on registration.

Where the name of a company, which has been authorised to register under the Companies Act 2006 and is seeking registration¹, is a name by which it is precluded from being registered by any provision of the Companies Acts², either:

- 76 (1) because it is directly prohibited from being registered with that name³; or
- 77 (2) because the Secretary of State⁴ would not approve the company being registered with that name⁵, the company may change its name with effect from the date on which it is registered⁶.

Any such change of name⁷ requires the like assent of the company's members as is required⁸ for registration⁹.

1 Ie in pursuance of the Companies Act 2006 s 1040 (see PARA 33). The provisions of the Companies (Companies Authorised to Register) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2437, Pt 2 (regs 2-12) (see also PARAS 33-36, 40) apply in relation to the registration of a company under the Companies Act 2006 in pursuance of the Companies Act 2006 s 1040 (companies not formed under companies legislation but authorised to register): see the Companies (Companies Authorised to Register) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2437, reg 2(1); and PARA 33. C. REGISTRATION AND ITS EFFECT

38. Application of the Companies Acts.

The provisions of the Companies Acts¹ apply to a registered company², and to its members³ and contributories⁴, in the same manner as if it had been formed and registered under the Companies Act 2006⁵.

1 References in the Companies (Companies Authorised to Register) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2437, regs 18-22 (see also PARAS 39, 44, 45) to the Companies Acts include the Companies (Cross-Border Mergers) Regulations 2007, SI 2007/2974 (see PARA 1451), and do not include the Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 Pt 2 (ss 26-63) (see PARA 82 et seq): Companies (Companies Authorised to Register) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2437, reg 18(2). As to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' generally see PARA 16.

2 I.e. a company registered in pursuance of the Companies Act 2006 s 1040 (see PARA 33). In the Companies (Companies Authorised to Register) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2437, Pt 3 (regs 13-23) (see also PARAS 39, 41 et seq), 'registration' means registration under the Companies Act 2006 in pursuance of s 1040: Companies (Companies Authorised to Register) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2437, reg 13.

3 As to membership of a company generally see PARA 321 et seq.

4 As to the meaning of 'contributory' see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 703. As to the meaning of 'contributory' under the Companies Acts see PARA 115 note 10.

COMPANIES ACTS/(1) IN GENERAL/(ii) Companies not Formed under Companies Legislation but Authorised to Register/C. REGISTRATION AND ITS EFFECT/40. Formal registration and issue of the certificate of registration.

40. Formal registration and issue of the certificate of registration.

If the registrar of companies¹ is satisfied that the statutory requirements as to registration² are complied with, he must register the documents delivered to him³.

On the registration of a company, the registrar must give a certificate that the company is incorporated⁴. The certificate must state:

- 78 (1) the name and registered number of the company⁵;
- 79 (2) the date of its incorporation⁶;
- 80 (3) whether it is a limited or unlimited company⁷, and if it is limited whether it is limited by shares or limited by guarantee⁸;
- 81 (4) whether it is a private or a public company⁹; and
- 82 (5) whether the company's registered office¹⁰ is situated in England and Wales¹¹ (or in Wales), in Scotland or in Northern Ireland¹².

The certificate must be signed by the registrar or authenticated by the registrar's official seal¹³. It is conclusive evidence that the requirements¹⁴ as to registration have been complied with and that the company is duly registered under the Companies Act 2006¹⁵.

The registrar is also required to cause notice of the issue of the certificate to be published¹⁶.

41. Vesting of property.

All property belonging to or vested in a company¹ at the date of its registration² passes to and vests in the company on registration for all the estate and interest of the company in the property³.

Registration does not affect the company's rights or liabilities in respect of any debt or obligation incurred, or contract entered into, by, to, with or on behalf of the company before registration⁴.

42. Creditors.

If an unregistered company¹ registers with unlimited liability², the shareholders are, in a winding up³, liable beyond the amount unpaid on their shares⁴ for the expenses of the winding up, but not beyond that amount for any breach of contract under the terms of which there was only a limited liability⁵.

Where a member of an unregistered company who is personally liable to be sued for the debts of the company has parted with his shares before registration, and so has not become a member of the registered company, he is not, by reason only of the registration, released from his pre-existing liability⁶.

43. Pending actions and execution.

All actions and other legal proceedings which at the time of a company's registration¹ are pending by or against a company, or the public officer or any member² of it, may be continued in the same manner as if registration had not taken place³. However, execution of any judgment, decree or order obtained in such an action or proceeding must not issue against the effects of any individual member of the company⁴; but, in the event of the property and effects of the company being insufficient to satisfy the judgment, decree or order, an order may be obtained for winding up the company⁵.

44. Certain provisions to have continuing effect.

All provisions contained in any enactment or other instrument¹ constituting or regulating the company² are deemed to be conditions and regulations of the company, in the same manner and with the same incidents as if so much of them as would, if the company had been formed and registered under the Companies Act 2006³, be contained in registered articles of association⁴. The provisions so brought in⁵ include, in the case of a company registered as a company limited by guarantee⁶, those of the resolution declaring the amount of the guarantee⁷.

The provisions with respect to:

- 83 (1) the re-registration of an unlimited company as limited⁸;
- 84 (2) the powers of an unlimited company on re-registration as a limited company to provide that a portion of its share capital is not capable of being called up except in the event of winding up⁹; and
- 85 (3) the power of a limited company to determine that a portion of its share capital is not capable of being called up except in that event¹⁰, apply notwithstanding any provisions contained in any enactment, royal charter or other instrument constituting or regulating the company¹¹.

However, subject to the provisions which govern the effect of registration⁶, the company does not have power to alter any provision contained in an enactment relating to the company⁷ or, without the consent of the Secretary of State⁸, to alter any provision contained in letters patent relating to the company⁹. The company does not have power to alter any provision contained in a royal charter or letters patent with respect to the company's objects¹⁰. 47. Liability of contributories of companies not formed, but authorised to register, under the Companies Act 2006.

In the event of a company being wound up¹ which has been registered, but not formed², under the Companies Act 2006³, every person is a contributory⁴, in respect of the company's debts and liabilities contracted before registration, who is liable⁵:

- 86 (1) to pay, or contribute to the payment of, any debt or liability so contracted⁶; or
- 87 (2) to pay, or contribute to the payment of, any sum for the adjustment of the rights of the members among themselves in respect of any such debt or liability⁷;
- or
- 88 (3) to pay, or contribute to the amount of, the expenses of winding up the company, so far as relates to the debts or liabilities mentioned above⁸.

Every such contributory is liable to contribute to the assets of the company, in the course of the winding up, all sums due from him in respect of any such liability⁹.

COMPANIES ACTS/(2) PROMOTION OF COMPANIES/(i) Nature of Promoters/49. Meaning of 'promoter'.

(2) PROMOTION OF COMPANIES

(i) Nature of Promoters

49. Meaning of 'promoter'.

The term 'promoter' is not now defined by statute¹. The meaning of the term has, however, been dealt with in numerous cases².

The term 'promoter' is not a term of law, but of business³. It is a short and convenient way of designating those who set in motion the machinery by which companies legislation enables them to create an incorporated company⁴. It involves the idea of exertion for the purpose of getting up and starting a company⁵, and also the idea of some duty towards the company imposed by, or arising from, the position which the so-called promoter assumes towards it⁶.

The question whether a person is or is not a promoter is a question of fact depending upon what the so-called promoter really did⁷, and a judge in summing up to a jury is not bound to define the term⁸.

A person who as principal procures or aids in procuring the incorporation of a company is generally a promoter of it, and he does not escape from liability by acting through agents⁹. However, persons who act in a promotion only in a professionally capacity (such as counsel, solicitors, accountants, printers of offer documents, and the like) are not promoters¹⁰.

1 In the Joint Stock Companies Act 1844 s 3 (repealed), the term was defined as meaning 'every person acting by whatever name in the forming and establishing of a company at any period prior to the company obtaining complete registration'. 'Promoter' was later defined, in connection with liability for statements in a prospectus or offer for sale, to mean a promoter who was a party to the prospectus or offer for sale, or the portion of it containing the untrue statement, other than a person acting in a professional capacity: see the Companies Act 1948 s 43(5); and the Companies Act 1985 s 67(3) (both repealed). References to promoters of companies occur in the Companies Act 2006 s 553 (permitted commission) (see PARA 1152) and s 762 (procedure for public company obtaining trading certificate) (see PARA 74).

50. Examples showing persons found to be promoters.

Where a person wishing to sell property agrees with others that they are to form a company, and that he is to sell the property to it, the others receiving part of the purchase money, then, when the agreement is performed, the others are promoters¹; and the owner of the property is also a promoter². A person who joins with other persons in agreeing to purchase property with the view of selling it to a company which they intend to form, and subsequently do form, is a promoter³. Where a person takes in hand the formation of a company to buy the property of a third person, he is a promoter; and he incurs the liabilities of a promoter, even though the company is substantially different in character from the one he had anticipated, if he stands by and allows his agent to alter the plan of promotion⁴.

Where the owner of a concession agrees with a financial agent that the concession is to be sold to contractors with a view to its being sold by them to a company to be formed forthwith for the purpose, the contractors finding funds necessary for such formation, the owner, the agent and the contractors are all promoters⁵. Similarly, where the agent of a syndicate, or trustee for a company, purchases property and sells it to a new company formed forthwith by the syndicate or company for the purpose, the members of the syndicate (or the company, as the case may be) are promoters⁶.

Where the owners of property agree with two persons that they are to form a company to purchase it, and one of such persons agrees with a third person to carry out the scheme, and all three take part in procuring a board for the company, and in the preparation and issue of a prospectus, all three are promoters⁷. Brokers who, in consideration of being paid part of the purchase money, assist a person in selling property to a proposed company and allow their names to appear on the company's prospectus as being ready to answer any inquiries relating to the property, and answer such inquiries, are promoters⁸.

Where a person purchases property with the view of selling it to a company which he subsequently forms, and another person enters into a sham contract with him for the purchase of the property, to be used in negotiating the sale to the company, and the company subsequently buys on terms which give a profit, they are both promoters⁹. Where a person agrees with the owners of property to form a company to purchase it at cost price, the company agreeing to pay a commission to him, and he thereupon forms the company, and is a party to the preparation and issue of the prospectus and the procuring of a board of directors, he is a promoter¹⁰.

Directors of a promoting company are promoters where the promoting company is an alias for themselves, they being the only directors and entitled to share all the profits¹¹.

51. When persons are not promoters.

Persons do not become promoters on purchasing a property and shortly afterwards selling it at a profit to a company subsequently formed to buy it, if at the time of the contract they have taken no step to form the company¹, and even though the price is agreed to be paid partly in shares of a company which the purchasers propose to form². If, however, the whole essence of the scheme from the first is that a number of persons are to purchase property and form a company to purchase it from them, they must disclose to the company, when formed, the whole of the profits made by them on the transaction³.

52. When promotion begins and ends.

It is a question of fact in each case at what time a person begins¹ or ceases to be a promoter of a company.

A person may become a promoter of a company either before or after its incorporation². A person, although not a director, may be a promoter of a company which is already incorporated but the capital of which has not been taken up, and which is not yet in a position to perform the obligations imposed upon it by its creators³.

A promoter does not cease to be such by reason only of the formation of the company and the appointment of its directors, but only when the directors take into their own hands what remains to be done in the way of forming the company⁴, and when there is no question open between the promoter and the company⁵.

(ii) Fiduciary Relation of Promoters to the Company

53. Promoter not trustee or agent of company.

A promoter stands in a fiduciary position with respect to the company which he promotes from the time when he first becomes until he ceases to be a promoter of it¹; but his relation to the company is not that of trustee and beneficiary, or agent and principal². A promoter may acquire assets as a trustee for a company. Whether he does so or not is a question of fact and, where the plan of promotion is that he should sell assets to an intended company at a profit, the presumption is that as regards those assets he is not a trustee in the ordinary sense, but may, as vendor or agent to the vendors, make a profit on the sale to the company, even if he is also its director or one of its directors, provided that he makes full disclosure to the company³. The onus, however, lies upon the promoter to prove that he has made full disclosure⁴.

See also Jacobus Marler Estates Ltd v Marler (1913) 85 LJPC 167n. As a director with an interest in a proposed transaction with the company, the director must comply with the Companies Act 2006 s 177 (duty to declare interest in proposed transaction or arrangement with the company) (see PARA 555) and such other of the general duties, especially s 171(b) (director of company must only exercise powers for the purposes for which they are conferred) (see PARA 540) and s 172 (duty to promote the success of the company) (see PARA 544), as are applicable (see s 179 (except as otherwise provided, more than one of the general duties may apply in any given case); and PARA 532).

In the limited circumstances prescribed by the Companies Act 2006 s 598 (agreement for transfer to public company of non-cash asset in initial period by a person who is a subscriber to the company's memorandum), independent valuation and approval of the transfer by members are both required: see PARA 1125. In the event of a contravention, any consideration given by the company under the agreement, or an amount equal to the value of the consideration at the time of the agreement, is recoverable; and the agreement, so far as it is not carried out, is void: see s 604(2); and PARA 1129.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(2) PROMOTION OF COMPANIES/(ii) Fiduciary Relation of Promoters to the Company/54. Claiming account of secret profits made by promoter.

54. Claiming account of secret profits made by promoter.

A promoter may not, without full disclosure, retain any profit made out of a transaction to which the company is a party¹. Where disclosure has not been made, the company may affirm the contract and sue him for an account and payment of profits². The claim of the company may also be enforced by proceedings for misfeasance in the winding up of the company³, and is provable in bankruptcy⁴.

Interest may be recovered as from the time when the promoter received the profits⁵. The burden of proving that profit has in fact been made by a promoter lies on the company⁶.

If the vendors to a company are the same persons as its shareholders, and the consideration is shares of the company, the profit (if any) is not secret and the company cannot recover it⁷.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(2) PROMOTION OF COMPANIES/(ii) Fiduciary Relation of Promoters to the Company/55. Amount of secret profit for which promoter is liable.

55. Amount of secret profit for which promoter is liable.

In estimating the amount of secret profit for which a promoter is liable, deductions are made for legitimate expenses incurred in forming and bringing out the company (such as fees for reports of surveyors, charges of solicitors and brokers, sums expended in good faith in securing the services of directors, and payments to officers of the company and the press in relation to the company)¹. However, deductions cannot be claimed for sums paid to the company by the vendors to compromise the company's proceedings against them to rescind the purchase², nor for the difference (arranged under a compromise to which the company is not a party) between what was to be paid by the promoter to the agent of the company and what was actually paid³, nor for the value of the services in respect of which the profit is paid to him⁴. Deductions have been disallowed in the case of sums paid in obtaining from another person a guarantee for the taking of shares⁵.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(2) PROMOTION OF COMPANIES/(ii) Fiduciary Relation of Promoters to the Company/57. Rescission of contract in place of claiming account of secret profits.

57. Rescission of contract in place of claiming account of secret profits.

Instead of claiming an account of the secret profits, the company may bring a claim for rescission of the contract for sale and return of the consideration and payment of dividends and interest paid on shares and debentures forming part of the consideration; and, if the shares have been sold, the company may claim payment of the proceeds with interest¹. Where part of the consideration is exchanged for shares in another company, the amount repayable is the actual value of those shares and not the value for purposes of the exchange². As a general rule, rescission of a voidable contract may be obtained against a vendor only where the property can be restored to him; but this rule has no application where the property has been reduced by his fault, and, moreover, if compensation can be made for any deterioration, rescission with compensation may be awarded³. A company cannot be deprived of its remedy of rescission or other remedies by any provisions in its articles⁴.

The remedy by rescission may be the only remedy where the promoter has bought and paid for the property before he sells it to the company, and was not at the time of his purchase in a fiduciary relation to the company⁵.

1 This is implied in the judgments in Erlanger v New Sombrero Phosphate Co (1878) 3 App Cas 1218, HL; Phosphate Sewage Co v Hartmont (1877) 5 ChD 394, CA; Lagunas Nitrate Co v Lagunas Syndicate [1899] 2 Ch 392, CA; Official Receiver and Liquidator of Jubilee Cotton Mills Ltd v Lewis [1924] AC 958, HL.

58. Other remedies of company for breach of duty by promoter.

If the remedy by rescission is not open, or if the company elects to affirm the contract, the company may have a good cause of action for deceit or fraud, negligent misrepresentation¹ or breach of duty². Where there has been a breach of duty, nominal damages, or if the breach has resulted in loss to the funds and assets of the company, substantial damages, may be recovered³. The liability for breach of duty cannot be enforced by a contributory in a winding up by means of proceedings for misfeasance unless the breach of duty has resulted in a loss to the assets of the company⁴. (iii) Disclosure by Promoters

60. Promoter's duty of full disclosure.

In order to be in a position to retain any profit made by him, or to resist a claim for rescission or damages, a promoter, before completion of the transaction out of which the profit is made, must have made full disclosure to the company of the fact that he is interested in the transaction, of the nature of his interest, and of all other material facts¹.

It is not clear whether the exact amount of profit is required to be stated². However, in making an application for a trading certificate³, without which a public company⁴ cannot do business⁵ or exercise any borrowing powers⁶, the company must specify any amount or benefit paid or given (or intended to be paid or given) to any promoter of the company, and the consideration for the payment or benefit⁷.

4 I.e. a company that is registered as a public company on its original incorporation rather than by virtue of its re-registration as a public company: see the Companies Act 2006 s 761(1); and PARA 74. As to the meanings of 'private company' and 'public company' see PARA 102.

61. What amounts to disclosure by promoter.

Disclosure may be made in any one of several ways, as, for example, by the articles of association of the company¹, or by communication to such shareholders of the company as become such by applying for shares on the footing of a prospectus or an offer for sale which makes due disclosure², or by communication to a board of directors of the company which is independent of the promoters³, or by communication in any way to the original shareholders, at any rate if no future shareholders are contemplated⁴.

Even if disclosure is made to the original shareholders or if for other reasons they cannot complain of the want of it, there may, in some cases, exist a fiduciary relation between the promoters and future shareholders if the admission of the latter to membership of the company formed part of the plan of promotion⁵.

62. What is an independent executive.

A board of directors, whether provided by the promoters or otherwise, is an independent executive when its members are aware that the property which the company is asked to buy is the property of the promoters, and when they are competent and intelligent judges as to whether the purchase ought or ought not to be made, and capable of exercising an intelligent, independent and impartial judgment on the transaction¹. Directors appointed by the vendors do not generally constitute an independent board; in such a case the only effective way of making disclosure by a promoter is by the articles, and, if a prospectus is issued, in the prospectus also². Where promoters appoint themselves, or some of their number, to be sole guardians and protectors of their creature, the company, they are not an independent board, and the fact that the articles purport to protect them from the liability to account as persons standing in a fiduciary relation to the company will not help them³. If a company is avowedly formed with a board of directors who are not independent, but who are stated to be the intended vendors of property to the company, or their agents, the company cannot set aside the purchase agreement merely on the ground that the directors are not independent⁴.

Where a company is one which does not invite the public to subscribe for its shares (and every shareholder is aware of all the circumstances attending the formation of the company), the absence of an independent board of directors is immaterial⁵.

Directors in this situation remain subject to the general duties imposed by the Companies Act 2006 Pt 10 Ch 2 (ss 170-181) (see PARA 532 et seq), whose effect is cumulative (see s 179 (except as otherwise provided, more than one of the general duties may apply in any given case); and PARA 532).

(iv) Payment by Company of Promoter's Expenses

63. Company's liability to promoter.

A promoter has no right of indemnity against the company which he promotes in respect of any obligation undertaken on its behalf before its incorporation¹, and may not sue it upon a contract, made by him with an agent or trustee on its behalf before its incorporation, stipulating that it shall pay the promoters a certain sum for preliminary expenses, even where the articles of association provide that the company shall defray the preliminary expenses². Thus, in spite of such a provision, the solicitor who prepares the memorandum and articles cannot sue the company for his costs of doing so, and the promoter, or his solicitor, who has paid the fees on registering the company, cannot recover them from the company³; nor is the promoter, or a person employed by him, entitled to sue the company in respect of any payment for services rendered or expenses incurred before its incorporation in promoting it, unless after its incorporation it expressly agrees with him to make such payment, or, from other facts, the court can infer a new contract to reimburse him⁴. The company cannot ratify an agreement purporting to be made on its behalf before its incorporation⁵; and its acts cannot be evidence of a new agreement to reimburse the promoter if they can be shown to have been made with reference to the obligations of the company to indemnify a third person⁶. A company is not bound in equity to pay the preliminary expenses because it has adopted and derived benefit from services performed before its incorporation⁷. Where a promoter procures a company to be formed by fraudulent means and by fraud induces shareholders to join it, he cannot recover expenses which he otherwise might have recovered⁸.

Whether there is a fresh contract between the company and the promoters after incorporation is a question of fact⁹.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(2) PROMOTION OF COMPANIES/(iv) Payment by Company of Promoter's Expenses/64. Power of company to pay registration etc expenses to promoters.

64. Power of company to pay registration etc expenses to promoters.

Generally, a company, and its directors by its articles of association¹, are expressly empowered to pay all expenses of and incidental to its incorporation and flotation². Even where there is express general power to pay preliminary expenses to a promoter, payment should not be made without vouchers or investigation³; but, if the directors are empowered without further authority to pay a specific sum for the costs and expenses of promoters, payment may be made without a bill of costs being required⁴. The expenses which may be properly paid include registration fees, a sum charged for a report on the value of property to be purchased by it, legal costs, advertisements, printing and brokers' fees⁵. Directors may be made personally liable for sums improperly paid to promoters⁶. Where the articles state the amounts to be paid to promoters for procuring concessions and for preliminary expenses, shareholders may not complain that the amounts are excessive⁷ unless the promoter has acted fraudulently⁸. If, however, the money is paid and proceedings to recover it are compromised with knowledge of the facts, the money cannot afterwards be recovered⁹.

2 The Companies (Model Articles) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3229, reg 4, Sch 3 Pt 4 (art 44) expressly provides for a public company to pay any person a commission in consideration for that person subscribing, or agreeing to subscribe, for shares, or procuring, or agreeing to procure, subscriptions for shares: see PARA 1152. See also the Companies Act 2006 s 553 (permitted commission) (see PARA 1152); and note the requirement, where a public company applies for a trading certificate, without which it cannot do business or exercise any borrowing powers, for the company to specify, in making such an application, the amount, or estimated amount, of the company's preliminary expenses (see s 762; and PARA 74). No express provision for the payment of commission appears in the model articles of association provided for use by a private company, which merely provide that the directors may exercise all the powers of the company: see the Companies (Model Articles) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3229, reg 2, Sch 1 Pt 2 (arts 3, 4) (private company limited by shares); the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, Schedule, Table A art 70; and PARA 541. 65. Acceptance of presents from promoters.

Directors or other officers of the company or its agents at the time of promotion accepting gifts from promoters are liable to account to the company for the money or shares or other property received¹, and, in the case of fully paid shares which have diminished in value, the nominal amount of the shares must be accounted for². An article authorising a promoter to give shares to the directors has been rejected as fraudulent³, but full disclosure may prevent liability⁴. Where several directors receive presents with mutual knowledge, they are jointly and severally liable for the whole amount⁵.

The acceptance of gifts by an agent of the company is a ground for the company rescinding the purchase contract⁶ if the transaction is not revealed to the company⁷, whether or not the gift influences the conduct of the agent⁸. If the promised gift is not handed over, the agent cannot recover it⁹.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(2) PROMOTION OF COMPANIES/(v) Promoter's Liability/66. Promoter's liability under contract that purports to be made by or on behalf of unformed company.

(v) Promoter's Liability

66. Promoter's liability under contract that purports to be made by or on behalf of unformed company.

Under the Companies Act 2006, a contract that purports to be made by or on behalf of a company¹ at a time when the company has not been formed² has effect, subject to any agreement to the contrary, as one made with the person purporting to act for the company or as agent for it³, and he is personally liable on the contract accordingly⁴. The person purporting to act for, or as agent of, the unformed company is also entitled to enforce the contract against the other party unless such enforcement is otherwise precluded by the ordinary common law principles governing contractual arrangements⁵. No exclusion of personal liability will be implied merely by the manner of signature of the contract⁶. Personal liability under the contract comes to an end once it has been performed, or rescinded by either party under some power in the contract, or by consent of all parties, or when the company has, with the consent of the other contracting party, undertaken the liability of the promoter under the contract⁷. Where, however, there is a contract to pay out of a specific fund, the personal liability exists only to the extent of the fund, if any⁸.

1 As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

2 This does not cover the situation where a company has been formed but changes its name; contracts made at that time are not pre-incorporation contracts since a change of name is not a re-formation or re-incorporation of the company (Oshkosh B'Gosh Inc v Dan Marbel Inc Ltd [1989] 1 CMLR 94, [1989] BCLC 507, CA); nor does it cover contracts entered into by a company which has been formed but which was trading under an incorrect name (Badgerhill Properties Ltd v Cottrell [1991] BCLC 805, CA). As to pre-incorporation contracts see also PARAS 279, 280.

3 For these purposes, a contract can purport to be made on behalf of a company or by a company even though both parties know that the company is not formed and that it is only about to be formed: Phonogram Ltd v Lane [1982] QB 938 at 943, [1981] 3 All ER 182 at 186, CA, per Lord Denning MR. A contract cannot, however, purport to be made on behalf of a company not yet formed if no one had thought of the new company at the time of contracting: Cotronic (UK) Ltd v Dezonie [1991] BCLC 721, CA (parties contracted with first company which in fact had been struck off the register and dissolved; when this was discovered years later, a second company was incorporated; it was impossible to say that the contract purported to be made by or on behalf of the second company).

4 Companies Act 2006 s 51(1). This provision applies to the making of a deed under the law of England and Wales as it applies to the making of a contract: s 51(2). As to the meanings of 'England' and 'Wales' see PARA 1 note 5. The provisions of s 51 apply to unregistered companies by virtue of the Unregistered Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2436, reg 3, Sch 1 para 3: see PARA 1666. As to the meaning of 'unregistered company' see PARA 1665. The Secretary of State has made provision by regulations (see the Companies Act 2006 s 1045; and PARA 1825) applying s 51 also to overseas companies, but with modifications: see the Overseas Companies (Execution of Documents and Registration of Charges) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1917, reg 6. As to the meaning of 'overseas company' see PARA 1824.

The Companies Act 2006 s 51(1) re-enacts the Companies Act 1985 s 36C(1) (itself re-enacting in substantially the same terms the Companies Act 1985 s 36(4) (as originally enacted), which re-enacted the European Communities Act 1972 s 9(2), (9) (repealed)), and negatives the decisions in Hollman v Pullin (1884) Cab & El 254 and Newborne v Sensolid (Great Britain) Ltd [1954] 1 QB 45, [1953] 1 All ER 708, CA. 6 Phonogram Ltd v Lane [1982] QB 938, [1981] 3 All ER 182, CA. Much had seemed to turn in the older cases on the manner in which contracts had been signed, although they might more accurately have been stated as turning on issues of the parties' intentions: Phonogram Ltd v Lane at 945 and 188 per Oliver LJ. It was argued in Phonogram Ltd v Lane that questions as to the manner of signature were still relevant to what is now the Companies Act 2006 s 51 (see the text and notes 1-5) in view of the words 'subject to any agreement to the contrary'. This view was rejected, since to interpret the statutory provision in that way would defeat the whole purpose of that provision: Phonogram Ltd v Lane at 946 and 182 per Oliver LJ. Unless there is a clear exclusion of personal liability, the promoter is personally liable however he expresses his signature: Phonogram Ltd v Lane at 944 and 187 per Lord Denning MR.

67. Promoters as partners.

Promoters associated only to form a company are not in partnership¹. 68. Liability of several promoters to and for each other.

In the absence of an express contract, one of several promoters may not sue another for remuneration for services in connection with the promotion¹; but a person assisting promoters may sue for remuneration for his services if there is a contract express or implied to pay for them².

Promoters are not as such agents for each other, or liable for the other's acts; but an authority to act for each other may be inferred from the terms of a public prospectus or from conduct³.

69. Circumstances in which promoter's liability terminated.

After the dissolution of the company no proceedings may be taken against the promoter on behalf of the company unless the dissolution is set aside¹.

Where a promoter is adjudged bankrupt, a company may prove in his bankruptcy for any secret profits obtained by him². Under the Insolvency Act 1986, his order of discharge releases him from any debt or liability to the company which is provable in the bankruptcy, unless it was a debt he incurred in respect of, or forbearance in respect of which was secured by means of, any fraud or fraudulent breach of trust to which he was a party³.

Where a promoter has received a secret profit, he cannot, in proceedings by the company or its liquidator to recover the profit, set up the provisions of the Limitation Act 1980 by way of defence⁴.

In general, the liability of a promoter has always been enforceable against his estate after his death⁵; since 25 July 1934 all causes of action subsisting against a deceased at his death survive against his estate⁶.

71. Disqualification of promoters from managing companies.

The court¹ may make a disqualification order² against a person where he is convicted of an indictable offence (whether on indictment or summarily) in connection with the promotion, formation, management, liquidation or striking off of a company³, with the receivership of a company's property, or with his being an administrative receiver of a company⁴.

The maximum period of disqualification which may be imposed for these purposes is five years (where the disqualification order is made by a court of summary jurisdiction) or (in any other case) 15 years⁵.

An application for such an order may be made by the Secretary of State⁶, the official receiver or the liquidator or any past or present member or creditor of the company in relation to which the person in question has committed or is alleged to have committed an offence or other default⁷.

1 As to the meaning of 'court' for these purposes see PARA 1580 note 1.

2 As to the meaning of 'disqualification order' see PARA 1578.

3 For these purposes, unless the context otherwise requires, 'company' means a company registered under the Companies Act 2006 in Great Britain, or a company that may be wound up under the Insolvency Act 1986 Pt V (ss 220-229) (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 1147 et seq); Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 s 22(1), (2) (s 22(2) substituted by SI 2009/1941). A. PRIVATE COMPANY

72. Private companies and the restrictions on their powers.

A 'private company' within the meaning of the Companies Act 2006 is a company¹ that is not a public company².

Under the Companies Act 2006, a private company that is limited by shares³, or is limited by guarantee and having a share capital⁴, is prohibited both from making any offer to the public⁵ of any securities⁶ of the company, and from allotting (or agreeing to allot) any securities of the company with a view to their being offered to the public⁷. Any contravention, or proposed contravention, of this prohibition may be remedied by order⁸.

B. PUBLIC COMPANY

(A) IN GENERAL

73. Nature and powers of public company.

A 'public company' within the meaning of the Companies Act 2006 is a company¹ limited by shares², or limited by guarantee and having a share capital³, being a company⁴:

- 92 (1) whose certificate of incorporation⁵ states that it is a public company⁶; and
- 93 (2) in relation to which the requirements of the Companies Act 2006⁷, or the former Companies Acts⁸, as to the registration⁹ or re-registration of a company as a public company¹⁰ have been complied with on or after 22 December 1980¹¹.

With effect from 22 December 1980¹², a public company limited by guarantee may not be formed¹³.

A company that is registered as a public company on its original incorporation¹⁴ may not do business or exercise any borrowing powers unless the registrar of companies¹⁵ has issued it with a certificate (a 'trading certificate')¹⁶ indicating that he is satisfied that the nominal value¹⁷ of the company's allotted share capital¹⁸ is not less than the authorised minimum¹⁹. Such a certificate is conclusive evidence that the company is entitled to do business and exercise any borrowing powers²⁰.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(i) Categories of Company/B. PUBLIC COMPANY/(B) Share Capital Requirements for Public Companies/74. Minimum share capital requirement for public companies.

(B) SHARE CAPITAL REQUIREMENTS FOR PUBLIC COMPANIES

74. Minimum share capital requirement for public companies.

A company¹ that is a public company² must not do business³ or exercise any borrowing powers⁴ unless the registrar of companies⁵ has issued it with a certificate (a 'trading certificate')⁶. The registrar must issue a trading certificate if, on an application made to him in accordance with the statutory requirements⁷, he is satisfied that the nominal value of the company's allotted share capital⁸ is not less than the authorised minimum⁹. An application for such a certificate must:

- 94 (1) state that the nominal value of the company's allotted share capital is not less than the authorised minimum¹⁰;
- 95 (2) specify the amount, or estimated amount, of the company's preliminary expenses¹¹;
- 96 (3) specify any amount or benefit paid or given (or intended to be paid or given) to any promoter¹² of the company, and the consideration for the payment or benefit¹³; and
- 97 (4) be accompanied by a statement of compliance¹⁴, being a statement that the company meets the requirements for the issue of a trading certificate¹⁵.

The registrar may accept the statutory statement of compliance as sufficient evidence of the matters stated in it¹⁶.

A trading certificate has effect from the date on which it is issued and is conclusive evidence that the company is entitled to do business and exercise any borrowing powers¹⁷. Evidence cannot be received to show that the facts did not warrant the issuing of the certificate¹⁸.

If a company does business or exercises borrowing powers in contravention of the prohibition on doing so without a trading certificate¹⁹, an offence is committed by the company, and by any officer of it who is in default²⁰, and every person guilty of such an offence is liable (on conviction on indictment) to a fine or (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum²¹.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(i) Categories of Company/B. PUBLIC COMPANY/(B) Share Capital Requirements for Public Companies/75. The 'authorised minimum' in relation to the nominal value of a public company's allotted share capital.

75. The 'authorised minimum' in relation to the nominal value of a public company's allotted share capital.

Subject to any exercise of the power to alter the authorised minimum¹, the 'authorised minimum', in relation to the nominal value of a public company's allotted share capital², is £50,000 or the prescribed Euro equivalent³. The Secretary of State may by order⁴ alter the sterling amount of the authorised minimum, and make a corresponding alteration of the prescribed Euro equivalent⁵.

The initial requirement for a public company to have allotted share capital of a nominal value not less than the authorised minimum⁶ must be met either by reference to allotted share capital denominated in sterling or by reference to allotted share capital denominated in Euros (but not partly in one and partly in the other)⁷. Whether the requirement is met is determined in the first case by reference to the sterling amount and in the second case by reference to the prescribed Euro equivalent⁸. No account is to be taken of any allotted share capital of the company denominated in a currency other than sterling or, as the case may be, Euros⁹. If the company could meet the requirement either by reference to share capital denominated in sterling or by reference to share capital denominated in Euros, it must elect in its application for a trading certificate or, as the case may be, for re-registration as a public company which is to be the currency by reference to which the matter is determined¹⁰.

The Secretary of State may make provision by regulations as to the application of the authorised minimum in relation to a public company¹¹ that has shares denominated in more than one currency¹², that redenominates the whole or part of its allotted share capital¹³, or allots new shares¹⁴.

1 le subject to any exercise of the power conferred by the Companies Act 2006 s 764 (see the text and notes 4-5): see s 763(6).

2 As to the nominal value of shares see PARA 1044. As to the meaning of 'allotted share capital' see PARA 1045. As to public companies see also PARA 73.

3 Companies Act 2006 s 763(1). The Secretary of State may by order, subject to negative resolution procedure (ie the statutory instrument containing the order being subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament), prescribe the amount in Euros that is for the time being to be treated as equivalent to the sterling amount of the authorised minimum: see ss 763(2), (5), 1289. This power may be exercised from time to time as appears to the Secretary of State to be appropriate: s 763(3). The amount prescribed is to be determined by applying an appropriate spot rate of exchange to the sterling amount and rounding to the nearest 100 Euros: s 763(4). In the Companies Acts, 'prescribed' means prescribed (by order or by regulations) by the Secretary of State: Companies Act 2006 s 1167. As to the making of orders and regulations under the Companies Act 2006 generally see ss 1288-1292. As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6. In exercise of the powers conferred by s 763(2), the Secretary of State has made the Companies (Authorised Minimum) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2425. Accordingly, for the purposes of the definition of the 'authorised minimum' in the Companies Act 2006 s 763(1), the amount in Euros that is to be treated as equivalent to the sterling amount is EUR 57,100: Companies (Authorised Minimum) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2425, reg 2. This is subject to the transitional provisions and savings in reg 9: see reg 2.

4 Such an order is subject to affirmative resolution procedure (ie the order must not be made unless a draft of the statutory instrument containing it has been laid before Parliament and approved by a resolution of each House of Parliament): see the Companies Act 2006 ss 764(4), 1290.

5 Companies Act 2006 s 764(1). The amount of the prescribed Euro equivalent is to be determined by applying an appropriate spot rate of exchange to the sterling amount and rounding to the nearest 100 Euros: s 764(2). Such an order that increases the authorised minimum may:

- 32 (1) require a public company having an allotted share capital of which the nominal value is less than the amount specified in the order to increase that value to not less than that amount, or to re-register as a private company (s 764(3)(a));
- 33 (2) make provision in connection with any such requirement for any of the matters for which provision is made by the Companies Act 2006 relating to a company's registration, re-registration or change of name, to payment for shares comprised in a company's share capital, and to offers to the public of shares in or debentures of a company, including provision as to the consequences (in criminal law or otherwise) of a failure to comply with any requirement of the order (s 764(3)(b));
- 34 (3) provide for any provision of the order to come into force on different days for different purposes (s 764(3)(c)).

77. Meanings of 'quoted company', 'unquoted company' and 'traded company' in the Companies Act 2006.

The terms 'quoted company' and 'unquoted company' are defined in the Companies Act 2006 for the purposes of the provisions relating to accounts and reports¹; and the term 'quoted company' (as so defined) is applied for the purposes of the provisions relating to resolutions and meetings of the company².

Accordingly, a 'quoted company' means a company³ whose equity share capital⁴ either has been included in the official list in accordance with the provisions of Part VI of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000⁵ or is officially listed in an EEA State⁶, or is admitted to dealing on either the New York Stock Exchange or the exchange known as Nasdaq⁷.

An 'unquoted company' means a company that is not a quoted company⁸.

If a company is to obtain admission to the official list, it must undertake to observe certain obligations once its securities have been admitted to listing⁹.

For the purposes of the provisions of the Companies Act 2006 which govern resolutions and meetings of the company¹⁰, a 'traded company' is defined to mean a company any shares of which carry rights to vote at general meetings and are admitted to trading on a regulated market in an EEA State by or with the consent of the company¹¹.

78. Meaning of a company limited by shares.

A company¹ is a 'limited company' if the liability of its members² is limited by its constitution³.

The memorandum of association⁴ of a company limited by shares⁵ is a memorandum stating that the subscribers⁶ wish to form a company under the Companies Act 2006, and that they agree to become members of the company and to take at least one share each⁷.

The memorandum must be authenticated by each subscriber and must be in the prescribed form⁸.

There is no provision in the Companies Act 2006 for the memorandum of association to be amended⁹.

As to the making of orders and regulations under the Companies Act 2006 generally see ss 1288-1292. As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6. In exercise of the powers conferred by s 8(2), the Secretary of State has made the Companies (Registration) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3014. Accordingly, for the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 s 8, the memorandum of association of a company having a share capital must be in the form set out in the Companies (Registration) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3014, reg 2(a), Sch 1. For existing companies, the prescribed form of memorandum for a company limited by shares is given in the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, reg 2, Schedule Table B (private company limited by shares) and in Schedule Table F (public company limited by shares). D. COMPANY LIMITED BY GUARANTEE

79. Meaning of a company limited by guarantee.

A company¹ is a 'limited company' if the liability of its members² is limited by its constitution³.

The memorandum of association⁴ of a company limited by guarantee⁵ is a memorandum stating that the subscribers⁶ wish to form a company under the Companies Act 2006, and that they agree to become members of the company⁷.

The memorandum must be authenticated by each subscriber and must be in the prescribed form⁸. There is no provision in the Companies Act 2006 for the memorandum of association to be amended⁹.

With effect from 22 December 1980¹⁰, a company cannot be formed as, or become, a company limited by guarantee with a share capital¹¹. Nor may a public company limited by guarantee be formed as from that date¹².

Under the Companies Act 2006, a private company that is limited by guarantee and having a share capital is prohibited both from making any offer to the public¹³ of any securities of the company, and from allotting (or agreeing to allot) any securities of the company with a view to their being offered to the public¹⁴.

5 As to the meaning of 'company limited by guarantee' see PARA 102.

6 As to subscribers to the memorandum see PARA 104.

7 See the Companies Act 2006 s 8(1); and PARA 104. As to the other requirements that must be met before a company is duly formed (including delivery of the memorandum) see PARA 102 et seq. As to shareholders generally see PARA 321 et seq. Companies that are limited by guarantee and have a share capital are historical entities (see the text and notes 10-11) and accordingly the requirements of s 8 regarding companies having a share capital have no application to companies limited by guarantee that are formed under the Companies Act 2006. Previously, under the Companies Act 1948 s 2(4) (repealed), if the company had a share capital, the memorandum had also to state the amount of the share capital with which the company proposed to be registered and the division thereof into shares of a fixed amount, and each subscriber had to write opposite his name the number of shares he took, not being less than one share. As to the meanings of 'company having a share capital', 'share capital' and 'share' see PARA 1042.

A 'commonhold association' is a private company limited by guarantee the memorandum of which states that an object of the company is to exercise the functions of a commonhold association in relation to specified commonhold land: see COMMONHOLD vol 13 (2009) PARA 305.

8 See the Companies Act 2006 s 8(2); and PARA 104. In relation to the authentication of a document under the Companies Act 2006 see s 1146; and PARA 678 et seq.

As to the making of orders and regulations under the Companies Act 2006 generally see ss 1288-1292. As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6. In exercise of the powers conferred by s 8(2), the Secretary of State has made the Companies (Registration) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3014. Accordingly, for the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 s 8, the memorandum of association of a company not having a share capital must be in the form set out in the Companies (Registration) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3014, reg 2(b), Sch 2. For existing companies (see PARA 230), the prescribed form of memorandum for a company limited by guarantee is given in the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, reg 2, Schedule Table C (company limited by guarantee and not having a share capital), in Schedule Table D Pt I (public company limited by guarantee and having a share capital) and in Schedule Table D Pt II (private company limited by guarantee and having a share capital). As to the meanings of 'private company' and 'public company' see PARA 102.

9 Cf the articles of association which can be so amended: see PARA 232 et seq. The effect of this is that the memorandum of association becomes an historical document and all provisions concerning the day-to-day management of the company come to be included in the articles of association.

80. Effect of dividing undertaking of company limited by guarantee into shares or interests.

For the purpose of the provisions of the Companies Act 2006 relating to a company limited by guarantee¹ that has been registered on or after 1 January 1901², any provision in the constitution³ of such a company that purports to divide the undertaking of the company into shares⁴ or interests is to be treated as a provision for a share capital⁵, and this applies whether or not the nominal value⁶ or number of the shares or interests is specified by the provision⁷.

E. UNLIMITED COMPANY

81. Meaning of 'unlimited company'.

A company¹ is an 'unlimited company' if there is no limit on the liability of its members².

The memorandum of association³ of an unlimited company is a memorandum stating that the subscribers⁴ wish to form a company under the Companies Act 2006, that they agree to become members of the company and, in the case of a company that is to have a share capital⁵, that they agree to take at least one share each⁶.

The memorandum must be authenticated by each subscriber and must be in the prescribed form⁷.

F. COMMUNITY INTEREST COMPANIES

(A) INTRODUCTION

82. Becoming a community interest company.

In accordance with Part 2 of the Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004¹:

98 (1) a company limited by shares² or a company limited by guarantee and not having a share capital³ may be formed as or become a community interest company⁴; and

99 (2) a company limited by guarantee and having a share capital may become a community interest company⁵.

However, a community interest company established for charitable purposes is to be treated as not being so established⁶.

The other provisions of the Companies Acts⁷ have effect subject to Part 2 of the 2004 Act⁸.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(i) Categories of Company/F. COMMUNITY INTEREST COMPANIES/(A) Introduction/83. Regulator of Community Interest Companies.

83. Regulator of Community Interest Companies.

The Secretary of State¹ must appoint a person to be the Regulator², who has such functions relating to community interest companies as are conferred or imposed by or by virtue of the Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 or any other enactment³.

The Regulator must adopt an approach to the discharge of those functions which is based on good regulatory practice⁴, that is an approach adopted having regard to:

- 100 (1) the likely impact on those who may be affected by the discharge of those functions⁵;
- 101 (2) the outcome of consultations with, and with organisations representing, community interest companies and others with relevant experience⁶; and
- 102 (3) the desirability of using the Regulator's resources in the most efficient and economic way⁷.

The Regulator may issue guidance, or otherwise provide assistance, about any matter relating to community interest companies⁸; and the Secretary of State may require the Regulator to issue guidance or otherwise provide assistance about any matter relating to community interest companies which is specified by the Secretary of State⁹. Any guidance so issued must be such that it is readily accessible to, and capable of being easily understood by, those at whom it is aimed¹⁰; and any other assistance so provided must be provided in the manner which the Regulator considers is most likely to be helpful to those to whom it is provided¹¹.

A public authority¹² may disclose to the Regulator, for any purpose connected with the exercise of the Regulator's functions, information received by the authority in connection with its functions¹³; and the Regulator may disclose to a public authority any information received by the Regulator in connection with the functions of the Regulator, either for a purpose connected with the exercise of those functions¹⁴, or for a purpose connected with the exercise by the authority of its functions¹⁵. In deciding whether to disclose information to a public authority in a country or territory outside the United Kingdom¹⁶, the Regulator must have regard to the considerations listed in the Enterprise Act 2002¹⁷ regarding overseas disclosures¹⁸.

The powers to disclose information conferred in this way on a public authority¹⁹ and on the Regulator²⁰ are subject to any restriction on disclosure imposed by or by virtue of an enactment²¹, and any express restriction on disclosure subject to which information was supplied²². Information also may be disclosed in this way²³ subject to a restriction on its further disclosure²⁴. A person who discloses information in contravention of any restriction so imposed²⁵ is guilty of an offence²⁶, and liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale²⁷. However, a prosecution for such an offence may be instituted in England and Wales²⁸ only with the consent of the Regulator or the Director of Public Prosecutions²⁹. If any relevant offence under the Companies (Audit Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004³⁰ committed by a body corporate is proved³¹ either to have been committed with the consent or connivance of an officer³², or to be attributable to any neglect on the part of an officer³³, the officer as well as the body corporate is guilty of the offence and liable to be proceeded against and punished accordingly³⁴.

Appeal Officer for community interest companies.

84. Appeal Officer for community interest companies.

The Secretary of State¹ must appoint a person to be the Appeal Officer², who has the function of determining appeals against decisions and orders of the Regulator³ which under or by virtue of the Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 or any other enactment lie to the Appeal Officer⁴.

An appeal to the Appeal Officer against a decision or order of the Regulator may be brought on the ground that the Regulator made a material error of law or fact⁵.

On such an appeal, the Appeal Officer must dismiss the appeal⁶, allow the appeal⁷, or remit the case to the Regulator⁸.

Where a case is remitted, the Regulator must reconsider it in accordance with any rulings of law and findings of fact made by the Appeal Officer⁹.

1 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6.

2 Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 s 28(2). The officer known as the Appeal Officer for Community Interest Companies is referred to in Pt 2 (ss 26-63) as the 'Appeal Officer': see ss 28(1), 63(1). Further provision about the Appeal Officer is made (see s 28(7)) in relation to: (1) the Appeal Officer's terms of appointment (Sch 4 para 1); (2) remuneration and pensions (Sch 4 para 2); and (3) finance (Sch 4 para 3). Regulations may make provision about the practice and procedure to be followed by the Appeal Officer; and such regulations may in particular impose time limits for bringing appeals: Sch 4 para 4. In exercise of the powers conferred by Sch 4 para 4, the Secretary of State has made the Community Interest Company Regulations 2005, SI 2005/1788: see regs 37-42 (reg 38 amended by SI 2007/1093).

Eligibility to form a community interest company.

(B) REQUIREMENTS

86. Eligibility to form a community interest company.

A company is eligible to be formed as a community interest company¹ if: (1) its articles² comply with the statutory requirements that are so imposed³; (2) its proposed name complies with the relevant statutory requirements⁴; and (3) the Regulator⁵, having regard to the application and accompanying documents and any other relevant considerations, considers that the company will satisfy the community interest test and is not an excluded company⁶.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(i) Categories of Company/F. COMMUNITY INTEREST COMPANIES/(B) Requirements/87. Community interest test and excluded companies.

87. Community interest test and excluded companies.

For the purposes of the statutory provisions which govern community interest companies¹, a company satisfies the community interest test if a reasonable person might consider that its activities are being carried on for the benefit of the community². An object stated in the articles of association³ of the company is a community interest object of the company if a reasonable person might consider that the carrying on of activities by the company in furtherance of the object is for the benefit of the community⁴.

Regulations may provide that activities of a description prescribed by the regulations are to be treated as being, or as not being, activities which a reasonable person might consider are activities carried on for the benefit of the community⁵.

A company is an excluded company if it is a company of a description prescribed by regulations⁶.

1 le for the purposes of the Companies (Audit Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 Pt 2 (ss 26-63) (community interest companies): see s 35(1). As to community interest companies see PARA 82.

2 Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 s 35(2). Accordingly, the term 'community interest test' is to be construed in accordance with s 35(2): see s 63(1).

For these purposes, 'community' includes a section of the community (whether in the United Kingdom or anywhere else); and regulations may make provision about what does, does not or may constitute a section of the community: s 35(5) (amended by SI 2007/1093). As to the making of regulations under the Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 generally see s 62 (amended by SI 2009/1941). In exercise of the powers conferred by s 35(4)-(6), the Secretary of State has made the Community Interest Company Regulations 2005, SI 2005/1788: see regs 3-5 (reg 3 amended by SI 2007/1093; the Community Interest Company Regulations 2005, SI 2005/1788, reg 5 substituted by SI 2009/1942). 4 Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 s 35(3) (amended by SI 2009/1941). Accordingly, the term 'community interest object' is to be construed in accordance with the Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 s 35(3): see s 63(1).

5 Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 s 35(4). See note 2.

6 Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 s 35(6). Accordingly, the term 'excluded company' is to be construed in accordance with s 35(6): see s 63(1). For the purposes of s 35(6), the following are excluded companies: (1) a company which is (or when formed would be) a political party; (2) a company which is (or when formed would be) a political campaigning organisation; or (3) a company which is (or when formed would be) a subsidiary of a political party or of a political campaigning organisation: Community Interest Company Regulations 2005, SI 2005/1788, reg 6.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(i) Categories of Company/F. COMMUNITY INTEREST COMPANIES/(B) Requirements/88. Cap on distributions and interest.

88. Cap on distributions and interest.

Community interest companies¹ must not distribute assets to their members unless regulations make provision authorising them to do so²; and if regulations authorise community interest companies to distribute assets to their members, the regulations may impose limits on the extent to which they may do so³. Regulations also may impose limits on the payment of interest on debentures issued by, or debts of, community interest companies⁴.

Such regulations may make provision for limits to be set by the Regulator⁵, and he: (1) may set a limit by reference to a rate determined by any other person (as it has effect from time to time)⁶; and (2) may set different limits for different descriptions of community interest companies⁷. However, the Regulator must⁸: (a) undertake appropriate consultation before setting a limit⁹; and (b) in setting a limit, have regard to its likely impact on community interest companies¹⁰. Such regulations may include power for the Secretary of State to require the Regulator to review a limit or limits¹¹.

Where the Regulator sets a limit, he must publish notice of it in the Gazette¹².

90. Community interest company reports.

The directors of a community interest company¹ must prepare in respect of each financial year a report about the company's activities during the financial year (a 'community interest company report')²; and regulations must make provision requiring the directors of a community interest company to deliver to the registrar of companies³ a copy of the community interest company report⁴.

Regulations also:

- 103 (1) must make provision requiring community interest company reports to include information about the remuneration of directors⁵;
- 104 (2) may make provision as to the form of, and other information to be included in, community interest company reports⁶; and
- 105 (3) may apply provisions of the Companies Act 2006 relating to directors' reports to community interest company reports (with any appropriate modifications)⁷.

The registrar of companies must forward to the Regulator⁸ a copy of each community interest company report so delivered⁹ to the registrar¹⁰.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(i) Categories of Company/F. COMMUNITY INTEREST COMPANIES/(C) Supervision by Regulator/91. Conditions for exercise of supervisory powers.

(C) SUPERVISION BY REGULATOR

91. Conditions for exercise of supervisory powers.

In deciding whether and how to exercise his supervisory powers¹, the Regulator² must adopt an approach which is based on the principle that those powers should be exercised only to the extent necessary to maintain confidence in community interest companies³.

No power so conferred on the Regulator in relation to the appointment of a director⁴, the removal of a director⁵, the appointment of a manager⁶, or dealing with property⁷, is exercisable in relation to a community interest company unless the company default condition is satisfied in relation to the power and the company⁸. The company default condition is satisfied in relation to a power and a company if it appears to the Regulator necessary to exercise the power in relation to the company because⁹:

- 106 (1) there has been misconduct or mismanagement in the administration of the company¹⁰;
- 107 (2) there is a need to protect the company's property or to secure the proper application of that property¹¹;
- 108 (3) the company is not satisfying the community interest test¹²; or
- 109 (4) if the company has community interest objects¹³, the company is not carrying on any activities in pursuit of those objects¹⁴.

The power conferred on the Regulator in relation to the transfer of shares etc¹⁵ is not exercisable in relation to a community interest company unless it appears to the Regulator that the company is an excluded company¹⁶.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(i) Categories of Company/F. COMMUNITY INTEREST COMPANIES/(C) Supervision by Regulator/92. Investigation by Regulator.

92. Investigation by Regulator.

The Regulator¹ may either: (1) investigate the affairs of a community interest company²; or (2) appoint any person (other than a member of the Regulator's staff³) to investigate the affairs of a community interest company on behalf of the Regulator⁴.

The investigator of a community interest company⁵ may require the company or any other person to produce such documents⁶ (or documents of such description) as the investigator may specify⁷, and to provide such information (or information of such description) as the investigator may specify⁸. Such a requirement must be complied with at such time and place as may be specified by the investigator⁹; but a person on whom such a requirement is imposed may require the investigator to produce evidence of his authority¹⁰. The production of a document in pursuance of this power does not affect any lien which a person has on the document¹¹; but the investigator may take copies of or extracts from a document so produced¹². The power to require the production of documents and the provision of information does not, however, require¹³: (a) a person to produce a document or provide information in respect of which a claim could be maintained, in an action in the High Court, to legal professional privilege¹⁴, although a person who is a lawyer may be required to provide the name and address of his client¹⁵; or (b) a person carrying on the business of banking to produce a document, or provide information, relating to the affairs of a customer unless a requirement to produce the document, or provide the information, has been so imposed¹⁶ on the customer¹⁷.

A statement made by a person in compliance with a requirement so imposed to provide information¹⁸ may be used in evidence against the person¹⁹; but, in criminal proceedings, no evidence relating to the statement may be adduced by or on behalf of the prosecution²⁰, and no question relating to it may be asked by or on behalf of the prosecution²¹, unless evidence relating to it is adduced or a question relating to it is asked in the proceedings by or on behalf of that person²².

If a person fails to comply with a requirement so imposed to produce documents or to provide information²³, the investigator may certify that fact in writing to the court²⁴; and, if, after hearing any witnesses who may be produced against or on behalf of the alleged offender²⁵, and any statement which may be offered in defence²⁶, the court is satisfied that the offender failed without reasonable excuse to comply with the requirement, it may deal with him as if he had been guilty of contempt of the court²⁷.

A person commits an offence if, in purported compliance with a requirement so imposed to provide information²⁸, the person provides information which the person knows to be false in a material particular, or recklessly provides information which is false in a material particular²⁹; and a person guilty of such an offence is liable (on conviction on indictment) to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or a fine or to both, and (on summary conviction) to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 12 months³⁰ or a fine of an amount not exceeding the statutory maximum or to both³¹. A prosecution for such an offence may be instituted in England and Wales³² only with the consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions³³.

Audit ordered by Regulator.

93. Audit ordered by Regulator.

The Regulator¹ may by order² require a community interest company³ to allow the annual accounts of the company to be audited by a qualified auditor appointed by the Regulator⁴. The provisions which govern the auditor's rights to information under the Companies Act 2006⁵ apply in relation to an auditor so appointed⁶.

An audit ordered by the Regulator in this way⁷ is in addition to, and does not affect, any audit required by or by virtue of any other enactment⁸.

On completion of the audit, the auditor must make a report to the Regulator on such matters and in such form as the Regulator specifies⁹.

The expenses of the audit, including the remuneration of the auditor, are to be paid by the Regulator¹⁰.

1 As to the Regulator see PARA 83; and as to the conditions he must observe in the exercise of his supervisory powers see PARA 91.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(i) Categories of Company/F. COMMUNITY INTEREST COMPANIES/(C) Supervision by Regulator/94. Institution of civil proceedings by Regulator.

94. Institution of civil proceedings by Regulator.

The Regulator¹ may bring civil proceedings in the name and on behalf of a community interest company². Before instituting such proceedings, the Regulator must give written notice to the company³, stating: (1) the cause of action⁴; (2) the remedy sought⁵; and (3) a summary of the facts on which the proceedings are to be based⁶. Any director of the company may apply to the court for an order: (a) that proposed proceedings are not to be instituted in this way⁷; or (b) that proceedings instituted in this way are to be discontinued⁸. On such an application, the court may make such order as it thinks fit⁹; and, in particular, the court may, as an alternative to making an order to the effect of head (a) or head (b) above, order¹⁰:

110 (i) that the proposed proceedings may be instituted¹¹, or the proceedings that have been instituted¹² may be continued, on such terms and conditions as the court thinks fit¹³;

111 (ii) that any proceedings instituted by the company are to be discontinued¹⁴; or

- 112 (iii) that any proceedings instituted by the company may be continued on such terms and conditions as the court thinks fit¹⁵.

The Regulator must indemnify the company against any costs incurred by it in connection with proceedings so brought by him¹⁶. Any costs either awarded to the company in connection with such proceedings¹⁷, or incurred by the company in connection with the proceedings and which it is agreed should be paid by a defendant¹⁸, are to be paid to the Regulator¹⁹.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(i) Categories of Company/F. COMMUNITY INTEREST COMPANIES/(C) Supervision by Regulator/95. Appointment of director by Regulator.

95. Appointment of director by Regulator.

The Regulator¹ may by order² appoint a director of a community interest company³.

The person appointed may be anyone whom the Regulator thinks appropriate, other than a member of the Regulator's staff⁴, and a person may be so appointed whether or not the person is a member of the company⁵, and irrespective of any provision made by the articles of the company⁶ or a resolution of the company⁷.

An order appointing a person to be a director of a company in this way must specify the terms on which the director is to hold office⁸. Those terms have effect as if contained in a contract between the director and the company⁹; and the terms specified must include the period for which the director is to hold office, and may include terms as to the remuneration of the director by the company¹⁰.

A director so appointed¹¹ has all the powers of the directors appointed by the company (including powers exercisable only by a particular director or class of directors)¹²; and such a director may not be removed by the company, although he may be removed by the Regulator at any time¹³.

Where a person is appointed to be a director of the company in this way, or where a person so appointed ceases to be a director of the company, the obligation which would otherwise be imposed on the company¹⁴ to notify any change among directors to the registrar¹⁵ is instead an obligation of the Regulator¹⁶. Where a person appointed to be a director of the company under these provisions¹⁷ ceases to be a director of the company¹⁸, the company must give notification of that fact to the Regulator in a form approved by the Regulator before the end of the period of 14 days beginning with the date on which the person ceases to be a director¹⁹. If default is made in complying with this requirement to notify²⁰, an offence is committed by the company and by every officer of the company who is in default²¹; and a person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale²² and (for continued contravention) a daily default fine²³ not exceeding one-tenth of level 5 on the standard scale²⁴.

The company may appeal to the Appeal Officer²⁵ against an order made by the Regulator appointing a director of a community interest company²⁶.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(i) Categories of Company/F. COMMUNITY INTEREST COMPANIES/(C) Supervision by Regulator/96. Removal or suspension of director by Regulator.

96. Removal or suspension of director by Regulator.

The Regulator¹ may by order²:

- 113 (1) remove a director of a community interest company³; or
- 114 (2) suspend a director of the company pending a decision whether to remove him⁴, up to a maximum period of one year⁵.

Before making an order under either head (1) or head (2) above in relation to a director, the Regulator must give at least 14 days' notice to the director, and to the company⁶; and, where an order is made in relation to a director under either head (1) or head (2) above, the director may appeal against the order to the High Court⁷.

If a person has been removed under head (1) above, the company may not subsequently appoint him a director of the company⁸, and any assignment to the person of the office of director of the company is of no effect (even if approved by special resolution of the company)⁹.

If the Regulator suspends a director under head (2) above, the Regulator may give directions in relation to the performance of the director's functions¹⁰.

The Regulator may discharge an order made under head (1) above¹¹, but such a discharge does not reinstate the person removed by the order as a director of the company¹².

The Regulator must also from time to time review any order made under head (2) above and, if it is appropriate to do so, discharge the order¹³.

The Regulator must, before the end of the period of 14 days beginning with the date on which:

- 115 (a) an order under head (1) above is made or discharged¹⁴; or
- 116 (b) an order under head (2) above is made or discharged or expires¹⁵; or
- 117 (c) an order under head (1) or head (2) above is quashed on appeal¹⁶,

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(i) Categories of Company/F. COMMUNITY INTEREST COMPANIES/(C) Supervision by Regulator/97. Appointment of manager by Regulator.

97. Appointment of manager by Regulator.

The Regulator¹ may by order² appoint a manager in respect of the property and affairs of a community interest company³. The person appointed may be anyone whom the Regulator thinks appropriate, other than a member of the Regulator's staff⁴.

Such an order of appointment⁵ may make provision as to the functions to be exercised by, and the powers of, the manager⁶; and such an order may in particular provide for the manager to have such of the functions of the company's directors as are specified in the order⁷, and for the company's directors to be prevented from exercising any of those functions⁸.

In carrying out his functions, the manager acts as the company's agent⁹; and a person dealing with the manager in good faith and for value need not inquire whether the manager is acting within his powers¹⁰.

The appointment of the manager does not affect any right of any person to appoint a receiver or manager of the company's property¹¹, or the rights of a receiver or manager appointed by a person other than the Regulator¹².

The manager's functions are to be discharged by him under the supervision of the Regulator¹³; and the Regulator must from time to time review the order by which the manager is appointed and, if it is appropriate to do so, discharge it in whole or in part¹⁴. In particular, the Regulator must discharge the order on the appointment of a person to act as administrative receiver, administrator, provisional liquidator or liquidator of the company¹⁵.

The Regulator may apply to the court for directions in relation to any matter arising in connection with the manager's functions or powers¹⁶; and on such an application the court may give such directions or make such orders as it thinks fit¹⁷.

Regulations¹⁸ may authorise the Regulator to require a manager to make reports¹⁹, to require a manager to give security for the due exercise of the manager's functions²⁰, and to remove a manager in circumstances prescribed by the regulations²¹. Regulations also may provide for a manager's remuneration to be payable from the property of the company²², and may authorise the Regulator to determine the amount of a manager's remuneration and to disallow any amount of remuneration in circumstances prescribed by the regulations²³.

The company may appeal to the Appeal Officer²⁴ against an order of the Regulator appointing a manager in respect of the property and affairs of a community interest company²⁵.

Notice must be given to the registrar of companies of the appointment in relation to a company of a manager appointed under the Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 s 47: Companies Act 2006 s 1154(1)(c). Such notice must be given by the Regulator of Community Interest Companies (s 1154(2)(c)); and it must specify an address at which service of documents (including legal process) may be effected on the person appointed (s 1154(3)). Notice of a change in the address for service may be given to the registrar by the person appointed: s 1154(3). Where notice has been given under s 1154 of the appointment of a person, notice must also be given by the Regulator to the registrar of the termination of the appointment: s 1154(2)(c), (4). 98. Regulator's power to deal in company property.

The Regulator¹ may by order²: (1) vest in the Official Property Holder³ any property held by or in trust for a community interest company⁴; or (2) require persons in whom such property is vested to transfer it to the Official Property Holder⁵.

The Regulator may order: (a) a person who holds property on behalf of a community interest company, or on behalf of a trustee of a community interest company, not to part with the property without the Regulator's consent⁶; and (b) any debtor of a community interest company not to make any payment in respect of the debtor's liability to the company without the Regulator's consent⁷.

The Regulator may by order restrict: (i) the transactions which may be entered into by a community interest company⁸; or (ii) the nature or amount of the payments that a community interest company may make⁹, and the order may in particular provide that transactions may not be entered into or payments made without the Regulator's consent¹⁰.

The Regulator must from time to time review any such order¹¹ and, if it is appropriate to do so, discharge the order in whole or in part¹². On discharging such an order, the Regulator may make any order as to the vesting or transfer of the property, and give any directions, which he considers appropriate¹³.

If a person fails to comply with an order under head (2) above, the Regulator may certify that fact in writing to the court¹⁴. If, after hearing any witnesses who may be produced against or on behalf of the alleged offender¹⁵, and any statement which may be offered in defence¹⁶, the court is satisfied that the offender failed without reasonable excuse to comply with the order, it may deal with him as if he had been guilty of contempt of the court¹⁷.

A person who contravenes an order under head (a), head (b), head (i) or head (ii) above commits an offence¹⁸; and a person guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale¹⁹. A prosecution for such an offence may be instituted, in England and Wales²⁰, only with the consent of the Regulator or of the Director of Public Prosecutions²¹. These provisions regarding criminal offences²² do not prevent the bringing of civil proceedings in respect of a contravention of an order under head (2) above, or under head (a), head (b), head (i) or head(ii) above²³.

The company and any person to whom the order is directed may appeal to the Appeal Officer²⁴ against an order under head (1), head (2), head (a) or head (b) above²⁵; and the company may appeal to the Appeal Officer against an order under head (i) or head (ii) above²⁶.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(i) Categories of Company/F. COMMUNITY INTEREST COMPANIES/(C) Supervision by Regulator/99. Regulator's power to transfer shares etc.

99. Regulator's power to transfer shares etc.

If a community interest company¹ has a share capital², the Regulator³ may by order⁴ transfer specified shares in the company to specified persons⁵. However, such an order may not transfer any shares in respect of which a dividend may be paid⁶, or in respect of which a distribution of the company's assets may be made if the company is wound up⁷.

If a community interest company is a company limited by guarantee⁸, the Regulator may by order extinguish the interests in the company of specified members of the company (otherwise than as shareholders)⁹, and appoint a new member in place of each member whose interest has been extinguished¹⁰.

Any order made pursuant to the power to transfer shares or to replace members¹¹ in relation to a company may only transfer shares to, and appoint as new members, persons who have consented to the transfer or appointment¹², and may be made irrespective of any provision made by the articles of the company¹³ or a resolution of the company¹⁴.

The company and any person from whom shares are transferred by an order¹⁵ may appeal to the Appeal Officer¹⁶ against the order¹⁷; and the company and any person whose interest is extinguished by the order¹⁸ may appeal to the Appeal Officer against that order¹⁹.

100. Petition for winding up; dissolution and striking off.

The Regulator¹ may present a petition for a community interest company² to be wound up³ if the court is of the opinion that it is just and equitable that the company should be wound up⁴. However, this provision does not apply if the company is already being wound up by the court⁵.

If a community interest company has been dissolved⁶, or has been struck off the register either as a defunct company⁷ or because the company is in liquidation⁸, the Regulator may apply to the court⁹ for an order restoring the company's name to the register¹⁰.

If an application¹¹ by a company to strike itself off the register is made on behalf of a community interest company, the provisions governing the persons to be notified of such an application¹² are to be treated as also requiring a copy of the application to be given to the Regulator¹³.

101. Fees payable to the Regulator etc.

Regulations made under the Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004¹ may require the payment of such fees in connection with the Regulator's functions² as may be specified in the regulations³. However, the regulations may provide for fees to be paid to the registrar of companies⁴ rather than to the Regulator⁵.

The Regulator may charge a fee for any service which is provided otherwise than in pursuance of an obligation imposed by law, other than the provision of guidance which the Regulator considers to be of general interest⁶.

Fees paid in this way⁷ are to be paid into the Consolidated Fund⁸.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(ii) Formation/A. FORMATION OF COMPANY/102. Formation of new company under the Companies Act 2006.

(ii) Formation

A. FORMATION OF COMPANY

102. Formation of new company under the Companies Act 2006.

A company¹ is formed under the Companies Act 2006 by one or more persons²: (1) subscribing their names to a memorandum of association³; and (2) complying with the requirements of the Companies Act 2006 as to registration⁴. A company may not be so formed for an unlawful purpose⁵.

A company is a 'limited company' if the liability of its members is limited by its constitution⁶. It may be limited by shares⁷ or limited by guarantee⁸: if the liability of its members is limited to the amount, if any, unpaid on the shares held by them, the company is 'limited by shares'⁹; if their liability is limited to such amount as the members undertake to contribute to the assets of the company in the event of its being wound up¹⁰, the company is 'limited by guarantee'¹¹. If there is no limit on the liability of its members, the company is an 'unlimited company'¹².

A 'public company' within the meaning of the Companies Act 2006 is a company limited by shares, or limited by guarantee and having a share capital¹³, being a company¹⁴:

118 (a) whose certificate of incorporation¹⁵ states that it is a public company¹⁶; and 119 (b) in relation to which the requirements of the Companies Act 2006, or the former Companies Acts¹⁷, as to the registration or re-registration of a company as a public company¹⁸ have been complied with on or after 22 December 1980¹⁹.

A 'private company' within the meaning of the Companies Act 2006 is a company that is not a public company²⁰.

With effect from 22 December 1980²¹, a company cannot be formed as, or become, a company limited by guarantee with a share capital²². Nor may a public company limited by guarantee and not having a share capital be formed as from that date²³.

Any contract, so far as it relates to the formation of a company²⁴ or to its constitution, or the rights or obligations of its corporators or members, is exempt from the prohibitions on the exclusion of liability imposed by the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977²⁵.

1 As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

2 As to the meaning of 'person' for these purposes see PARA 103; and as to the meaning of 'person' generally see PARA 311 note 2. Any enactment or rule of law applicable to companies formed by two or more persons or having two or more members applies with any necessary modification in relation to a company formed by one person or having only one person as a member: Companies Act 2006 s 38. This provision implements EC Council Directive 89/667 (OJ L395, 30.12.89, p 40) (the 'Twelfth Company Law Directive') on single-member private limited liability companies: see PARA 23. As to the meaning of 'enactment' see PARA 17 note 2. As to the meaning of 'member' see PARA 321. As to membership of a company generally see PARA 321 et seq.

As to the registration requirements mentioned in head (2) in the text see ss 9-13; and PARA 111 (application to registrar for registration), PARA 112 (requisite particulars of directors and secretaries), PARA 113 (statement of capital and initial shareholdings required in the case of a company limited by shares), PARA 115 (statement of guarantee required in the case of a company that is to be limited by guarantee).

As to the registration requirements for companies formed under the Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 see PARA 118. The provisions which govern community interest companies (ie the Companies (Audit Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 Pt 2 (ss 26-63): see PARA 82 et seq) are still regarded as company law provisions under the statutory framework established by the Companies Act 2006, but they are regarded as forming a distinct body of regulation which is additional to, and sits alongside, company law rather than forming part of it. The provisions of the Companies Acts, apart from the Companies Act 2006 s 6 (see PARA 82), have effect subject to the Companies (Audit Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 Pt 2: see the Companies Act 2006 s 6(2); and PARA 82.

13 As to the meanings of 'company having a share capital' and 'share capital' see PARA 1042. With the coming into effect of the Companies Act 1980, and in accordance with all subsequent Companies Acts, it has not been possible to form a company which is limited by guarantee and having a share capital, although such companies that had existed up to that point have not been extinguished by any act of law and they may continue to exist, legally, as historical entities: see the text and notes 22-23.

14 Companies Act 2006 s 4(2). As to public companies and their powers generally see PARA 73. As to the share capital requirements that are imposed on public companies see PARA 74 et seq. In the case of an unregistered company (see PARA 1665 et seq), any reference to a public company must be read as referring to a company that has power under its constitution to offer its shares or debentures to the public: see the Unregistered Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2436, reg 5(1)(a); and PARA 1666. As to the meaning of 'unregistered company' see PARA 1665.

Before the enactment of the Companies Act 1907, the term 'public company' was understood to mean a company which invited the public to subscribe for its shares, and companies which did not do so were often called private companies and are so described in many judgments (see Re British Seamless Paper Box Co (1881) 17 ChD 467 at 473, CA; Re George Newman & Co [1895] 1 Ch 674 at 685, CA; Salomon v A Salomon & Co Ltd [1897] AC 22 at 43, HL; Re Wragg Ltd [1897] 1 Ch 796 at 807, CA), although the legal status of such a company is that of a public company (Re Sharp, Rickett v Sharp (1890) 45 ChD 286 at 290, CA; Re Lysaght, Lysaght v Lysaght [1898] 1 Ch 115 at 122, CA; Trevor v Whitworth (1887) 12 App Cas 409 at 434, HL). Thereafter the term 'public company', which was not defined, was used in contradistinction to 'private company', which was defined as a company which by its articles restricted the right to transfer its shares, limited the number of its members (excluding persons in or formerly in the employment of the company) to 50, and prohibited any invitation to the public to subscribe for its shares and debentures: see the Companies Act 1948 ss 28, 455(1) (repealed). In other Acts, the term 'public company', although not expressly defined, may include a private company: see eg Re White, Theobald v White [1913] 1 Ch 231 at 238 (decided under the Apportionment Act 1870). As to private companies under the Companies Act 2006 see the text and note 22; and see PARA 72.

18 As to the re-registration of a private company as a public company under the Companies Act 2006 see PARAS 168-172.

19 Companies Act 2006 s 4(2)(b), (3)(a). The date of 22 December 1980 referred to in the text is the date on which the corresponding provisions of the Companies Act 1980 (now repealed) came into force: see the Companies Act 1980 (Commencement No 2) Order 1980, SI 1980/1785. As to the Companies Act 1980 generally see PARA 13.

20 Companies Act 2006 s 4(1). For the two major differences between private and public companies see Pt 20 Ch 1 (ss 755-760) (prohibition of public offers by private companies) (as to which see PARA 1066) and Pt 20 Ch 2 (ss 761-767) (minimum share requirement for public companies) (as to which see PARA 74 et seq); s 4(4). See also note 14. As to private companies and the restrictions on their powers see also PARA 72.

In the case of an unregistered company (see PARA 1665 et seq), any reference to a private company must be read as referring to a company that does not have power to offer its shares or debentures to the public: see the Unregistered Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2436, reg 5(1)(b); and PARA 1666.

22 See the Companies Act 2006 s 5(1), (2)(a); and PARA 79.

23 This is the effect of the Companies Act 2006 s 5(1), (2) (see the text and note 22) when combined with the definition of a public company given in s 4(2) (see the text and note 14).

24 For these purposes, 'company' means any body corporate or unincorporated association and includes a partnership: Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977 s 1(2), Sch 1 para 1(d). As to the meaning of 'body corporate' see PARA 1 note 5. As to the meaning of 'partnership' see PARA 4.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(ii) Formation/A. FORMATION OF COMPANY/103. Meaning of 'person' as subscriber to the memorandum of association.

103. Meaning of 'person' as subscriber to the memorandum of association.

For the purpose of subscribing to the memorandum of association¹, 'person' includes a foreigner although residing abroad², a person who is a trustee for another subscriber³, and a person who signs by an agent, although only orally appointed⁴. It also includes a corporation and limited company⁵, and it may perhaps also include a minor⁶.

If a firm name is, with the authority of the firm, subscribed to a memorandum, the partners are joint holders of the shares subscribed for⁷. If an individual subscribes in his own name as agent for a firm, and the firm takes up the shares subscribed for, he is absolved from liability⁸.

104. Requirements of memorandum under the Companies Act 2006.

A 'memorandum of association' is a memorandum stating that the subscribers¹:

- 120 (1) wish to form a company² under the Companies Act 2006³; and
- 121 (2) agree to become members of the company⁴ and, in the case of a company that is to have a share capital⁵, to take at least one share each⁶.

The memorandum must be in the prescribed form⁷ and must be authenticated by each subscriber⁸.

A company must have articles of association⁹ prescribing regulations for the company¹⁰.

1 Companies Act 2006 s 8(1). As to subscribers of the memorandum see also PARA 321 et seq.

2 As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

3 Companies Act 2006 s 8(1)(a). As to formation of a company under the Companies Act 2006 see PARA 102. As to restrictions on agreements for the transfer by subscribers to the company of non-cash assets in the 'initial period' see PARA 1125. As to the memorandum and articles of association of a community interest company see PARA 105.

4 As to the meaning of 'member' see PARA 321. As to membership of a company see PARA 321 et seq.

5 As to the meanings of 'company having a share capital' and 'share capital' see PARA 1042.

6 Companies Act 2006 s 8(1)(b). As to the meaning of 'share' see PARA 1042.

7 In the Companies Acts, 'prescribed' means prescribed (by order or by regulations) by the Secretary of State: Companies Act 2006 s 1167. As to the making of orders and regulations under the Companies Act 2006 generally see ss 1288-1292. As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6. In exercise of the powers conferred by s 8(2), the Secretary of State has made the Companies (Registration) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3014. Accordingly, for the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 s 8, the memorandum of association of a company having a share capital must be in the form set out in the Companies (Registration) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3014, reg 2(a), Sch 1 (see PARA 78 note 8); and the memorandum of association of a company not having a share capital must be in the form set out in reg 2(b), Sch 2 (see PARAS 79 note 8, 81 note 7).

For existing companies (see PARA 230), the prescribed form of memorandum for a company limited by shares is given in the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, reg 2, Schedule Table B (private company limited by shares) and in Schedule Table F (public company limited by shares) (see PARA 78 note 8); the prescribed form of memorandum for a company limited by guarantee is given in Schedule Table C (company limited by guarantee and not having a share capital), in Schedule Table D Pt I (public company limited by guarantee and having a share capital) and in Schedule Table D Pt II (private company limited by guarantee and having a share capital) (see PARA 79 note 8); and the prescribed form of memorandum for an unlimited company having a share capital is given in the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, reg 2, Schedule Table E (an unlimited company having a share capital) (see PARA 81 note 7). As to the meanings of 'company limited by shares', 'company limited by guarantee', 'limited company', 'private company', 'public company' and 'unlimited company' see PARA 102.

Provisions that immediately before 1 October 2009 were contained in a company's memorandum but are not provisions of the kind mentioned in the Companies Act 2006 s 8 are to be treated after that date as provisions of the company's articles: see s 28(1); and PARA 228. 1 October 2009 is the date by which s 8 had come fully into force: see the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, art 3(b).

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(ii) Formation/A. FORMATION OF COMPANY/105. Requirements relating to a community interest company.

105. Requirements relating to a community interest company.

The articles of association¹ of a community interest company² must state that the company is to be a community interest company³.

The articles of a community interest company of any description⁴:

- 122 (1) must at all times include such provisions as regulations require to be included in the articles of every community interest company or a community interest company of that description⁵; and
- 123 (2) must not include such provisions as regulations require not to be so included⁶.

The articles of a community interest company are of no effect to the extent that they⁷:

- 124 (a) are inconsistent with provisions required⁸ to be included in the articles of the company⁹; or
- 125 (b) include provisions required¹⁰ not to be included¹¹.

Regulations may make provision for and in connection with restricting the ability of a community interest company to amend its articles so as to add, remove or alter a statement of the company's objects¹².

49 (1) provisions about the transfer and distribution of the company's assets (including their distribution on a winding up) (Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 s 32(4)(a));

50 (2) provisions about the payment of interest on debentures issued by the company or debts of the company (s 32(4)(b));

51 (3) provisions about membership of the company (s 32(4)(c));

52 (4) provisions about the voting rights of members of the company (s 32(4)(d));

53 (5) provisions about the appointment and removal of directors of the company (s 32(4)(e)); and 54 (6) provisions about voting at meetings of directors of the company (s 32(4)(f)).

As to the making of regulations under the Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 generally see s 62 (amended by SI 2009/1941). Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(ii) Formation/A. FORMATION OF COMPANY/106. Companies formed for an illegal purpose.

106. Companies formed for an illegal purpose.

A company of a dangerous and mischievous character or formed for a fraudulent purpose is probably illegal at common law¹; and a company, the proposed constitution of which involves an offence against the general law, cannot properly be registered². In the event of such a company being registered³, that act in itself would not render its objects legal⁴. Thus a company formed to set up a lottery in England⁵ (other than a company authorised by the National Lottery Commission by licence to run the National Lottery or to promote lotteries as part of the National Lottery⁶) or to sell tickets in England in a lottery in a foreign state where lotteries are legal, would, if registered under the Companies Act 2006, be an illegal company⁷; but a company formed to set up a lottery in a foreign state where such lotteries are legal would not be illegal⁸.

The fact that some only of the provisions of a company's constitution are illegal does not necessarily make the company an illegal one, or prevent the court from giving effect to such of the rules as are legal⁹; but, where the objects of a company include an illegal object, and other objects of the company, although in themselves legal, are mere applications of the governing principle stated in the illegal object, the company is an illegal company¹⁰. If a company is formed for legal purposes, the commission by it of illegal acts does not make it an illegal company¹¹.

1 An Act of 1719 (6 Geo 1 c 18) ss 18, 19 (repealed; popularly known as the 'Bubble Act') declared to be illegal and void dangerous and mischievous undertakings and attempts tending to the common grievance, prejudice and inconvenience of the King's subjects, or great numbers of them, and more particularly by unincorporated companies presuming to act as if they were corporate bodies, and pretending to make their shares or stocks transferable, without any legal authority by Act of Parliament or charter; but, even before that Act was repealed, there were conflicting decisions as to whether acting, by an unincorporated company, as a corporation, without the authority of a statute or charter, and pretending to be possessed of transferable stock, was illegal: Duvergier v Fellows (1828) 5 Bing 248 at 267; Blundell v Winsor (1837) 8 Sim 601; Walburn v Ingilby (1883) 1 My & K 61 at 76. After that Act had been partly repealed in 1825 (by 6 Geo 4 c 91), notwithstanding the recital in the repealing Act that the several undertakings, attempts, practices, acts, matters and things referred to in the repealed Act should be adjudged and dealt with in like manner as they might have been adjudged and dealt with 'according to the common law, notwithstanding the Act', the mere raising and transfer of stock in an unincorporated company was not an offence at common law: Garrard v Hardey (1843) 5 Man & G 471; Harrison v Heathorn (1843) 6 Man & G 81.

2 R v Registrar of Joint Stock Companies, ex p More [1931] 2 KB 197 at 201, CA; R v Registrar of Companies, ex p Bowen [1914] 3 KB 1161; Bowman v Secular Society Ltd [1917] AC 406, HL. As to registration under the Companies Act 2006 see PARA 111.

3 Because the Companies Act 2006 is not expressed to bind the Crown, it would appear that, in the event of such a company being incorporated by registration under that Act (see PARA 119), the Attorney General could institute proceedings by way of a quashing order to cancel the registration: Bowman v Secular Society Ltd [1917] AC 406 at 439-440, HL, per Lord Parker of Waddington; and see the cases cited in note 2. As to quashing orders see JUDICIAL REVIEW vol 61 (2010) PARA 693. In practice, the registrar can be relied upon to refuse to register such a company, and consequently the question of what is the status of such a company has never been decided: see PARA 119. As to the meaning of 'registrar' see PARA 131 note 2.

4 However, the effect of the Companies Act 2006 s 15(4) (conclusiveness of the certificate of incorporation: see PARA 119) appears to be that the courts will recognise the corporate existence of a company all of whose objects are transparently illegal, while the certificate remains unrevoked: Bowman v Secular Society Ltd [1917] AC 406 at 439, HL, per Lord Parker of Waddington.

5 As to lotteries see LICENSING AND GAMBLING vol 68 (2008) PARA 686 et seq. As to the meaning of 'England' see PARA 1 note 5.

Provisions that immediately before 1 October 2009 were contained in a company's memorandum but are not provisions of the kind mentioned in the Companies Act 2006 s 8 (which substantially altered the purpose of the memorandum of association) (see PARA 104) are to be treated after that date as provisions of the company's articles: see s 28(1); and PARA 228. Thus it would appear that a money-lending company which failed to comply with the then statutory requirements as to moneylenders was not an illegal company but was merely liable to the penalties imposed by those requirements: see further Lodge v National Union Investment Co Ltd [1907] 1 Ch 300. The same would appear to apply to a company which carries on the business of dentistry without complying with the requirements of the Dentists Act 1984 s 43 (see MEDICAL PROFESSIONS vol 30(1) (Reissue) PARA 406), or which carries on business under the style or title of 'architect' without complying with the requirements of the Architects Act 1997 ss 1(1), 4, 20(1) (see BUILDING CONTRACTS, ARCHITECTS, ENGINEERS, VALUERS AND SURVEYORS vol 4(3) (Reissue) PARA 223). See also Lindley's Law of Companies (6th Edn) p 186, where it is questioned whether the failure of bankers to make the return required under penalties by the Bank Charter Act 1844 s 21 (repealed) made a banking partnership or company composed in part of members whose names had not been returned in accordance with that Act illegal.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(ii) Formation/A. FORMATION OF COMPANY/107. Proceedings by or against illegal companies.

107. Proceedings by or against illegal companies.

An illegal company (that is, one formed for an illegal purpose) cannot sustain a claim to recover a debt incurred for money lent, either to members or outsiders¹, or on any contract made directly for the purpose of carrying on its business². A trustee for the illegal company is in no better position³.

Money lent to an illegal company for the purpose of carrying out its objects cannot be recovered⁴, and persons making other contracts with an illegal company may not be able to enforce them against it⁵. Persons subscribing to the formation of a company, the agreement to form which is illegal, may, however, recover the money before it is actually applied to the illegal purpose⁶, and the court will order any persons who have received the money subscribed to render an account⁷; but the question, even now, seems open whether the courts will assist members of illegal companies to recover their subscriptions from the persons who have been the recipients of them, and, if so, by what means⁸.

The members of an illegal company may be beneficial owners of property, and, if an officer of the company embezzles funds entrusted to him, he may be indicted for theft⁹.

108. Winding up of illegal company.

An illegal company cannot be wound up by the court under the Insolvency Act 1986 on its own petition or that of a member¹, or on the petition of a creditor, at any rate if the petitioner had notice of the illegality². If a winding-up order is made, it is effective unless and until discharged

B. REGISTRATION REQUIREMENTS

111. Application to registrar for registration.

The memorandum of association¹ must be delivered to the registrar² together with an application for registration of the company³, the other documents required⁴ for registration and a statement of compliance⁵.

The application for registration must state⁶:

- 126 (1) the company's proposed name⁷;
- 127 (2) whether the company's registered office is to be situated in England and Wales (or in Wales), in Scotland or in Northern Ireland⁸;
- 128 (3) whether the liability of the members of the company⁹ is to be limited, and if so whether it is to be limited by shares¹⁰ or by guarantee¹¹; and
- 129 (4) whether the company is to be a private¹² or a public company¹³.

The application must contain¹⁴:

- 130 (a) in the case of a company that is to have a share capital¹⁵, a statement of capital and initial shareholdings¹⁶;
- 131 (b) in the case of a company that is to be limited by guarantee, a statement of guarantee¹⁷;
- 132 (c) a statement of the company's proposed officers¹⁸;

and the application must also contain¹⁹: (i) a statement of the intended address of the company's registered office²⁰; and (ii) a copy of any proposed articles of association²¹ (to the extent that these are not supplied by the default application of model articles)²².

The statement of compliance required to be delivered to the registrar is a statement that the requirements of the Companies Act 2006 as to registration have been complied with²³. The registrar may accept the statement of compliance as sufficient evidence of compliance²⁴.

If the registrar is satisfied that the requirements of the Companies Act 2006 as to registration are complied with, he must register the documents delivered to him²⁵. The duty of the registrar as to registration has never been purely ministerial²⁶. He should consider whether the requirements of the Companies Acts have been complied with and refuse registration if he conceives that they have not²⁷. The court will not interfere²⁸ with the decision of the registrar unless it is shown that the registrar had not in fact exercised his discretion, or that he had exercised it upon some wrong principle of law, or that he had been influenced by extraneous considerations which he ought not to have taken into account²⁹.

112. The statement of proposed officers.

The statement of proposed officers¹ required to be delivered² to the registrar³ must contain the required particulars of⁴:

- 133 (1) the person who is, or persons who are, to be the first director or directors of the company⁵;
- 134 (2) in the case of a company that is to be a private company⁶, any person who is (or any persons who are) to be the first secretary (or joint secretaries) of the company⁷;
- 135 (3) in the case of a company that is to be a public company⁸, the person who is (or the persons who are) to be the first secretary (or joint secretaries) of the company⁹.

The required particulars are the particulars that will be required to be stated¹⁰:

- 136 (a) in the case of a director, in the company's register of directors¹¹ and register of directors' residential addresses¹²;
- 137 (b) in the case of a secretary, in the company's register of secretaries¹³.

The statement must also contain a consent by each of the persons named as a director, as secretary or as one of joint secretaries, to act in the relevant capacity¹⁴.

The statement of capital and initial shareholdings that is required to be delivered¹ in the case of a company limited by shares² must comply with the following provisions³, namely:

138 (1) it must state:

13. (a) the total number of shares of the company to be taken on formation by the subscribers to the memorandum of association⁴;
14. (b) the aggregate nominal value of those shares⁵;
15. (c) for each class of shares⁶: (i) prescribed particulars of the rights attached to the shares⁷; (ii) the total number of shares of that class⁸; and (iii) the aggregate nominal value of shares of that class⁹; and

139 (2) it must contain such information as may be prescribed for the purpose of identifying the subscribers to the memorandum of association¹¹; and

140

(3) it must state, with respect to each subscriber to the memorandum:

17. (a) the number, nominal value (of each share) and class of shares to be taken by him on formation¹²; and

18. (b) the amount to be paid up and the amount (if any) to be unpaid on each share (whether on account of the nominal value of the share or by way of premium)¹³.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(ii) Formation/B. REGISTRATION REQUIREMENTS/118. Registration of new company formed as a community interest company.

118. Registration of new company formed as a community interest company.

If a company is to be formed as a community interest company¹, the documents delivered to the registrar of companies² must be accompanied by the prescribed formation documents³.

On receiving the documents so delivered and the prescribed formation documents, the registrar of companies must, instead of registering the documents, forward a copy of each of the documents to the Regulator⁴, and retain the documents pending the Regulator's decision⁵.

The Regulator must decide whether the company is eligible to be formed as a community interest company⁶. A company is eligible to be formed as a community interest company if:

- 148 (1) its articles⁷ comply with the statutory requirements that are so imposed⁸;
- 149 (2) its proposed name complies with the relevant statutory requirements⁹; and
- 150 (3) the Regulator, having regard to the application and accompanying documents and any other relevant considerations, considers that the company will satisfy the community interest test and is not an excluded company¹⁰.

The Regulator must give notice of the decision to the registrar of companies, but the registrar is not required to record it¹¹.

If the Regulator decides that the company is eligible to be formed as a community interest company, the registrar of companies must proceed in accordance with the statutory requirements which govern the registration of the documents delivered to him¹² and the issue of certificates of incorporation¹³; and if the company is entered on the register¹⁴, he must also retain and record the prescribed formation documents¹⁵.

The certificate of incorporation must state that the company is a community interest company¹⁶; and the fact that the certificate of incorporation contains such a statement is conclusive evidence that the company is a community interest company¹⁷.

If the Regulator decides that the company is not eligible to be formed as a community interest company, any subscriber to the memorandum of association¹⁸ may appeal to the Appeal Officer¹⁹ against the decision²⁰.

C. INCORPORATION AND ITS EFFECTS

119. Certificate of incorporation.

On the registration of a company¹, the registrar of companies² must give a certificate that the company is incorporated³. The certificate must state⁴:

- 151 (1) the name⁵ and registered number of the company⁶;
- 152 (2) the date of its incorporation⁷;
- 153 (3) whether it is a limited⁸ or unlimited company⁹, and if it is limited whether it is limited by shares¹⁰ or limited by guarantee¹¹;
- 154 (4) whether it is a private¹² or a public company¹³;
- 155 (5) whether the company is a community interest company¹⁴;
- 156 (6) whether the company's registered office¹⁵ is situated in England and Wales¹⁶ (or in Wales), in Scotland or in Northern Ireland¹⁷.

The certificate must be signed by the registrar or authenticated by the registrar's official seal¹⁸. The registrar's duty to certify may be enforced by a mandatory order¹⁹. The registrar is also required to cause notice of the issue of the certificate to be published²⁰.

The certificate is conclusive evidence that the requirements of the Companies Act 2006²¹ as to registration have been complied with and that the company is duly registered under that Act²².

If a company is registered with illegal objects²³, the existence of a certificate precludes its corporate status being challenged without, however, making those objects legal²⁴; but the registration provision²⁵ is not expressed to bind the Crown, and the Attorney General, on behalf of the Crown, may institute proceedings by way of a quashing order²⁶ to cancel a registration improperly or erroneously allowed²⁷.

A copy of the certificate certified in writing by the registrar is admissible in evidence in legal proceedings²⁸, and, as against the company itself, registration may be evidenced by other means, for example by producing its sealed share certificate²⁹.

120. Effect of incorporation.

As from the date of incorporation¹, the subscribers of the memorandum of association², together with such other persons as may from time to time become members of the company³, are a body corporate⁴ by the name stated in the certificate of incorporation⁵. That body corporate is then capable forthwith of exercising all the functions of an incorporated company⁶, except that, if the company is registered as a public company⁷, it must not do business⁸ or exercise any borrowing power⁹ unless the registrar¹⁰ has issued it with a further certificate (a 'trading certificate')¹¹ to the effect that he is satisfied that its allotted share capital¹² is not less than the authorised minimum¹³. In the case of a company having a share capital¹⁴, the subscribers to the memorandum become holders of the shares specified in the statement of capital and initial shareholdings¹⁵.

The body corporate, as a legal entity, is separate from, and distinct from, the individual members of the company¹⁶. Its status and registered office¹⁷ are as stated in, or in connection with, the application for registration¹⁸.

The persons named in the statement of proposed officers¹⁹ as director²⁰, or as secretary²¹ or joint secretary of the company, are, as from the date of the company's incorporation, deemed to have been appointed to that office²².

The principle, that a company is a legal entity separate from, and distinct from, its members, has the consequence that even if one shareholder controls a company through his shareholding, the court may still apply that principle so that he is treated as an employee for certain purposes, so long as the facts of the case can establish an employer-employee relationship: see Lee's v Lee's Air Farming Ltd (widow of the controlling shareholder and governing director of a company qualified for payments under worker's compensation legislation); Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Bottrill [2000] 1 All ER 915, [1999] ICR 592, CA (facts of the case allowed the managing director and sole shareholder of a company to claim redundancy payments, 121. Piercing the corporate veil.

A company is a legal entity that is separate from, and distinct from, the individual members of the company¹. This is also the position within a group of companies where the fundamental principle is that each company in a group (a relatively modern concept) is a separate legal entity possessed of separate legal rights and liabilities². There may, however, be cases where the wording of a particular statute³ or contract justifies the treatment of parent and subsidiary as one company, at least for some purposes⁴; or where the court will 'pierce (or lift) the corporate veil', not because it considers it just to do so⁵ but because special circumstances exist indicating that it is a mere facade concealing the true facts⁶. In identifying what is a mere facade, the motive of those behind the company will be relevant⁷. The court will go behind the status of the company as a separate legal entity distinct from its shareholders, and will consider who are the persons, as shareholders or even as agents, directing and controlling the activities of the company⁸. The device of a corporate structure will often have been used to evade limitations imposed on conduct by law⁹ and rights of relief which third parties already possess¹⁰ against a defendant¹¹, so justifying the court's 'piercing' (or 'lifting') the veil.

Where, however, this is not the position, even though an individual's connection with a company may cause a transaction with that company to be subjected to strict scrutiny, the corporate veil will not be pierced¹². Nor is the court entitled to lift the veil as against a company which is a member of a corporate group merely because the corporate structure has been used so as to ensure that the legal liability (if any) in respect of particular future activities of the company will fall on another member of the group rather than the defendant company¹³.

It may be that liabilities or obligations will arise without piercing the corporate veil because there is an agency relationship between a parent company and a subsidiary¹⁴, or between a company and its shareholders¹⁵, but this may not be inferred merely from control of the company or ownership of its shares¹⁶ or from the level of paid up capital¹⁷. It will depend on an investigation of all aspects of the relationship between the parties and there is no presumption of such agency¹⁸.

For the purpose of taxation, there are numerous statutory provisions which in effect require the corporate veil to be pierced¹⁹; and the courts have shown a tendency for such purposes to look at the economic consequences of transactions rather than their strict format, thus in effect bypassing the question of corporate identity²⁰.

1 Having chosen to incorporate, the court will be reluctant to allow an individual to claim that he, rather than the company, should be treated as the party to a transaction or dealing, as the case may be: see JP Morgan Chase Bank v Pollux Holding Ltd, Diamantides v JP Morgan Chase Bank [2005] EWCA Civ 1612, [2005] All ER (D) 323 (Dec) (affirming Diamantides v JP Morgan Chase Bank [2005] EWHC 263 (Comm), [2005] All ER (D) 404 (Feb)) (any advisory duties owed by the bank were owed to company rather than to the claimant); cf Conway v Ratiu [2005] EWCA Civ 1302 at [78], [2006] 1 All ER 571n at [78], [2006] 1 EGLR 125 at [78] per Auld LJ (where it was accepted that, in some circumstances where a third party owes a fiduciary duty to the company, that fiduciary duty may extend to persons in or behind the company).

If a company is so under the unfettered control of one particular individual as to be in effect his alter ego, it may be concluded that documents belonging to the company are within the 'power' of the individual for the purpose of discovery: Dallas v Dallas (1960) 24 DLR (2d) 746, BC CA. For certain purposes, statute may address the relationship between individual companies in a group: see eg the Companies Act 2006 s 192 (transactions with directors requiring members' approval) (see PARAS 564-565), s 399 (duty to prepare group accounts) (see PARA 775), s 679 (public company giving financial assistance for acquisition of shares in a private holding company) (see PARA 1225) and ss 1159-1162 (meaning of 'subsidiary', 'undertaking' and related expressions) (see PARAS 25-26).

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(ii) Formation/C. INCORPORATION AND ITS EFFECTS/122. Nationality, domicile and residence.

122. Nationality, domicile and residence.

When incorporated, the company is a legal entity or persona distinct from its members¹, and its property is not the property of the members². The nationality³ and domicile⁴ of a company are determined by its place of registration. A company incorporated in the United Kingdom⁵ will normally have both British nationality and English or Scottish domicile, depending upon its place of registration, and it will be unable to change that domicile⁶. A company incorporated in the United Kingdom will nevertheless be regarded as having an enemy character if the persons in de facto control of its affairs are resident in an enemy country, or, wherever resident, are adhering to the enemy or taking instructions from or acting under the control of enemies⁷.

The residence of a company is of great importance in revenue law⁸, and at common law the test of company residence is where its real business is carried on, that is to say where its central control and management is located⁹. A company which is incorporated in the United Kingdom is, however, regarded for the purposes of the Taxes Acts as resident there and, accordingly, if a different place of residence is given by any rule of law, that place is no longer to be taken into account for those purposes¹⁰. A company incorporated outside the United Kingdom is resident in the United Kingdom if its central management and control is in the United Kingdom¹¹. It follows that, if such central control is divided, the company, provided that it is not incorporated in the United Kingdom, may have more than one residence¹².

The centre of a company's main interest is of increasing significance in the context of insolvency, especially where the EC Council Regulation on insolvency proceedings¹³ applies; that EC Council Regulation sets up, in the case of companies and legal persons, a rebuttable presumption that the centre of a debtor's main interests is the place of the registered office¹⁴.

Issues as to title to shares¹⁵ in a company are to be decided by the law of the place where the shares are situated, the lex situs, which in the ordinary way will be the law of the place where the company is incorporated¹⁶. The head office of a company is not necessarily the registered office of the company, but is the place where the substantial business of the company is carried on and its negotiations conducted¹⁷. Like an individual or a firm, a company may, for the purposes of civil procedure rules, carry on business in more places than one¹⁸.

In seeking to determine where 'central management and control' of a company incorporated outside the United Kingdom lay, it is essential to recognise the distinction between cases where management and control of the company were exercised through its own constitutional organs (the board of directors or the general meeting) and cases where the functions of those constitutional organs were 'usurped', in the sense that management and control were exercised independently of, or without regard to, those constitutional organs; and, in cases which fell within the former class, it is essential to recognise the distinction (in concept, at least) between the role of an 'outsider' in proposing, advising and influencing the decisions which the constitutional organs took in fulfilling their functions and the role of an outsider who dictated the decisions which were to be taken: Wood v Holden (Inspector of Taxes) [2006] EWCA Civ 26, [2006] 1 WLR 1393, [2006] 2 BCLC 210. - 157 (1) for a body corporate resident in the United Kingdom to cause or permit a body corporate not resident in the United Kingdom over which it has control to create or issue any shares or debentures³;

- 158 (2) except for the purpose of enabling a person to be qualified to act as a director, for a body corporate so resident to transfer to any person, or cause or permit to be transferred to any person, any shares or debentures of a body corporate not so resident over which it has control, being shares or debentures which it owns or in which it has an interest⁴.

124. Company trading in more than one state.

The domicile of a trading company is not changed by its doing business in another country; but, if it carries on business¹ in several states, it resides, for the purposes of legal proceedings, in as many places as it carries on business².

A company may have localised its obligation to a creditor by the course of its business³, or by the terms of the contract as to where the debt should be recoverable⁴.

125. Powers of the company.

As from the date of a company's incorporation by registration under the Companies Acts, it becomes a statutory corporation¹, and therefore does not have, as a corporation at common law has, prima facie the power to deal with its property and to bind itself by contract as freely as an ordinary individual². The statute must not be taken to have created a corporation at common law and then scrutinised to see how far any of the incidents of a corporation at common law have been thereby excluded. The statute or the constitution of the company is, as it were, its charter, and defines its powers³. The company has no powers other than those which are expressly conferred upon it by the statute or by its constitution or are incidental to the objects therein defined or enumerated⁴; but this restriction is of less significance now in view of the statutory protection given to third parties dealing with a company against limitations arising under the company's constitution⁵.

A company, if it is registered as a public company⁶, cannot exercise all its functions immediately upon incorporation, inasmuch as it has to comply with certain statutory requirements before it can commence business or exercise its borrowing powers⁷.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(ii) Formation/C. INCORPORATION AND ITS EFFECTS/126. Companies subject to constructive notice rule.

126. Companies subject to constructive notice rule.

A company is subject to the rule that, where the conduct of a party charged with notice shows that he had suspicions of a state of facts the knowledge of which would affect his legal rights, but that he deliberately refrained from making inquiries, he will be treated as having had notice¹, though he is not entitled to claim for his own advantage to be treated as having knowledge of the facts which inquiry would have disclosed².

127. Notice to officers.

In order that notice to a company may be effectual it should either be given to the company through its proper officers¹ or received by it in the course of its business². Notice to a director or other officer of the company in that character is sufficient³, but not a notice received by him in the course of a transaction in which he is not concerned as such director or officer⁴ or as a director of another company⁵, or if it relates to a matter which he is not bound to⁶, and does not⁷, disclose, or in which he is acting fraudulently or, possibly⁸, in breach of duty falling short of fraud⁹. Oral notice to a sitting board will suffice¹⁰.

An oral notice given to a clerk of the company at its registered office, in office hours, and during the absence of the secretary¹¹, is good notice to the company itself¹², as is an oral notice given to a managing director or the secretary in the course of his duties as such¹³.

The notice which a company receives through its officers or other agents is not properly called constructive notice, but is actual notice¹⁴.

Notice or knowledge of facts possessed by an agent of a company does not of necessity preclude the recovery by the company of money paid under a mistake of fact, where the agent had no idea that the matter to which his knowledge was relevant was being acted upon¹⁵.

D. REGISTERED OFFICE

129. A company's registered office.

A company¹ must at all times have a registered office to which all communications and notices may be addressed². The intended address of the company's registered office must be stated in the application for registration delivered to the registrar of companies³ and, upon the company's incorporation⁴, the registered office becomes as stated in, or in connection with, that application⁵. The address of the registered office fixes the domicile of the company⁶.

A company may, however, change the address of its registered office by giving notice to the registrar⁷. The change takes effect upon the notice being registered by the registrar⁸; but, until the end of the period of 14 days beginning with the date on which it is registered, a person may validly serve any document on the company at the address previously registered⁹.

For the purpose of any duty of a company¹⁰:

- 169 (1) to keep available for inspection at its registered office any register, index or other document¹¹; or
- 170 (2) to mention the address of its registered office in any document¹², a company that has given notice to the registrar of a change in the address of its registered office may act on the change as from such date, not more than 14 days after the notice is given, as it may determine¹³. Where a company unavoidably ceases to perform at its registered office any such duty as is mentioned in head (1) above in circumstances in which it was not practicable to give prior notice to the registrar of a change in the address of its registered office¹⁴, but:

- 171 (a) resumes performance of that duty at other premises as soon as practicable¹⁵; and
- 172 (b) gives notice accordingly to the registrar of a change in the situation of its registered office within 14 days of doing so¹⁶, it is not to be treated as having failed to comply with that duty¹⁷.

The problems associated with transferring a company's registered office (or central administration or principal place of business) from one member state to another, whilst remaining incorporated in the first member state, are not resolved by the EC Treaty provisions governing the right of establishment¹⁸.

A company registered in England and Wales ought never to have a registered office in Scotland: Re Baby Moon (UK) Ltd (1985) 1 BCC 99, 298.

A company whose registered office is in Wales, and as to which it is stated in the register that its registered office is to be situated in England and Wales, may by special resolution require the register to be amended so that it states that the company's registered office is to be situated in Wales: Companies Act 2006 s 88(2). Similarly, a company whose registered office is in Wales, and as to which it is stated in the register that its registered office is to be situated in Wales, may by special resolution require the register to be amended so that it states that the company's registered office is to be situated in England and Wales: s 88(3). Where a company passes a resolution under s 88 it must give notice to the registrar, who must amend the register accordingly, and issue a new certificate of incorporation altered to meet the circumstances of the case: s 88(4). In the Companies Acts, a 'Welsh company' means a company as to which it is stated in the register that its registered office is to be situated in Wales: s 88(1). As to the meanings of 'England' and 'Wales' see PARA 1 note 5; and as to the meaning of 'special resolution' see PARA 614. As to the register generally see PARA 146. 130. Registers etc to be kept at registered office.

A company¹ has a duty to keep the following at its registered office² or at another specified place (except where registers are kept otherwise than in a legible form³):

- 173 (1) the register of members⁴ and the register of debenture⁵ holders⁶;
- 174 (2) the index of members' names⁷ (unless the register of members is in such a form as to constitute in itself an index) and the overseas branch register⁸ (or a duplicate of it), which must be kept at the place where the register of members is kept available for inspection⁹;
- 175 (3) the register of directors¹⁰ and the register of secretaries¹¹, the register of charges¹² of a limited company¹³ and a copy of every instrument creating a charge requiring registration¹⁴ must be kept at the registered office, but in the case of a series of uniform debentures a copy of one debenture of the series is sufficient¹⁵;
- 176 (4) a record of all directors' service contracts (or, if the contract is not in writing, a written memorandum setting out its terms)¹⁶ and a copy of any qualifying indemnity provision made for a director (or, if the provision is not in writing, a written memorandum setting out its terms)¹⁷;
- 177 (5) the register of directors' interests in shares in the company or associated companies¹⁸;
- 178 (6) records comprising copies of all resolutions of members passed otherwise than at general meetings, minutes of all proceedings of general meetings, and details provided to the company regarding the decisions of a sole member¹⁹.

The duty of a company to keep its registers at the registered office ceases when the company is in liquidation and possession of the registers has been taken by the liquidator²⁰.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(iii) The Registrar of Companies/A. THE REGISTRAR/131. Appointment and functions of registrar of companies.

(iii) The Registrar of Companies

A. THE REGISTRAR

131. Appointment and functions of registrar of companies.

For the purposes of the registration of companies under the Companies Acts¹, there is a registrar of companies for England and Wales², who is appointed by the Secretary of State³.

The registrar must perform the functions conferred on the registrar by or under the Companies Acts or any other enactment⁴, and must perform such functions on behalf of the Secretary of State, in relation to the registration of companies or other matters, as the Secretary of State may from time to time direct⁵.

The registrar must have an official seal for the authentication of documents in connection with the performance of the registrar's functions⁶.

In so far as the registrar of companies does not already have power to do so, he may authorise an officer of his to exercise any function of his which is conferred by or under any enactment⁷. Anything done or omitted to be done by an officer so authorised in, or in connection with, the exercise or purported exercise of the function is to be treated for all purposes as done or omitted to be done by the registrar of companies in his capacity as such⁸, although this provision does not apply for the purposes of any criminal proceedings brought in respect of anything so done or omitted to be so done⁹.

Where, by virtue of an order made under the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994¹⁰, a person is authorised by the registrar of companies to accept delivery of any class of documents that are under any enactment to be delivered to the registrar¹¹, then:

- 179 (1) the registrar may direct that documents of that class are to be delivered to a specified address of the authorised person¹²; and
- 180 (2) any such direction must be printed and made available to the public (with or without payment)¹³.

Any document of that class which is delivered to an address other than the specified address is treated for these purposes as not having been delivered¹⁴.

1 As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

The scheme of the Companies Act 2006 Pt 35 (ss 1059A-1120) (see also PARA 135 et seq) is as follows (s 1059A(1) (s 1059A added by SI 2009/1802)):

- 59 (1) the following provisions apply generally (to the registrar, to any functions of the registrar, or to documents delivered to or issued by the registrar under any enactment, as the case may be): the Companies Act 2006 s 1060(1), (2) (see the text and notes 2, 3), ss 1061-1063 (see the text and notes 4-6; and PARA 135), ss 1068-1071 (see PARA 141), ss 1072-1076 (see PARAS 142-143), s 1080(1), (4), (5) (see PARA 146), s 1083 (see PARA 146), s 1092 (see PARA 149), ss 1108-1110 (see PARA 164), s 1111 (see PARA 141) and s 1114 (interpretation), s 1115 (see PARA 136), s 1116 (see PARA 138), s 1117 (see PARA 136), s 1118 (see PARA 135), s 1119 (see PARAS 131, 133) (s 1059A(2) (as so added));
- 60 (2) the following provisions apply in relation to companies (to companies or for the purposes of the Companies Acts, as the case may be): the Companies Act 2006 s 1060(3), (4) (see note 2), ss 1064, 1065 (see PARA 138), s 1066 (see PARA 139), ss 1077-1078 (see PARA 144), s 1079 (see PARA 145), s 1080(2), (3) (see PARA 146), s 1081 (see PARA 147), s 1082 (see PARA 148) and s 1084 (see PARA 146), ss 1085, 1086 (see PARA 149), s 1087 (see PARA 150), s 1088 (see PARA 151), ss 1089-1091 (see PARA 149), ss 1093, 1094 (see PARA 158), s 1095 (see PARA 159), ss 1096, 1097 (see PARA 161), s 1098 (see PARA 162), s 1106 (see PARA 164), s 1112 (see PARA 137) and s 1113 (see PARA 166) (s 1059A(3) (as so added));
- 61 (3) the following provisions apply as indicated in the provisions concerned: s 1067 (see PARA 140), ss 1099-1101 (see PARA 163), ss 1102, 1103 (see PARA 164), s 1104 (see PARA 165), s 1105 (see PARA 164) and s 1107 (see PARA 164) (s 1059A(4) (as so added)); and
- 62 (4) unless the context otherwise requires, the provisions of Pt 35 apply to an overseas company as they apply to a company as defined in s 1 (see PARA 24) (s 1059A(5) (as so added)).

As to the meaning of 'overseas company' see PARA 1824. As to incorporation by registration under the Companies Act 2006 see PARA 111 et seq. As to the application of provisions of the Companies Act 2006 to unregistered companies see the Unregistered Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2436; and PARA 1666. See also notes 2, 11. As to the meaning of 'unregistered company' see PARA 1665.

2 Companies Act 2006 s 1060(1)(a). As to Scotland and Northern Ireland see s 1060(1)(b), (c). In the Companies Acts, the 'registrar of companies' and the 'registrar' mean the registrar of companies for England and Wales, Scotland or Northern Ireland, as the case may require (s 1060(3)); and references in the Companies Acts to registration in a particular part of the United Kingdom are to registration by the registrar for that part of the United Kingdom (s 1060(4)). As to the meanings of 'England', 'Wales' and 'United Kingdom' see PARA 1 note 5. The local situation of the registered office (ie whether the company's registered office is to be situated in England and Wales (or in Wales), in Scotland or in Northern Ireland) must be stated in the company's application for registration: see PARA 111.

The provisions of the Companies Act 2006 ss 1060(1),(2), 1061, 1062 apply to unregistered companies by virtue of the Unregistered Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2436, reg 3, Sch 1 para 17: see PARA 1666.

3 Companies Act 2006 s 1060(2). As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6 et seq.

4 Companies Act 2006 s 1061(1)(a) (substituted by SI 2009/1802). As to the meaning of 'enactment' see PARA 17 note 2. References in the Companies Act 2006 to the functions of the registrar are to functions within s 1061(1)(a) or s 1061(1)(b): s 1061(3).

5 Companies Act 2006 s 1061(1)(b). See note 4.

6 Companies Act 2006 s 1062. As to the meaning of 'document' for these purposes see PARA 141 note 2. A document that is required to be authenticated by the registrar's seal must, if sent by electronic means, be authenticated in such manner as may be specified by registrar's rules: see PARA 138. As to the authentication of documents by the registrar generally see PARA 149.

4 Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 s 59(1)(a).

5 Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 s 59(1)(b). In exercise of the powers conferred by s 59(1), the Secretary of State has made the Community Interest Company Regulations 2005, SI 2005/1788, regs 34, 35 (reg 34 amended by SI 2007/1093; SI 2009/1942; the Community Interest Company Regulations 2005, SI 2005/1788, reg 35 amended by SI 2007/1093). By virtue of the Community Interest Company Regulations 2005, SI 2005/1788, reg 35 (as so amended), the registrar of companies must, on receiving any notice under the Insolvency Act 1986 s 109(1) (notice by liquidator of his appointment: see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 957) in relation to a community interest company, provide a copy of that notice to the Regulator: Community Interest Company Regulations 2005, SI 2005/1788, reg 35(1) (as so amended). The registrar of companies must also, on receiving any copy of a winding-up order forwarded under the Insolvency Act 1986 s 130(1) (consequences of a winding-up order: see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 486) in relation to a community interest company, provide the Regulator with a copy of that winding-up order: Community Interest Company Regulations 2005, SI 2005/1788, reg 35(2) (as so amended). As to reg 34 (notice published of documents received) see also PARA 144.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(iii) The Registrar of Companies/A. THE REGISTRAR/133. Functions of the registrar of companies subject to contracting out.

133. Functions of the registrar of companies subject to contracting out.

Any function of the registrar of companies¹ which is conferred by or under any enactment and which, by virtue of any enactment or rule of law, may be exercised by an officer of his and which is not otherwise excluded² may be exercised, if the Secretary of State by order so provides³, by, or by employees of, such person (if any) as may be authorised in that behalf by the registrar⁴.

Such an order may provide that any function to which it applies may be exercised, and an authorisation given by virtue of such an order may, subject to the provisions of the order, authorise the exercise of such a function⁵:

- 181 (1) either wholly or to such extent as may be specified in the order or authorisation⁶;
- 182 (2) either generally or in such cases or areas as may be so specified⁷; and
- 183 (3) either unconditionally or subject to the fulfilment of such conditions as may be so specified⁸.

An authorisation given by virtue of such an order:

- 184 (a) must be for such period, not exceeding ten years, as is specified in the authorisation⁹;
- 185 (b) may be revoked at any time by the registrar¹⁰; and
- 186 (c) must not prevent the registrar or any other person from exercising the function to which the authorisation relates¹¹.

Where by virtue of such an order a person is authorised to exercise any function of the registrar¹², anything done or omitted to be done by or in relation to the authorised person (or an employee of his) in, or in connection with, the exercise or purported exercise of the function is to be treated for all purposes as done or omitted to be done¹³ by or in relation to the registrar in his capacity as such¹⁴. However, this provision does not apply¹⁵:

- 187 (i) for the purposes of so much of any contract made between an authorised person and the registrar as relates to the exercise of the function¹⁶; or
- 188 (ii) for the purposes of any criminal proceedings brought in respect of anything done or omitted to be done by the authorised person (or any employee of his)¹⁷.

Where by virtue of such an order a person is authorised to exercise any function of the registrar¹⁸ and the order or authorisation is revoked at a time when a relevant contract¹⁹ is subsisting²⁰, the authorised person is entitled to treat the relevant contract as repudiated by the registrar (and not as frustrated by reason of the revocation)²¹.

1 As to the registrar of companies, and his functions generally, see PARA 131.

2 Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994 ss 69(1), 79(1). This provision currently applies only to the registrar of companies for England and Wales and to the registrar of companies for Scotland: see s 79(1) (para (c) of definition of 'office-holder').

The text refers to any function which is not otherwise excluded from s 69 by s 71: see s 69(1). A function is excluded by s 69 if:

- 63 (1) its exercise would constitute the exercise of jurisdiction of any court or of any tribunal which exercises the judicial power of the state (s 71(1)(a)); or
- 64 (2) its exercise, or a failure to exercise it, would necessarily interfere with or otherwise affect the liberty of any individual (s 71(1)(b)); or
- 65 (3) it is a power or right of entry, search or seizure into or of any property (s 71(1)(c)); or
- 66 (4) it is a power or duty to make subordinate legislation (s 71(1)(d)).

The provisions of s 71(1)(b), (c) (see heads (2), (3) above) do not exclude any function of the official receiver attached to any court (s 71(2)); and registrar's rules made under the Companies Act 2006 (see s 1117; and PARA 136) are not subordinate legislation for the purposes of the Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994 s 71 (see head (4) above) (Companies Act 2006 s 1119(3)). See also PARA 131 note 11. As to the official receiver see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 503 et seq. As to the power to contract out functions of the official receiver see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARAS 505-506.

3 The Secretary of State may not make such an order in relation to the registrar of companies without first consulting the registrar: Deregulation and Contracting Out Act 1994 ss 69(3), 79(1). As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6 et seq. As to the order that has been made see the Contracting Out (Functions in relation to the Registration of Companies) Order 1995, SI 1995/1013, art 3, Sch 1; and PARA 134.

134. Contracted out functions of the registrar of companies.

Any function of the registrar of companies for England and Wales¹ which is listed in heads (1) to (7) below may be exercised by, or by employees of, such person (if any) as may be authorised in that behalf by the registrar², namely:

- 189 (1) any function of receiving any return, account or other document required to be filed with, delivered or sent to the registrar³, or receiving notice of any matter required to be given to him, which is conferred by or under any enactment⁴;
 - 190 (2) any functions in relation to: (a) the incorporation of companies⁵ and the change of name of companies⁶; (b) the re-registration and change of status of companies⁷, the registration of an order and statement of reduction of share capital⁸, and the re-registration of public companies⁹ on reduction of capital¹⁰;
 - 191 (3) functions conferred by or under the following provisions of the Companies Act 2006:
- 22. (a) those relating to companies' registered numbers¹¹ and the registration of branches of overseas companies¹², except in so far as they relate respectively to the determination of the form of companies' registered numbers and branches' registered numbers¹³;
 - 23. (b) those relating to the delivery to the registrar of documents in legible form¹⁴, except in so far as they relate to specification of requirements for the purpose of enabling the copying of documents delivered to the registrar¹⁵;
 - 24. (c) those relating to the delivery to the registrar of documents other than in legible form¹⁶, except in so far as they relate to the approval of the non-legible form in which information may be conveyed to the registrar¹⁷;
 - 25. (d) those relating to inspection etc of records kept by the registrar¹⁸, except in so far as they relate to the determination of the means of facilitating the exercise of the right of persons to inspect records kept by the registrar, or the form in which copies of the information contained in those records may be made available¹⁹;
 - 26. (e) those relating to certificates of incorporation²⁰;
 - 27. (f) those relating to the provision and authentication by the registrar of documents in non-legible form²¹, except in so far as they relate to the approval of the means of communication to the registrar of information in non-legible form²²;
- 14
- 192 (4) functions conferred by or under the Newspaper Libel and Registration Act 1881²³ relating to the registrar's duty to enter returns on the register²⁴;
 - 193 (5) functions conferred by or under the Limited Partnerships Act 1907²⁵ relating to the inspection of documents registered²⁶;
 - 194 (6) functions conferred by or under the European Economic Interest Grouping Regulations 1989²⁷ relating to the inspection of documents²⁸;
 - 195 (7) functions conferred by or under any provision of the Companies Act 2006 listed in heads (2) and (3) above (to the extent specified in heads (2) and (3) above) where any such provision is applied²⁹ to European Economic Interest Groupings³⁰.

135. Fees payable to registrar.

The Secretary of State¹ may make provision by regulations² requiring the payment to the registrar of companies³ of fees in respect of:

- 196 (1) the performance of any of the registrar's functions⁴; or
- 197 (2) the provision by the registrar of services or facilities for purposes incidental to, or otherwise connected with, the performance of any of the registrar's functions⁵.

The matters for which fees may be charged include:

- 198 (a) the performance of a duty imposed on the registrar or the Secretary of State⁶;
- 199 (b) the receipt of documents delivered to the registrar⁷; and
- 200 (c) the inspection, or provision of copies, of documents kept by the registrar⁸.

The regulations may:

- 201 (i) provide for the amount of the fees to be fixed by or determined under the regulations⁹;
- 202 (ii) provide for different fees to be payable in respect of the same matter in different circumstances¹⁰;
- 203 (iii) specify the person by whom any fee payable under the regulations is to be paid¹¹;
- 204 (iv) specify when and how fees are to be paid¹².

In respect of the performance of functions or the provision of services or facilities:

- 205 (A) for which fees are not provided for by regulations¹³; or
- 206 (B) in circumstances other than those for which fees are provided for by regulations¹⁴, the registrar may determine from time to time what fees (if any) are chargeable¹⁵.

Fees received by the registrar are to be paid into the Consolidated Fund¹⁶.

1 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6 et seq.

2 As to the making of regulations under the Companies Act 2006 generally see ss 1288-1292. Regulations under s 1063 are subject to negative resolution procedure (ie the statutory instrument containing the regulations is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament): see ss 1063(4), 1289. The provisions of s 1063 apply to unregistered companies by virtue of the Unregistered Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2436, reg 3, Sch 1 para 17: see PARA 1666. As to the meaning of 'unregistered company' see PARA 1665.

In exercise of the powers conferred by the Companies Act 2006 s 1063(1)-(3), the Secretary of State has made the Registrar of Companies (Fees) (Companies, Overseas Companies and Limited Liability Partnerships) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2101. In these Regulations, any reference to a 'company' includes, where appropriate, a reference to a company to which the Companies Act 2006 s 1040 (see PARA 33) or s 1043 (see PARA 1665) applies: Registrar of Companies (Fees) (Companies, Overseas Companies and Limited Liability Partnerships) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2101, reg 2A (added by SI 2009/2439). See also PARTNERSHIP vol 79 (2008) PARAS 235, 237, 245. Any regulations made under the Companies Act 1985 s 708 (repealed) that were in force immediately before 1 October 2009 have effect on or after that date as if made under the Companies Act 2006 s 1063: see the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, art 5, Sch 2 para 94. Accordingly, the following regulations have effect as if made under the Companies Act 2006 s 1063: the Open-Ended Investment Companies (Investment Companies with Variable Capital) (Fees) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/3087 (amended by SI 2000/3324).

136. Registrar's rules.

Where any provision of Part 35 of the Companies Act 2006¹ enables the registrar of companies² to make provision, or impose requirements, as to any matter, the registrar may make such provision or impose such requirements by means of rules ('registrar's rules')³. This is without prejudice to the making of such provision or the imposing of such requirements by other means⁴.

Registrar's rules may require a company (or other body) to give any necessary consents to the use of electronic means for communications by the registrar to the company (or other body) as a condition of making use of any facility to deliver material to the registrar by electronic means⁵; and a document⁶ that is required to be signed by the registrar or authenticated by the registrar's seal⁷ must, if sent by electronic means, be authenticated in such manner as may be specified by registrar's rules⁸.

The registrar must both publicise the rules in a manner appropriate to bring them to the notice of persons affected by them⁹, and make copies of the rules available to the public (in hard copy or electronic form)¹⁰.

Public notice of issue of certificates of incorporation.

B. PUBLIC NOTICE OF ISSUE OF CERTIFICATES OF INCORPORATION

138. Public notice of issue of certificates of incorporation.

The registrar of companies¹ must cause to be published in the Gazette², or in accordance with the provisions governing alternative means of giving public notice³, notice of the issue by the registrar of any certificate of incorporation of a company⁴. The notice must state the name⁵ and registered number⁶ of the company and the date of issue of the certificate⁷.

Notices that would otherwise need to be published by the registrar in the Gazette may instead be published by such means as may from time to time be approved by the registrar in accordance with regulations made by the Secretary of State⁸. The Secretary of State may make provision by regulations as to what alternative means may be approved⁹. The regulations may, in particular: (1) require the use of electronic means¹⁰; (2) require the same means to be used for all notices or for all notices of specified descriptions, and whether the company (or other body) to which the notice relates is registered in England and Wales, Scotland or Northern Ireland¹¹; and (3) impose conditions as to the manner in which access to the notices is to be made available¹². Before starting to publish notices by means approved in this way¹³ the registrar must publish at least one notice to that effect in the Gazette¹⁴. However, nothing¹⁵ prevents the registrar from giving public notice both in the Gazette and by any alternative means that have been so approved¹⁶.

Any person may require the registrar to provide him with a copy of any certificate of incorporation of a company, either signed by the registrar or authenticated by the registrar's seal¹⁷.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(iii) The Registrar of Companies/C. REGISTERED NUMBERS/139. Companies' registered numbers.

C. REGISTERED NUMBERS

139. Companies' registered numbers.

The registrar of companies¹ must allocate to every company² a number, which is to be known as the company's registered number³. Companies' registered numbers must be in such form, consisting of one or more sequences of figures or letters, as the registrar may from time to time determine⁴; and, upon adopting a new form of registered number, the registrar may make such changes of existing registered numbers as appear necessary⁵.

A change of a company's registered number has effect from the date on which the company is notified by the registrar of the change⁶. However, for a period of three years beginning with the date on which such notification is sent by the registrar, any requirement to disclose the company's registered number that is imposed by regulations⁷ is satisfied by the use of either the old number or the new⁸.

1 As to the meaning of 'registrar of companies' see PARA 131 note 2. Any function of the registrar of companies for England and Wales conferred by or under the Companies Act 2006 s 1066 (formerly the Companies Act 1985 s 705) may be exercised by, or by employees of, such person (if any) as may be authorised in that behalf by the registrar of companies for England and Wales, except in so far as it relates to the determination of the form of companies' registered numbers: see the Contracting Out (Functions in relation to the Registration of Companies) Order 1995, SI 1995/1013, art 3, Sch 1 para 3(a); and the Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b); and PARAS 133-134. As to the application of Pt 35 (ss 1059A-1120) (see also PARAS 131, 135 et seq, 140 et seq) see PARA 131 note 1.

2 For these purposes, 'company' includes an overseas company whose particulars have been registered under the Companies Act 2006 s 1046 (see PARA 1826), other than a company that appears to the registrar not to be required to register particulars under that provision: s 1066(6). As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts generally see PARA 24; and see PARA 131 note 1. As to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16. As to the meaning of 'overseas company' see PARA 1824. As to the registered numbers of UK establishments of an overseas company see PARA 140.

The provisions of the Companies Act 2006 s 1066 apply to unregistered companies by virtue of the Unregistered Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2436, reg 3, Sch 1 para 18, but with the modifications as specified thereby: see PARA 1666. As to the meaning of 'unregistered company' see PARA 1665.

140. Registered numbers of UK establishments of overseas company.

The registrar of companies¹ must allocate to every UK establishment of an overseas company² whose particulars are registered³ a number, which is to be known as the UK establishment's registered number⁴.

The registered numbers of UK establishments of overseas companies must be in such form, consisting of one or more sequences of figures or letters, as the registrar may determine⁵; and, upon adopting a new form of registered number, the registrar may make such changes of existing registered numbers as appear necessary⁶.

A change of the registered number of a UK establishment has effect from the date on which the company is notified by the registrar of the change⁷. However, for a period of three years beginning with the date on which such notification is sent by the registrar, any requirement to disclose the UK establishment's registered number that is imposed by regulations⁸ is satisfied by the use of either the old number or the new⁹.

1 As to the meaning of 'registrar of companies' see PARA 131 note 2. As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and see PARA 131 note 1. As to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16. Any function of the registrar of companies for England and Wales conferred by or under the Companies Act 2006 s 1067 (formerly the Companies Act 1985 s 705A) may be exercised by, or by employees of, such person (if any) as may be authorised in that behalf by the registrar of companies for England and Wales, except in so far as it relates to the determination of the form of companies' registered numbers: see the Contracting Out (Functions in relation to the Registration of Companies) Order 1995, SI 1995/1013, art 3, Sch 1 para 3(a); and the Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b); and PARAS 133-134. As to the application of the Companies Act 2006 Pt 35 (ss 1059A-1120) (see also PARAS 131, 135 et seq, 141 et seq) see PARA 131 note 1.

2 In the Companies Act 2006 Pt 35 (see also PARAS 131, 135 et seq, 141 et seq), 'establishment', in relation to an overseas company, means a branch within the meaning of the Eleventh Company Law Directive (ie EC Council Directive 89/666 (OJ L395, 30.12.89, p 36) of 21 December 1989, concerning disclosure requirements in respect of branches opened in a member state by certain types of company governed by the law of another state), or a place of business that is not such a branch; and 'UK establishment' means an establishment in the United Kingdom: Companies Act 2006 s 1067(6) (added by SI 2009/1802). As to the meaning of 'overseas company' see PARA 1824. As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 1 note 5. As to the Eleventh Company Law Directive see PARA 23.

3 It is registered under the Companies Act 2006 s 1046 (see PARA 1826): see s 1067(1) (as amended: see note 4).

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(iii) The Registrar of Companies/D. DELIVERY OF DOCUMENTS/141. Delivery of documents to the registrar.

D. DELIVERY OF DOCUMENTS

141. Delivery of documents to the registrar.

The registrar of companies¹ may impose requirements as to the form, authentication and manner of delivery of documents² required or authorised to be delivered to the registrar under any enactment³.

As regards the form of the document, the registrar may require the contents of the document to be in a standard form⁴, and he may impose requirements for the purpose of enabling the document to be scanned or copied⁵.

As regards authentication, the registrar may:

- 209 (1) require the document to be authenticated by a particular person or a person of a particular description⁶;
- 210 (2) specify the means of authentication⁷;
- 211 (3) require the document to contain or be accompanied by the name⁸ or registered number⁹ (or both) of the company (or other body) to which it relates¹⁰.

As regards the manner of delivery, the registrar may specify requirements as to:

- 212 (a) the physical form of the document (for example, hard copy or electronic form)¹¹;
- 213 (b) the means to be used for delivering the document (for example, by post or electronic means)¹²;
- 214 (c) the address to which the document is to be sent¹³;
- 215 (d) in the case of a document to be delivered by electronic means, the hardware and software to be used, and technical specifications (for example, matters relating to protocol, security, anti-virus protection or encryption)¹⁴.

The registrar must secure that¹⁵ all documents subject to the Directive disclosure requirements¹⁶ may be delivered to the registrar by electronic means¹⁷.

However, the requirements imposed in this way in relation to form, authentication and manner of delivery¹⁸ must not be inconsistent with requirements imposed by any enactment with respect to the form, authentication or manner of delivery of the document concerned¹⁹.

Where a document required or authorised to be delivered to the registrar under any enactment is required²⁰: (i) to be certified as an accurate translation or transliteration²¹; or (ii) to be certified as a correct copy or verified²², the registrar may impose requirements as to the person, or description of person, by whom the certificate or verification is to be given²³. The power conferred in relation to the registrar's requirements as to form, authentication and manner of delivery²⁴ is exercisable in relation to the certificate or verification as if it were a separate document²⁵. However, the requirements imposed in relation to certification or verification²⁶ must not be inconsistent with requirements imposed by any enactment with respect to the certification or verification of the document concerned²⁷.

A document is not delivered to the registrar until it is received by the registrar²⁸; and provision may be made by registrar's rules as to when a document is to be regarded as received²⁹.

1 As to the meaning of 'registrar of companies' see PARA 131 note 2. As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and see PARA 131 note 1. As to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

2 For the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 Pt 35 (ss 1059A-1120) (registrar of companies) (see PARAS 131, 135 et seq, 142 et seq), 'document' means information recorded in any form (s 1114(1)(a)); and references to delivering a document include forwarding, lodging, registering, sending, producing or submitting it or (in the case of a notice) giving it (s 1114(1)(b)). Except as otherwise provided, Pt 35 applies in relation to the supply to the registrar of information otherwise than in documentary form as it applies in relation to the delivery of a document: s 1114(2). As to the application of Pt 35 see PARA 131 note 1.

3 Companies Act 2006 s 1068(1). As to the meaning of 'enactment' see PARA 17 note 2.

The provisions of the Companies Act 2006 ss 1068-1071, 1111, 1114 apply to unregistered companies by virtue of the Unregistered Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2436, reg 3, Sch 1 para 17: see PARA 1666. As to the meaning of 'unregistered company' see PARA 1665.

9 As to a company's registered number see PARAS 139, 140.

10 Companies Act 2006 s 1068(3)(c) (substituted by SI 2009/1802).

11 Companies Act 2006 s 1068(4)(a). As to documents or information sent or supplied in hard copy form see PARA 678; and as to documents or information sent or supplied in electronic form see PARA 679.

The power conferred by s 1068 does not authorise the registrar to require documents to be delivered by electronic means: s 1068(6). However, the Secretary of State may make regulations requiring documents that are authorised or required to be delivered to the registrar to be delivered by electronic means: s 1069(1). Such regulations are subject to affirmative resolution procedure (ie the regulations must not be made unless a draft of the statutory instrument containing them has been laid before Parliament and approved by a resolution of each House of Parliament): see ss 1069(3), 1290. Any such requirement to deliver documents by electronic means is effective only if registrar's rules have been published with respect to the detailed requirements for such delivery: s 1069(2). As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6 et seq; and as to the making of regulations under the Companies Act 2006 generally see ss 1288-1292. At the date at which this volume states the law, no such regulations have been made in exercise of the power conferred by s 1069. As to the meaning of 'registrar's rules' see PARA 136. As to the meaning of references to documents or information sent or supplied by electronic means see PARA 679 note 3. Registrar's rules may require a company to give any necessary consents to the use of electronic means for communications by the registrar to the company as a condition of making use of any facility to deliver material to the registrar by electronic means: see s 1115; and PARA 136.

Notwithstanding the Secretary of State's power to make regulations under s 1069, the registrar may agree with a company (or other body) that documents relating to the company (or other body) that are required or authorised to be delivered to the registrar (s 1070(1) (amended by SI 2009/1802)):

67 (1) will be delivered by electronic means, except as provided for in the agreement (Companies Act 2006 s 1070(1)(a)); and 68 (2) will conform to such requirements as may be specified in the agreement or specified by the registrar in accordance with the agreement (s 1070(1)(b)).

An agreement under s 1070 may relate to all or any description of documents to be delivered to the registrar (s 1070(2)); and documents in relation to which an agreement is in force under s 1070 must be delivered in accordance with the agreement (s 1070(3)).

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(iii) The Registrar of Companies/D. DELIVERY OF DOCUMENTS/142. Requirements for proper delivery to the registrar.

142. Requirements for proper delivery to the registrar.

A document¹ delivered to the registrar of companies² is not properly delivered unless all the following requirements are met³, namely:

- 216 (1) the requirements of the provision under which the document is to be delivered to the registrar as regards both the contents of the document⁴, and its form, authentication and manner of delivery⁵;
- 217 (2) any applicable requirements under the provisions which govern the registrar's requirements as to form, authentication and manner of delivery⁶, the Secretary of State's⁷ power to require delivery by electronic means⁸, or agreements between the registrar and a company for delivery by electronic means⁹;
- 218 (3) any requirements of Part 35 of the Companies Act 2006¹⁰ as to the language in which the document is drawn up and delivered or as to its being accompanied on delivery by a certified translation into English¹¹;
- 219 (4) in so far as it consists of or includes names and addresses, any requirements of Part 35 of the Companies Act 2006 as to permitted characters, letters or symbols or as to its being accompanied on delivery by a certificate as to the transliteration of any element¹²;
- 220 (5) any applicable requirements under the provisions that govern the registrar's requirements as to certification or verification¹³;
- 221 (6) any requirement of regulations under the provisions that govern the use of unique identifiers¹⁴;
- 222 (7) any requirements as regards payment of a fee in respect of its receipt by the registrar¹⁵.

A document that is not properly delivered is treated for the purposes of the provision requiring or authorising it to be delivered as not having been delivered, subject to the registrar's power to accept documents not meeting requirements for proper delivery¹⁶.

In the case of a document that by virtue of s 1072(2) is treated as not having been delivered, the registrar is not required to annotate the register: see s 1081(3); and PARA 147.

Companies/D. DELIVERY OF DOCUMENTS/143. Documents not meeting requirements for proper delivery to the registrar.

143. Documents not meeting requirements for proper delivery to the registrar.

The registrar of companies¹ may accept (and register) a document² that does not comply with the requirements for proper delivery³. A document accepted by the registrar in this way⁴ is treated as received by the registrar for the purpose of the provisions that require him to give public notice of the receipt of certain documents⁵.

No objection may be taken to the legal consequences of a document's being accepted (or registered) by the registrar in this way⁶ on the ground that the requirements for proper delivery were not met⁷. The acceptance of a document by the registrar in this way⁸ does not affect⁹:

- 223 (1) the continuing obligation to comply with the requirements for proper delivery¹⁰; or
- 224 (2) any liability for failure to comply with those requirements¹¹.

Head (2) above is subject to the proviso that, for the purposes of the provisions that impose a civil penalty for a failure to file accounts and reports¹², and for the purposes of any enactment¹³ imposing a daily default fine¹⁴ for failure to deliver the document¹⁵, the period after the document is accepted does not count as a period during which there is default in complying with the requirements for proper delivery¹⁶. However, if, subsequently, the registrar issues a notice of administrative removal from the register¹⁷ in respect of the document¹⁸, and the requirements for proper delivery are not complied with before the end of the period of 14 days after the issue of that notice¹⁹, any subsequent period of default does count for the purposes of those provisions²⁰.

Where a document delivered to the registrar contains unnecessary material²¹, and if the unnecessary material cannot readily be separated from the rest of the document, the document is treated as not meeting the requirements for proper delivery²². However, if the unnecessary material can readily be separated from the rest of the document, the registrar may register the document either with the omission of the unnecessary material, or as delivered²³.

The registrar may accept a replacement for a document previously delivered²⁴ that either did not comply with the requirements for proper delivery²⁵, or contained unnecessary material²⁶. However, a replacement document must not be accepted unless the registrar is satisfied that it is delivered by either the person by whom the original document was delivered²⁷, or the company (or other body) to which the original document relates²⁸, and that it complies with the requirements for proper delivery²⁹. The power of the registrar to impose requirements as to the form and manner of delivery³⁰ includes power to impose requirements as to the identification of the original document and the delivery of the replacement in a form and manner enabling it to be associated with the original³¹.

A document delivered to the registrar³² may be corrected by the registrar if it appears to the registrar to be incomplete or internally inconsistent³³. However, this power is exercisable only on instructions³⁴, and only if the company (or other body to which the document relates) has given (and has not withdrawn) its consent to such instructions being given³⁵. A document that is corrected in this way³⁶ is treated, for the purposes of any enactment relating to its delivery, as having been delivered when the correction is made³⁷.

For these purposes, 'unnecessary material' means material that is not necessary in order to comply with an obligation under any enactment, and is not specifically authorised to be delivered to the registrar: s 1074(2). For this purpose, an obligation to deliver a document of a particular description, or conforming to certain requirements, is regarded as not extending to anything that is not needed for a document of that description or, as the case may be, conforming to those requirements: s 1074(3).

22 Companies Act 2006 s 1074(4). As to other requirements for proper delivery to the registrar see PARA 142.

32 The Companies Act 2006 s 1075 applies in relation to documents delivered under Pt 25 (company charges) (see PARA 1277 et seq) by a person other than the company (or other body) as if the references to the company (or other body) were to the company (or other body) or the person by whom the document was delivered: s 1075(5) (amended by SI 2009/1802).

33 Companies Act 2006 s 1075(1). However, the power conferred by s 1075 is not exercisable if the document has been registered under s 1073 (power to accept documents not meeting requirements for proper delivery) (see the text and notes 1-20): s 1075(7).

34 Companies Act 2006 s 1075(2)(a). The following requirements must be met as regards the instructions:

69 (1) the instructions must be given in response to an inquiry by the registrar (s 1075(3)(a));

70 (2) the registrar must be satisfied that the person giving the instructions is authorised to do so either by the person by whom the document was delivered, or by the company (or other body) to which the document relates (s 1075(3)(b) (amended by SI 2009/1802));

71 (3) the instructions must meet any requirements of registrar's rules as to both the form and manner in which they are given, and authentication (Companies Act 2006 s 1075(3)(c)).

As to the meaning of 'registrar's rules' see PARA 136.

35 Companies Act 2006 s 1075(2)(b) (amended by SI 2009/1802). The consent of the company (or other body) to instructions being given under the Companies Act 2006 s 1075 (and any withdrawal of such consent) may be in hard copy or electronic form, and must be notified to the registrar: s 1075(4) (amended by SI 2009/1802). However, any document received by the registrar in connection with the giving or withdrawal of consent under the Companies Act 2006 s 1075 must not be made available by the registrar for public inspection: see s 1087(1); and PARA 150. As to documents or information sent or supplied in hard copy form see PARA 678; and as to documents or information sent or supplied in electronic form see PARA 679.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(iii) The Registrar of Companies/D. DELIVERY OF DOCUMENTS/144. Public notice of receipt of documents subject to the Directive disclosure requirements.

144. Public notice of receipt of documents subject to the Directive disclosure requirements.

The registrar of companies¹ must cause to be published in the Gazette², or in accordance with the provisions governing alternative means of giving public notice³, notice of the receipt by him of any document⁴ that, on receipt, is subject to the Directive disclosure requirements⁵. The notice must state the name⁶ and registered number⁷ of the company, the description of the document and the date of receipt⁸.

The documents subject to the 'Directive disclosure requirements' are as follows⁹:

- 225 (1) in the case of every company¹⁰:
28. (a) the following constitutional documents¹¹, being: (i) the company's memorandum and articles¹²; (ii) any amendment of the company's articles (including every resolution or agreement required to be embodied in or annexed to copies of the company's articles issued by the company)¹³; (iii) after any amendment of the company's articles, the text of the articles as amended¹⁴; (iv) any notice of a change of the company's name¹⁵;
 29. (b) in relation to its directors¹⁶: (i) the statement of proposed officers required on formation of the company¹⁷; (ii) notification of any change among the company's directors¹⁸; (iii) notification of any change in the particulars of directors required to be delivered to the registrar¹⁹;
 30. (c) in relation to its accounts, reports and returns: (i) all documents required to be delivered to the registrar under the provisions that govern the duty to file accounts and reports²⁰; and (ii) the company's annual return²¹;
 31. (d) in relation to its registered office²², notification of any change of the company's registered office²³;
 32. (e) in relation to winding up²⁴: (i) a copy of any winding-up order in respect of the company²⁵; (ii) any notice of the appointment of liquidators²⁶; (iii) any order for the dissolution of a company on a winding up²⁷; (iv) any return by a liquidator of the final meeting of a company on a winding up²⁸;
- 226 (2) in the case of a public company²⁹:
- 17
33. (a) in relation to its share capital³⁰: (i) any statement of capital and initial shareholdings³¹; (ii) any return of allotments and the statement of capital accompanying it³²; (iii) a copy of any resolution³³ disapplying pre-emption rights³⁴; (iv) a copy of any report³⁵ as to the value of a non-cash asset³⁶; (v) any statement of capital accompanying notice given³⁷ of the redenomination of shares³⁸; (vi) any statement of capital accompanying notice given³⁹ of a reduction of capital in connection with the redenomination of shares⁴⁰; (vii) any notice delivered under the provisions governing the requirement to give notice of any new name of a class of shares⁴¹ or under the provisions governing the requirement to give notice of any variation of the rights attached to shares⁴²; (viii) any statement of capital accompanying a court order delivered under the provisions that allow for a reduction of capital to be confirmed⁴³; (ix) notification⁴⁴ of the redemption of shares and the statement of capital accompanying it⁴⁵; (x) any statement of capital accompanying a return delivered under the requirement to give notice of the cancellation of shares on the purchase by a company of its own shares⁴⁶ or under the requirement to give notice of any cancellation of shares held as treasury shares⁴⁷; (xi) any statement of compliance delivered⁴⁸ confirming that the company meets the conditions for issue of a trading certificate⁴⁹;
 34. (b) in relation to mergers and divisions⁵⁰: (i) a copy of any draft of the terms of a scheme required to be delivered to the registrar in relation either to a merger⁵¹ or a division⁵²; (ii) a copy of any order⁵³ in respect of a compromise or arrangement to which Part 27 of the Companies Act 2006⁵⁴ applies⁵⁵;
- 227 (3) in the case of an overseas company⁵⁶, such particulars, returns and other documents required to be delivered under Part 34 of the Companies Act 2006⁵⁷ as may be specified by the Secretary of State by regulations⁵⁸.

Where a private company⁵⁹ re-registers as a public company⁶⁰, the last statement of capital relating to the company received by the registrar under any provision of the Companies Acts becomes subject to the Directive disclosure requirements⁶¹, and the provisions that require the registrar to give public notice of the receipt of certain documents⁶² apply as if the statement had been received by the registrar when the re-registration takes effect⁶³.

1 As to the meaning of 'registrar of companies' see PARA 131 note 2. As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and see PARA 131 note 1. As to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16. As to the application of the Companies Act 2006 Pt 35 (ss 1059A-1120) (see also PARAS 131, 135 et seq, 145 et seq) see PARA 131 note 1.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(iii) The Registrar of Companies/D. DELIVERY OF DOCUMENTS/145. Effect of failure to give notification.

145. Effect of failure to give notification.

The purpose of the statutory provisions which require the registrar of companies¹ to give public notice of the receipt of certain documents² is not to ensure constructive notice of the relevant events to persons dealing with the company³, but rather to ensure that such persons have an opportunity, if they wish to avail themselves of it, to find out information about these events⁴. Further, a company is not entitled to rely against other persons on the happening of any of the following events⁵, namely:

- 228 (1) an amendment of the company's articles of association⁶; or
- 229 (2) a change among the company's directors⁷; or
- 230 (3) (as regards service of any document on the company⁸) a change of the company's registered office⁹,
- 231 (4) the making of a winding-up order in respect of the company¹⁰; or
- 232 (5) the appointment of a liquidator in a voluntary winding up of the company¹¹, unless the event has been officially notified¹² at the material time¹³, or unless the company shows that the person concerned knew of the event at the material time¹⁴. If the material time falls on or before the fifteenth day after the date of official notification¹⁵ (or, where the fifteenth day was not a working day¹⁶, on or before the next day that was)¹⁷ the company is not entitled to rely on the happening of the event as against a person who shows that he was unavoidably prevented from knowing of the event at that time¹⁸.

Keeping of company records (the 'register') by the registrar.

E. THE REGISTER

(A) RECORDS KEPT BY THE REGISTRAR

146. Keeping of company records (the 'register') by the registrar.

The registrar of companies¹ must keep records of:

- 233 (1) the information contained in documents² delivered to the registrar³ under any enactment⁴; and
- 234 (2) certificates issued by the registrar under any enactment⁵.

The records relating to companies are referred to collectively in the Companies Acts as the 'register'⁶, and the records kept by the registrar must be such that information relating to a company or other registered body is associated with that body, in such manner as the registrar may determine, so as to enable all the information relating to the body to be retrieved⁷.

Information deriving from documents subject to the Directive disclosure requirements⁸ that are delivered to the registrar⁹ must be kept by the registrar in electronic form¹⁰. Subject to that, information contained in documents delivered to the registrar may be recorded and kept by him in any form he thinks fit, provided that it is possible to inspect the information and to produce a copy of it¹¹. This is sufficient compliance with any duty of his to keep, file or register the document or to record the information contained in it¹².

The originals of documents delivered to the registrar in hard copy form¹³ must be kept for three years after they are received by the registrar, after which they may be destroyed provided the information contained in them has been recorded¹⁴. However, this is subject to the proviso that material which is not made available by the registrar for public inspection¹⁵ need not be retained by him for longer than appears to him reasonably necessary for the purposes for which the material was delivered to the registrar¹⁶.

Where a company is dissolved¹⁷, or where an overseas company¹⁸ ceases to have any connection with the United Kingdom¹⁹ by virtue of which it is required to register particulars²⁰, or where a credit²¹ or financial institution²² ceases to be required²³ to file accounts with the registrar²⁴, and, at any time after two years from the date on which it appears to the registrar that such an event has occurred²⁵, the registrar may direct that any records relating to the company or institution may be removed to the Public Record Office²⁶; and records in respect of which such a direction is given must be disposed of under the enactments relating to the Public Record Office and the rules made under them²⁷.

UPDATE

146 Keeping of company records (the 'register') by the registrar

NOTES 21, 22--Definitions of 'credit institution' and 'financial institution' in Directive 2006/48 art 4(1), (5) amended, Annex I point 15 (issuing electronic money) added: European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2009/110 (OJ L267, 10.10.2009, p 7).

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(iii) The Registrar of Companies/E. THE REGISTER/(A) Records kept by the Registrar/147. Annotation of the register.

147. Annotation of the register.

The registrar of companies¹ must place a note in the register² recording:

- 235 (1) the date on which a document³ is delivered to the registrar⁴;
- 236 (2) if a document is corrected informally by the registrar⁵, the nature and date of the correction⁶;
- 237 (3) if a document is replaced (whether or not material derived from it is removed)⁷, the fact that it has been replaced and the date of delivery of the replacement⁸;
- 238 (4) if material is removed⁹, what was removed (giving a general description of its contents)¹⁰, under what power¹¹, and the date on which that was done¹².

The Secretary of State¹³ may make provision by regulations¹⁴ authorising or requiring the registrar to annotate the register in such other circumstances as may be specified in the regulations¹⁵, and as to the contents of any such annotation¹⁶.

Notes placed in the register in this way¹⁷ are part of the register for all purposes of the Companies Acts¹⁸.

A note may be removed if it no longer serves any useful purpose¹⁹. In any case, any duty or power of the registrar with respect to annotation of the register is subject to the court's power²⁰ to direct: (a) that a note be removed from the register²¹; or (b) that no note is to be made of the removal of material that is the subject of the court's order²².

1 As to the meaning of 'registrar of companies' see PARA 131 note 2. As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and see PARA 131 note 1. As to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16. As to the application of the Companies Act 2006 Pt 35 (ss 1059A-1120) (see also PARAS 131, 135 et seq, 148 et seq) see PARA 131 note 1.

2 As to the meaning of the 'register' see PARA 146.

3 As to the meaning of 'document' for these purposes see PARA 141 note 2.

4 Companies Act 2006 s 1081(1)(a). No annotation is required in the case of a document that by virtue of s 1072(2) (documents not meeting requirements for proper delivery) (see PARA 142) is treated as not having been delivered: s 1081(3). As to the meaning of references to delivering a document for these purposes see PARA 141 note 2. As to the delivery of documents to the registrar see PARA 141; and as to the requirements generally for the proper delivery of documents to the registrar see PARA 142.

5 Ie under the Companies Act 2006 s 1075 (see PARA 143): see s 1081(1)(b). A document delivered to the registrar may be corrected by the registrar, subject to certain conditions, if it appears to the registrar to be incomplete or internally inconsistent: see s 1075; and PARA 143.

6 Companies Act 2006 s 1081(1)(b).

7 The registrar may accept a replacement for a document previously delivered that either did not comply with the requirements for proper delivery, or contained unnecessary material: see the Companies Act 2006 s 1076; and PARA 143. As to the meaning of 'unnecessary material' for these purposes see PARA 143 note 21.

8 Companies Act 2006 s 1081(1)(c).

9 Companies Act 2006 s 1081(1)(d). Regulations made under s 1188 or s 1189 (statements relating to company directors who are subject to foreign restrictions) (see PARA 1621) may provide that s 1081 (note of removal of material from the register) does not apply, or applies with such modifications as may be specified, in the case of material removed from the register under the regulations: see s 1190(4); and PARA 1621.

13 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6.

14 As to the making of regulations under the Companies Act 2006 generally see ss 1288-1292. Regulations made under s 1081 are subject to negative resolution procedure (ie the statutory instrument containing the regulations is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament): see ss 1081(7), 1289. In exercise of the powers conferred by 1081(2), the Secretary of State has made the Registrar of Companies and Applications for Striking Off Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1803, reg 3. Accordingly, where it appears to the registrar that material on the register is misleading or confusing, the registrar may place a note in the register containing such information as appears to the registrar to be necessary to remedy, as far as possible, the misleading or confusing nature of the material: reg 3.

15 Companies Act 2006 s 1081(2)(a). See note 14.

17 Ie in accordance with the Companies Act 2006 s 1081(1) (see the text and notes 1-12), or in pursuance of regulations under s 1081(2) (see the text and notes 13-16): see s 1081(6).

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(iii) The Registrar of Companies/E. THE REGISTER/(A) Records kept by the Registrar/148. Allocation of unique identifiers.

148. Allocation of unique identifiers.

The Secretary of State¹ may make provision² for the use, in connection with the register³, of reference numbers ('unique identifiers') to identify each person who⁴:

- 239 (1) is a director of a company⁵;
- 240 (2) is secretary (or a joint secretary) of a company⁶; or
- 241 (3) in the case of an overseas company⁷ whose particulars are registered⁸, holds any such position as may be specified for these purposes by regulations made in relation to overseas companies generally⁹.

The regulations may:

- 242 (a) provide that a unique identifier may be in such form, consisting of one or more sequences of letters or numbers, as the registrar may from time to time determine¹⁰;
- 243 (b) make provision for the allocation of unique identifiers by the registrar¹¹;
- 244 (c) require there to be included, in any specified description of documents delivered to the registrar, as well as a statement of the person's name¹²: (i) a statement of the person's unique identifier¹³; or (ii) a statement that the person has not been allocated a unique identifier¹⁴;
- 245 (d) enable the registrar to take steps, where a person appears to have more than one unique identifier, to discontinue the use of all but one of them¹⁵.

1 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6.

2 The wording of the Companies Act 2006 s 1082 that follows on from 'provision' suggests that 'provision by regulations' is meant. Regulations made under s 1082 are subject to affirmative resolution procedure (ie the regulations must not be made unless a draft of the statutory instrument containing them has been laid before Parliament and approved by a resolution of each House of Parliament): see ss 1082(5), 1290. As to the making of regulations under the Companies Act 2006 generally see ss 1288-1292. The regulations may make different provision for different descriptions of person and different descriptions of document (s 1082(4)); and the regulations may contain provision for the application of the scheme in relation to persons appointed, and documents registered, before the commencement of the Companies Act 2006 (s 1082(3)). As to the meaning of 'document' for these purposes see PARA 141 note 2. As to the commencement of the Companies Act 2006 see PARA 17. At the date at which this volume states the law, no such regulations have been made in exercise of the power conferred by s 1082. As to the application of the Companies Act 2006 Pt 35 (ss 1059A-1120) (see also PARAS 131, 135 et seq, 149 et seq) see PARA 131 note 1.

However, at the date at which this volume states the law, the regulations that have been made thereunder, ie the Overseas Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1801, make no such provision.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(iii) The Registrar of Companies/E. THE REGISTER/(B) Inspection of Records kept by the Registrar/149. Inspection etc of records kept by the registrar.

(B) INSPECTION OF RECORDS KEPT BY THE REGISTRAR

149. Inspection etc of records kept by the registrar.

Subject to the statutory provisions which govern material that is not available for public inspection¹:

- 246 (1) any person may inspect the register²; and
- 247 (2) any person may require a copy of any material on the register³.

The right of inspection under head (1) above extends to the originals of documents⁴ delivered to the registrar of companies⁵ in hard copy form if, and only if, the record kept by the registrar of the contents of the document is illegible or unavailable⁶.

The registrar may specify the form and manner in which application is to be made for inspection under head (1) above, or for provision of a copy under head (2) above⁷.

As regards the form and manner in which copies are to be provided under head (2) above⁸, copies of documents subject to the Directive disclosure requirements must⁹ be provided in hard copy or electronic form, as the applicant chooses¹⁰. This is subject to the proviso¹¹, that the registrar is not obliged¹² to provide copies in electronic form of a document that was delivered to the registrar in hard copy form, if¹³: (a) the document was delivered to the registrar on or before 31 December 1996¹⁴; or (b) the document was delivered to the registrar on or before 31 December 2006 and ten years or more elapsed between the date of delivery and the date of receipt of the first application for a copy on or after 1 January 2007¹⁵. Subject to these provisions¹⁶, the registrar may determine the form and manner in which copies are to be provided¹⁷.

Copies provided under head (2) above in hard copy form must be certified as true copies unless the applicant dispenses with such certification¹⁸; and copies so provided in electronic form must not be certified as true copies unless the applicant expressly requests such certification¹⁹. A copy provided under head (2) above, certified by the registrar (whose official position it is unnecessary to prove) to be an accurate record of the contents of the original document, is in all legal proceedings admissible in evidence²⁰; (i) as of equal validity with the original document²¹; and (ii) as evidence of any fact stated in the original document of which direct oral evidence would be admissible²². Except in the case of documents that are subject to the Directive disclosure requirements²³, copies provided by the registrar may, instead of being certified in writing to be an accurate record, be sealed with the registrar's official seal²⁴.

No process for compelling the production of a record kept by the registrar may issue from any court except with the permission of the court²⁵; and any such process must bear on it a statement that it is issued with the permission of the court²⁶.

1 The subject to the Companies Act 2006 s 1087 (see PARA 150): see ss 1085(3), 1086(3). As to the application of the Companies Act 2006 Pt 35 (ss 1059A-1120) (see also PARAS 131, 135 et seq, 150 et seq) see PARA 131 note 1.

The provisions of the Companies Act 2006 ss 1085, 1086, 1089-1091 apply to unregistered companies by virtue of the Unregistered Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2436, reg 3, Sch 1 para 20, but with the modifications to the Companies Act 2006 s 1091 as specified thereby: see PARA 1666. As to the meaning of 'unregistered company' see PARA 1665.

2 Companies Act 2006 s 1085(1). As to the meaning of the 'register' see PARA 146. As to the categories of material that must not be made available by the registrar of companies for public inspection see PARA 150 et seq.

3 Companies Act 2006 s 1086(1). The fee for any such copy of material derived from a document subject to the Directive disclosure requirements (see s 1078; and PARA 144), whether in hard copy or electronic form, must not exceed the administrative cost of providing it: s 1086(2). As to fees payable to the registrar see PARA 135. As to documents or information sent or supplied in hard copy form see PARA 678; and as to documents or information sent or supplied in electronic form see PARA 679.

4 The period for which such originals are to be kept is limited by the Companies Act 2006 s 1083(1) (see PARA 146): s 1085(2). As to the meaning of 'document' for these purposes see PARA 141 note 2.

5 As to the meaning of 'registrar of companies' see PARA 131 note 2. As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and see PARA 131 note 1. As to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16. As to the meaning of references to delivering a document for these purposes see PARA 141 note 2. As to the delivery of documents to the registrar see PARA 141; and as to the requirements for the proper delivery of documents to the registrar see PARA 142.

Any function of the registrar of companies for England and Wales conferred by or under the Companies Act 2006 s 1085 may be exercised by, or by employees of, such person (if any) as may be authorised in that behalf by the registrar of companies for England and Wales, except in so far as it relates to the determination of the means of facilitating the exercise of the right of persons to inspect records kept by the registrar, or the form in which copies of the information contained in those records may be made available: see the Contracting Out (Functions in relation to the Registration of Companies) Order 1995, SI 1995/1013, art 3, Sch 1 para 3(d); and the Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b); and PARA 134. As to the meanings of 'England' and 'Wales' see PARA 1 note 5. As to the contracting out of the registrar of companies' functions generally see PARAS 133-134.

7 Companies Act 2006 s 1089(1). As from 1 January 2007, applications in respect of documents subject to the Directive disclosure requirements (as to which see PARA 144) may be submitted to the registrar in hard copy or electronic form, as the applicant chooses; this does not affect the registrar's power under s 1089(1) to impose requirements in respect of other matters: s 1089(2). As to the significance of the date of 1 January 2007 in this context see PARA 141 note 16.

As to fees payable in respect of the performance of the registrar's functions in relation to the inspection of the register and the provision of copies of material on the register see the Registrar of Companies (Fees) (Companies, Overseas Companies and Limited Liability Partnerships) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2101, reg 4, Sch 2. The fees prescribed in relation to Sch 2 paras 7(a), 8(a) and 10(a) are not payable in respect of any month for which the applicant pays a fee to the registrar for subscription to Companies House Direct, Extranet or XML (those terms are defined in Sch 2 para 1) under regulations providing for the payment of fees in respect of the functions of the registrar in relation to the inspection, or provision of copies, of documents kept by the registrar relating to European Economic Interest Groupings and limited partnerships: reg 4A (added by SI 2009/2439).

- 19 Companies Act 2006 s 1091(2). The Secretary of State may make provision by regulations as to the manner in which such a certificate is to be provided in a case where the copy is provided in electronic form: s 1091(4). As to the making of regulations under the Companies Act 2006 generally see ss 1288-1292. As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6. In exercise of the powers conferred by s 1091(4), the Secretary of State has made the Companies (Registrar, Languages and Trading Disclosures) Regulations 2006, SI 2006/3429. Accordingly, where a person requires a copy of material on the register under the Companies Act 2006 s 1086 (see head (2) in the text), and where that person expressly requests that the copy be certified as a true copy, and where the registrar provides the copy in electronic form, then the registrar's certificate that the copy is an accurate record of the contents of the original document must be authenticated by means of an electronic signature that is uniquely linked to the registrar, that indicates that the registrar has caused it to be applied, that is created using means that the registrar can maintain under his sole control, and that is linked both to the certificate and to the copy provided under s 1086, in such a manner that any subsequent change of the data comprised in either is detectable: Companies (Registrar, Languages and Trading Disclosures) Regulations 2006, SI 2006/3429, reg 2(1), (2). For these purposes, an 'electronic signature' means data in electronic form which are attached to or logically associated with other electronic data and which serve as a method of authentication: reg 2(3).

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(iii) The Registrar of Companies/E. THE REGISTER/(B) Inspection of Records kept by the Registrar/150. Material not to be made available by the registrar for public inspection.

150. Material not to be made available by the registrar for public inspection.

The following material must not be made available by the registrar of companies¹ for public inspection²:

- 248 (1) the contents of any document³ sent to the registrar⁴ containing views expressed⁵ by a specified government department or other body in relation to company names that either suggest some connection with a government or public authority or contain other sensitive words or expressions⁶;
- 249 (2) protected information⁷ regarding directors' residential addresses or any corresponding provision of the regulations⁸ that govern overseas companies⁹;
- 250 (3) representations received by the registrar in response to a notice¹⁰ of a proposal to put a director's usual residential address on the public record¹¹, or any corresponding provision of regulations¹² made in relation to overseas companies¹³;
- 251 (4) any application to the registrar¹⁴ for administrative restoration to the register that has not yet been determined or was not successful¹⁵;
- 252 (5) any document received by the registrar in connection with the giving or withdrawal of consent by a company¹⁶ with regard to the registrar's power to make informal corrections to documents received¹⁷;
- 253 (6) any application or other document delivered to the registrar¹⁸ under the provisions that allow addresses to be made unavailable for public inspection, and any address in respect of which such an application is successful¹⁹;
- 254 (7) any application or other document delivered to the registrar²⁰ in relation to any rectification of the register²¹;
- 255 (8) any court order²² made in relation to any rectification of the register that the court has directed²³ is not to be made available for public inspection²⁴;
- 256 (9) the contents of any instrument creating or evidencing a charge²⁵, or any certified or verified copy of an instrument creating or evidencing a charge²⁶, delivered to the registrar under the provisions²⁷ which govern the registration of company charges²⁸;
- 257 (10) any e-mail address, identification code or password deriving from a document delivered for the purpose of authorising or facilitating electronic filing procedures or providing information by telephone²⁹;
- 258 (11) the contents of any documents held by the registrar pending a decision of the Regulator of Community Interest Companies³⁰ on a company's eligibility for registration as, conversion to, or conversion from, a community interest company³¹, and that the registrar is not later required to record³²;
- 259 (12) any other material excluded from public inspection by or under any other enactment³³.

A restriction applying by reference to material deriving from a particular description of document does not affect the availability for public inspection of the same information contained in material derived from another description of document in relation to which no such restriction applies³⁴.

Any such material that is not to be made available by the registrar of companies for public inspection³⁵ need not be retained by the registrar for longer than appears to him reasonably necessary for the purposes for which the material was delivered to the registrar³⁶.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(iii) The Registrar of Companies/E. THE REGISTER/(B) Inspection of Records kept by the Registrar/151. Addresses on the register not to be made available by the registrar for public inspection.

151. Addresses on the register not to be made available by the registrar for public inspection.

The Secretary of State¹ may make provision by regulations² requiring the registrar of companies³, on application, to make an address on the register⁴ unavailable for public inspection⁵. The regulations may make provision as to:

- 260 (1) who may make an application⁶;
- 261 (2) the grounds on which an application may be made⁷;
- 262 (3) the information to be included in and documents to accompany an application⁸;
- 263 (4) the notice to be given of an application and of its outcome⁹; and
- 264 (5) how an application is to be determined¹⁰.

An application must specify the address to be removed from the register and indicate where on the register it is¹¹. The regulations may provide: (a) that an address is not to be made unavailable for public inspection in this way¹² unless replaced by a service address¹³; and (b) that, in such a case, the application must specify a service address¹⁴.

1 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6.

2 Regulations made under the Companies Act 2006 s 1088 are subject to affirmative resolution procedure (ie the regulations must not be made unless a draft of the statutory instrument containing them has been laid before Parliament and approved by a resolution of each House of Parliament): see ss 1088(6), 1290. As to the making of regulations under the Companies Act 2006 generally see ss 1288-1292. In exercise of the power conferred by s 1088(1), (2), (3) and (5), the Secretary of State has made the Companies (Disclosure of Address) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/214 (as to which see PARA 152 et seq). As to the application of the Companies Act 2006 Pt 35 (ss 1059A-1120) (see also PARAS 131, 135 et seq, 158 et seq) see PARA 131 note 1.

The provisions of the Companies Act 2006 s 1088 apply to unregistered companies by virtue of the Unregistered Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2436, reg 3, Sch 1 para 20, but with the modifications as specified thereby: see PARA 1666. As to the meaning of 'unregistered company' see PARA 1665.

3 As to the meaning of 'registrar of companies' see PARA 131 note 2. As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and see PARA 131 note 1. As to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

4 As to the meaning of the 'register' see PARA 146.

5 Companies Act 2006 s 1088(1). See note 2. As to the inspection and copying of records kept by the registrar generally see PARA 149; and as to the general categories of material that must not be made available by the registrar of companies for public inspection see PARA 150.

6 Companies Act 2006 s 1088(2)(a). See note 2.

7 Companies Act 2006 s 1088(2)(b). See note 2.

8 Companies Act 2006 s 1088(2)(c). See note 2.

9 Companies Act 2006 s 1088(2)(d). See note 2.

10 Companies Act 2006 s 1088(2)(e). Provision under s 1088(2)(e) may in particular: (1) confer a discretion on the registrar (s 1088(3)(a)); and (2) provide for a question to be referred to a person other than the registrar for the purposes of determining the application (s 1088(3)(b)). See note 2.

11 Companies Act 2006 s 1088(4). Any application or other document delivered to the registrar under s 1088, and any address in respect of which such an application is successful, is not to be made available by the registrar of companies for public inspection: see s 1087(1)(e); and PARA 150.

12 Ie under the Companies Act 2006 s 1088: see s 1088(5)(a).

13 Companies Act 2006 s 1088(5)(a). See note 2. As to the meaning of 'service address' see PARA 673.

14 Companies Act 2006 s 1088(5)(b). See note 2.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(iii) The Registrar of Companies/E. THE REGISTER/(B) Inspection of Records kept by the Registrar/152. Application by individual to withhold address placed on the register.

152. Application by individual to withhold address placed on the register.

An application¹ for the purpose of requiring the registrar of companies² to make an address on the register³ unavailable for public inspection (a 'section 1088 application')⁴ may be made to the registrar by an individual whose usual residential address was placed on the register⁵, in respect of that usual residential address where it was placed on the register on or after 1 January 2003⁶. The grounds on which such an application may be made are that the individual making the application⁷:

- 265 (1) considers that there is a serious risk that he, or a person who lives with him, will be subjected to violence or intimidation as a result of the activities of at least one of the companies of which⁸: (a) he is, or proposes to become, a director⁹; or (b) he is not a director but of which he has been at any time a director, secretary¹⁰ or permanent representative¹¹;
- 266 (2) is or has been employed by a relevant organisation¹²;
- 267 (3) is a 'section 243 beneficiary'¹³, being an individual:
- 19 35. (a) who has made an application¹⁴ for the purpose of requiring the registrar to refrain from disclosing protected information relating to a director to a credit reference agency (a 'section 243 application') in respect of which a determination by the registrar on such an application in favour of the applicant (a 'section 243 decision') has been made¹⁵; or
36. (b) on whose behalf a company or a subscriber to a memorandum of association¹⁶ has made a section 243 application in respect of which a section 243 decision has been made¹⁷; or
37. (c) in relation to whom a confidentiality order¹⁸ was in force immediately before 1 October 2009 and who¹⁹ is treated as having made a section 243 application in respect of which a section 243 decision has been made²⁰.

The application must contain²¹:

- 268 (i) a statement of the grounds on which the application is made²²;
- 269 (ii) the name²³ and any former name²⁴ of the applicant²⁵;
- 270 (iii) the usual residential address of the applicant that is to be made unavailable for public inspection²⁶;
- 271 (iv) an address for correspondence in respect of the application²⁷;
- 272 (v) the name and registered number of each company of which the applicant is or has been at any time since 1 January 2003 a director, secretary or permanent representative²⁸;
- 273 (vi) the service address which is to replace that usual residential address on the register²⁹; and
- 274 (vii) except where the application is delivered to the registrar on the same day as the applicant delivers a section 243 application³⁰, the date of birth of the applicant³¹, the name of each company of which the applicant proposes to become a director³² and, where the registrar has allotted a unique identifier to the applicant, that unique identifier³³.

The application must be accompanied by evidence which³⁴:

- 275 (A) where the grounds of the application are those described in head (1) above, supports the applicant's assertion that his application falls within the grounds stated in his application³⁵;
- 276 (B) where the grounds of the application are those described in head (2) above, establishes that the applicant is or has been employed by a relevant organisation³⁶;
- 277 (C) where the grounds of the application are those described in head (3) above, establishes that he is a section 243 beneficiary³⁷.

For these purposes, the registrar may direct that additional information or evidence should be delivered to him, what such information or evidence should be and how it should be verified³⁸.

The registrar may refer to a relevant body³⁹ any question relating to an assessment of⁴⁰: (aa) the nature and extent of any risk of violence or intimidation considered by the applicant to arise in relation to himself, or a person who lives with him, as a result of the activities of any company of which he is or proposes to become a director or has been at any time a director, secretary or permanent representative⁴¹; or (bb) whether the applicant is or has been employed by a relevant organisation⁴². For the purpose of determining any section 1088 application, the registrar may accept any answer to a question which is referred in this way⁴³ as providing sufficient evidence (where the grounds of the application are those described in head (1) above) of the nature and extent of any risk relevant to the applicant, or to persons who live with the applicant⁴⁴, or as providing sufficient evidence of whether an applicant is or has been employed by a relevant organisation⁴⁵.

The registrar must determine the application and send the applicant to the address for correspondence stated in his application, notice of his determination on the section 1088 application within five working days of that determination being made⁴⁶.

16 As to subscribers to a company's memorandum of association see PARA 104.

17 See the Companies (Disclosure of Address) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/214, reg 1(2).

18 For these purposes, 'confidentiality order' means an order under the Companies Act 1985 s 723B (repealed) (confidentiality orders): see the Companies (Disclosure of Address) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/214, reg 1(2).

19 Ie by the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, art 5, Sch 2 para 37: see the Companies (Disclosure of Address) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/214, reg 1(2). Accordingly, a director in relation to whom a confidentiality order under the Companies Act 1985 s 723B (repealed) was in force immediately before 1 October 2009 is treated on and after that date as if they had made an application under the Companies Act 2006 s 243(4) (permitted use or disclosure by the registrar) (see PARA 503), and as if that application had been determined by the registrar in their favour: Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, Sch 2 para 37(1). The provisions of regulations under the Companies Act 2006 s 243(4) relating to decisions of the registrar in favour of an applicant (in particular, as to the duration and revocation of such a decision) apply accordingly (Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, Sch 2 para 37(2)); and as those regulations apply in accordance with Sch 2 para 37 any reference to an offence under the Companies Act 2006 s 1112 (false statements made to registrar) (see PARA 137) must be read as a reference to an offence under regulations under the Companies Act 1985 s 723E(1)(a) (repealed) in relation to the application for the confidentiality order (Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, Sch 2 para 37(3)). The date of 1 October 2009 was the date by which all the provisions of the Companies Act 2006 that affect the law in England and Wales had come into force: see PARA 17 note 1.

Application by company to withhold address placed on the register.

153. Application by company to withhold address placed on the register.

A section 1088 application¹ may be made to the registrar of companies² by a company in respect of the addresses of³:

- 278 (1) all of its members⁴ and former members whose addresses were contained in an annual return⁵, or in a return of allotment of shares⁶, delivered to the registrar on or after 1 January 2003⁷; or
- 279 (2) the subscribers to its memorandum of association⁸ where that memorandum was delivered to the registrar on or after 1 January 2003⁹.

The grounds on which such an application may be made are that the company making the application considers that, as a result of its activities, the availability to members of the public of the addresses described in heads (1) and (2) above creates a serious risk that its members or former members or subscribers, or persons who live at those addresses, will be subjected to violence or intimidation¹⁰.

The application must contain the name of the applicant company and its registered number¹¹, and a statement of the grounds on which the application is made¹². The application must be accompanied by evidence which supports the applicant's assertion that its application falls within the grounds stated in its application¹³ or, where the court has made an order¹⁴ directing the applicant not to comply with a request¹⁵ for inspection of, or for copies of, the register¹⁶ or the index of members' names¹⁷, a copy of that order¹⁸.

For these purposes, the registrar may direct that additional information or evidence should be delivered to him, what such information or evidence should be and how it should be verified¹⁹.

The registrar may refer to a relevant body²⁰ any question relating to the assessment of the nature and extent of any risk of violence or intimidation considered by the applicant company to arise in relation to any of its members or former members or subscribers, or persons who live at the addresses described in heads (1) and (2) above, as a result of its activities by virtue of the availability to members of the public of particulars of the addresses of such members or former members or subscribers²¹. For the purpose of determining any section 1088 application, the registrar may accept any answer to a question which is referred in this way²² as providing sufficient evidence (where the grounds of the application relate to the addresses described in heads (1) and (2) above²³) of the nature and extent of any risk relevant to the subscribers or members or former members of an applicant company or to persons who live with them or (in the case of members, former members or subscribers) to persons who live at their addresses²⁴.

The registrar must determine the application and send the applicant company to its registered office notice of his determination on the section 1088 application within five working days of that determination being made²⁵.

Application by person registering a charge to withhold address placed on the register.

154. Application by person registering a charge to withhold address placed on the register.

A section 1088 application¹ may be made to the registrar of companies² by a person who has registered a charge³, and who is not the company which created the charge or acquired the property subject to a charge⁴, in respect of his address delivered to the registrar for the purposes of that registration⁵.

The grounds on which such an application may be made are that the person making the application considers that there is a serious risk that he (or, if applicable, his employees) or persons who live with him or his employees, will be subjected to violence or intimidation as a result of the activities of the company which is, or was, subject to the charge⁶.

The application must contain⁷:

- 280 (1) a statement of the grounds on which the application is made⁸;
- 281 (2) the name of the applicant⁹ and, where the applicant is a company, its registered number¹⁰;
- 282 (3) the address of the applicant that is to be made unavailable for public inspection¹¹;
- 283 (4) the name and registered number of the company which is or was subject to the charge¹²;
- 284 (5) an address for correspondence with the registrar in respect of the application¹³; and 285 (6) where the applicant is the chargee, the service address which is to replace the address of the applicant on the register¹⁴.

The application must be accompanied by evidence which supports the applicant's assertion that there is a serious risk that he (or, if applicable, his employees) or persons who live with him or his employees, will be subjected to violence or intimidation as a result of the activities of the company which is or was subject to the charge¹⁵.

For these purposes, the registrar may direct that additional information or evidence should be delivered to him, what such information or evidence should be and how it should be verified¹⁶.

The registrar may refer to a relevant body¹⁷ any question relating to the assessment of the nature and extent of any risk of violence or intimidation considered by the applicant to arise in relation to himself (or, if applicable, his employees), or persons who live with him or his employees, as a result of the activities of the company which is or was subject to the charge¹⁸. For the purpose of determining any section 1088 application, the registrar may accept any answer to a question which is referred in this way¹⁹ as providing sufficient evidence (where the grounds of the application relate to the activities of a company which is, or was, subject to a registered charge²⁰) of the nature and extent of any risk relevant to (where the applicant is an individual) the applicant, or to any employees of an applicant, or to persons who live with them²¹.

The registrar must determine the application and send the applicant to the address stated in the application in accordance with head (5) above notice of his determination on the section 1088 application within five working days of that determination being made²².

Effect of successful application to withhold address placed on the register.

155. Effect of successful application to withhold address placed on the register.

Where a section 1088 application¹ has been determined in favour of the applicant, the registrar of companies² must: (1) in the case of an application made by an individual³ or by a person who registers or has registered a charge⁴, make the specified address⁵ unavailable for public inspection⁶; (2) in the case of an application by a company⁷, make all of the addresses of the members⁸, former members or subscribers to the memorandum of association⁹ unavailable for public inspection¹⁰; (3) in the case of a director¹¹ or secretary¹² in relation to whom a confidentiality order¹³ was in force immediately before 1 October 2009¹⁴, make unavailable for public inspection any address that immediately before that date was contained in confidential records¹⁵.

A section 1088 decision¹⁶ continues to have effect until the registrar has made a revocation decision¹⁷ in relation to the section 1088 beneficiary¹⁸.

Appeal of unsuccessful application to withhold address placed on the register.

156. Appeal of unsuccessful application to withhold address placed on the register.

An applicant who has received notice¹ that his section 1088 application² has been unsuccessful may appeal to the High Court on the grounds that the decision is unlawful³, is irrational or unreasonable⁴, or has been made on the basis of a procedural impropriety or otherwise contravenes the rules of natural justice⁵. However, no such appeal may be brought unless the permission of the court has been obtained⁶.

An applicant must bring an appeal within 21 days of the date of the notice or, with the court's permission, after the end of such period, but only if the court is satisfied (where permission is sought before the end of that period) that there is good reason for the applicant being unable to bring the appeal in time⁷ or (where permission is sought after that time) that there was a good reason for the applicant's failure to bring the appeal in time and for any delay in applying for permission⁸.

The court determining an appeal may either dismiss the appeal⁹ or quash the decision¹⁰. Where the court quashes a decision, it may refer the matter to the registrar of companies¹¹ with a direction to reconsider it and make a determination in accordance with the findings of the court¹².

157. Revocation of decision to withhold address placed on the register.

The registrar of companies¹ may revoke a section 1088 decision² at any time if he is satisfied that the section 1088 beneficiary³ or any other person, in purported compliance with any provision of the Disclosure of Address Regulations⁴, is found guilty of an offence of making false statements to the registrar⁵ (a 'revocation decision')⁶.

If the registrar proposes to make a revocation decision, he must send the beneficiary notice of his intention⁷. The notice must: (1) inform the beneficiary that he may, within the period of 28 days beginning with the date of the notice, deliver representations in writing to the registrar⁸; and (2) state that, if representations are not received by the registrar within that period, the revocation decision will be made at the expiry of that period⁹. If, within the period so specified¹⁰, the beneficiary delivers representations as to why the revocation decision should not be made, the registrar must have regard to the representations in determining whether to make the revocation decision, and must, within five working days of making his decision, send notice of it to the beneficiary¹¹.

Any communication by the registrar in respect of a revocation decision or proposed revocation decision must be sent to the beneficiary¹²: (a) in the case of an individual, to his usual residential address¹³; (b) in the case of a company, to its registered office¹⁴; or (c) in the case of a partnership¹⁵, to the address specified in its section 1088 application¹⁶.

F. CORRECTION OF MATERIAL KEPT ON THE REGISTER

158. Removal or rationalisation of material on the register.

Where it appears to the registrar of companies¹ that the information contained in a document² delivered to the registrar³ is inconsistent with other information on the register⁴, the registrar may give notice to the company to which the document relates⁵, stating in what respects the information contained in it appears to be inconsistent with other information on the register⁶, and requiring the company to take steps to resolve the inconsistency⁷. The notice must state the date on which it is issued⁸, and require the delivery to the registrar, within 14 days after that date, of such replacement or additional documents as may be required to resolve the inconsistency⁹. If the necessary documents are not delivered within the period specified, an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer of the company who is in default¹⁰. A person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale¹¹ and (for continued contravention) a daily default fine¹² not exceeding one-tenth of level 5 on the standard scale¹³.

The registrar may remove from the register anything that there was power, but no duty, to include¹⁴. This power is exercisable, in particular, so as to remove unnecessary material¹⁵, and to remove material derived from a document that has been replaced, either because it did not meet the requirements for proper delivery¹⁶, or pursuant to a notice to remedy an inconsistency on the register¹⁷. However, this power does not authorise the removal from the register of:

- 286 (1) anything whose registration has had legal consequences in relation to the company, as regards: (a) its formation¹⁸; (b) a change of name¹⁹; (c) its re-registration²⁰; (d) its becoming or ceasing to be a community interest company²¹; (e) a reduction of capital²²; (f) a change of registered office²³; (g) the registration of a charge²⁴; or (h) its dissolution²⁵;
- 287 (2) an address that is a person's registered address for the purposes of the service of documents on directors, secretaries and others²⁶.

On or before removing any material in this way²⁷ (otherwise than at the request of the company) the registrar must give notice²⁸: (i) to the person by whom the material was delivered (if the identity, and name and address of that person are known)²⁹; or (ii) to the company to which the material relates (if notice cannot be given under head (i) above and the identity of that company is known)³⁰. The notice must state what material the registrar proposes to remove (or has removed) and on what grounds³¹, and it must state the date on which it is issued³².

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(iii) The Registrar of Companies/F. CORRECTION OF MATERIAL KEPT ON THE REGISTER/159. Provision made for rectification of the register on application to the registrar.

159. Provision made for rectification of the register on application to the registrar.

The Secretary of State¹ may make provision by regulations² requiring the registrar of companies³, on application, to remove from the register⁴ material of a description specified in the regulations that⁵:

- 288 (1) derives from anything invalid or ineffective or that was done without the authority of the company⁶; or
- 289 (2) is factually inaccurate, or is derived from something that is factually inaccurate or forged⁷.

The regulations may make provision as to:

- 290 (a) who may make an application⁸;
- 291 (b) the information to be included in and documents to accompany an application⁹;
- 292 (c) the notice to be given of an application and of its outcome¹⁰;
- 293 (d) a period in which objections to an application may be made¹¹; and
- 294 (e) how an application is to be determined¹².

An application must specify what is to be removed from the register and indicate where on the register it is¹³, and must be accompanied by a statement that the material specified in the application complies with the statutory requirements¹⁴ and with the regulations¹⁵. If no objections are made to the application, the registrar may accept the statement as sufficient evidence that the material specified in the application should be removed from the register¹⁶.

Where anything is removed from the register in this way¹⁷, the registration of which has had legal consequences in relation to the company, as regards: (i) its formation¹⁸; (ii) a change of name¹⁹; (iii) its re-registration²⁰; (iv) its becoming or ceasing to be a community interest company²¹; (v) a reduction of capital²²; (vi) a change of registered office²³; (vii) the registration of a charge²⁴; or (viii) its dissolution²⁵, any person appearing to the court to have a sufficient interest may apply to the court for such consequential orders as appear just with respect to the legal effect (if any) to be accorded to the material by virtue of its having appeared on the register²⁶.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(iii) The Registrar of Companies/F. CORRECTION OF MATERIAL KEPT ON THE REGISTER/160. Rectification of the register on application to the registrar.

160. Rectification of the register on application to the registrar.

On application¹ (but not if there is a valid objection to the application²) the registrar must remove from the register any relevant material³ that either derives from anything invalid or ineffective or that was done without the authority of the company or overseas company to which the material relates⁴, or that is factually inaccurate, or is derived from something that is factually inaccurate or forged⁵. An application to the registrar for the removal from the register, on such a ground⁶, of:

- 295 (1) material that was included in a standard form required for giving notice⁷ of a change of address of the registered office, or of material that is derived from material that was included in such a form, may be made by (and only by) the company to which the material relates⁸;
- 296 (2) material that was included in, or is derived from material that was included in, so much of a standard form required for delivering a return in relation to an overseas company⁹ as is required for details of the alteration of particulars¹⁰ may be made by (and only by) the overseas company to which the material relates¹¹; and
- 297 (3) other relevant material¹² may be made by (and only by) the person by whom the relevant company form or relevant overseas company form (as the case may be) was delivered to the registrar¹³, by the company or overseas company to which the material relates¹⁴, or by any other person to whom the material relates¹⁵.

Such an application to the registrar¹⁶ must, in addition to satisfying the relevant requirements of the Companies Act 2006¹⁷:

- 298 (a) state the applicant's name and address¹⁸;
- 299 (b) where the application is an application referred to in head (1) or head (2) above, confirm that the applicant is the company or (as the case may be) the overseas company to which the relevant material which is the subject of the application relates¹⁹;
- 300 (c) in any other case, state whether the applicant is a person by whom the relevant company form or relevant overseas company form (as the case may be) was delivered to the registrar, or is the company or overseas company to which the material relates or is any other person to whom the material relates²⁰; and
- 301 (d) state whether the relevant material which is the subject of the application derives from anything invalid or ineffective²¹, derives from anything that was done without the authority of the company or overseas company to which the material relates²², is factually inaccurate or is derived from something that is factually inaccurate²³, or is derived from something that is forged²⁴.

Where the application is an application referred to in head (1) above, the registrar must give notice of the application to the person who delivered the standard form mentioned in that regulation to the registrar (but only if the registrar knows the identity and name and address of that person)²⁵, to every person who (to the registrar's knowledge) was a director or secretary of the company at the time when the application was delivered to the registrar²⁶, and to the company at the address of its registered office²⁷. Where the material which is the subject of the application relates to a company (rather than an overseas company), but the application is not an application referred to in head (1) above, the registrar must give notice of the application to every person mentioned in head (3) above whose identity and name and address the registrar knows (other than the applicant)²⁸, and every person who (to the registrar's knowledge) was a director or secretary of the company at the time when the application was delivered to the registrar²⁹.

Where the application is an application referred to in head (2) above, the registrar must give notice of the application to the person who delivered the standard form³⁰ to the registrar (but only if the registrar knows the identity and name and address of that person)³¹, to every person duly registered³², at the time when the application was delivered to the registrar, as a director or secretary of the overseas company³³, to every person duly registered³⁴ (at the time when the application was delivered to the registrar) as a person authorised to accept service of documents on behalf of the overseas company in respect of a UK establishment of the company³⁵, and to every person duly registered³⁶ (at the time when the application was delivered to the registrar) as a permanent representative of the overseas company in respect of a UK establishment of the company³⁷, and to the overseas company³⁸. Where the material which is the subject of the application relates to an overseas company, but the application is not an application referred to in head (2) above, the registrar must give notice of the application to every person mentioned in head (3) above whose identity and name and address the registrar knows (other than the applicant)³⁹, to every person duly registered⁴⁰, at the time when the application was delivered to the registrar, as a director or secretary of the overseas company⁴¹, and to every person duly registered⁴² (at the time when the application was delivered to the registrar) as a person authorised to accept service of documents on behalf of the overseas company in respect of a UK establishment of the company⁴³, and to every person duly registered⁴⁴ (at the time when the application was delivered to the registrar) as a permanent representative of the overseas company in respect of a UK establishment of the company⁴⁵.

Where the material which is the subject of the application is material that was included in, or is derived from material that was included in, a relevant overseas company form⁴⁶, the notice which the registrar is required⁴⁷ to give to the overseas company must be given to the company at the address which was, at the time when the application was delivered to the registrar, duly registered⁴⁸ as the address of the company's UK establishment to which the material relates (and notice need not be given to the company at any other address)⁴⁹.

The notice of the application so given by the registrar⁵⁰ must:

- 302 (i) where the material which is the subject of the application relates to a company (rather than an overseas company), state the name and registered number of the company to which the material relates⁵¹;
- 303 (ii) where the material which is the subject of the application relates to an overseas company, state the overseas company's name as duly registered⁵² and its registered number as duly allocated⁵³;
- 304 (iii) where the material which is the subject of the application is material that was included in, or is derived from material that was included in, a relevant overseas company form⁵⁴ state the registered number duly allocated⁵⁵ to the UK establishment to which the material relates⁵⁶;
- 305 (iv) specify what is to be removed from the register and indicate where on the register it is⁵⁷;
- 306 (v) state the information provided to the registrar under head (d) above⁵⁸;
- 307 (vi) state the date on which the notice is issued⁵⁹;
- 308 (vii) give particulars of the recipient's right to object to the application and the requirements applying to that right⁶⁰;
- 309 (viii) explain the effect of a valid objection being made⁶¹; and
- 310 (ix) explain the effect of the provisions which govern rectification of the register by the registrar⁶².

An objection to an application⁶³ may be made to the registrar by any person⁶⁴; and such an objection must be made by giving notice in writing to the registrar, and the notice must state the name and address of the person making the objection and identify the application to which the objection relates⁶⁵. A person to whom notice of an application was duly given⁶⁶ and who wishes to object to the application must do so before the end of the period of 28 days beginning with the date on which that notice was issued (as stated in the notice)⁶⁷. However, the registrar must not take account of an objection made by any other person after the end of the period of 28 days beginning with the date on which the notices⁶⁸ were issued⁶⁹. If a valid objection is made to the application, the registrar must reject the application⁷⁰. When a valid objection is made, the registrar must also send an acknowledgment of receipt to the person who made the objection⁷¹, notify the applicant of the fact that an objection has been made⁷², and notify every other person to whom the registrar gave due notice⁷³ (but not the person who made the objection or any other person who has made an objection)⁷⁴. If no valid objection is made, the registrar must notify the applicant of that fact⁷⁵.

1 le under the Registrar of Companies and Applications for Striking Off Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1803, reg 4: see reg 4(1).

2 For these purposes, a 'valid objection' is either an objection made in accordance with the Registrar of Companies and Applications for Striking Off Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1803, reg 5(10) (see the text and note 65) and reg 5(11) (see the text and notes 66-67) by a person to whom notice of the application was given under reg 5(2), (3), (4) or (5) (see the text and notes 25-45), or an objection made in accordance with reg 5(10) by any other person which is not an objection that the registrar is prevented from taking into account under reg 5(12) (see the text and notes 68-69): regs 1(2), 4(8).

3 For these purposes, 'relevant material' means material on the register that was included in, or is derived from material that was included in, a relevant company form or a relevant overseas company form delivered to the registrar by any person: Registrar of Companies and Applications for Striking Off Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1803, regs 1(2), 4(2). A 'relevant company form' is either a standard form required for giving notice under the Companies Act 2006 s 87 (change of address of registered office) (see PARA 129), s 167 (changes relating to directors) (see PARA 514) or s 276 (changes relating to secretaries) (see PARA 606), or so much of a standard form required for delivering an application under s 9 (application for registration of a company) (see PARA 111) as is required for the statement of a company's proposed officers referred to in s 9(4)(c): Registrar of Companies and Applications for Striking Off Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1803, regs 1(2), 4(3). A 'relevant overseas company form' is either so much of a standard form required for delivering a return under the Overseas Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1801, reg 4 (see PARA 1826) as is required for the list referred to in reg 6(1)(d) (list of directors and secretary of an overseas company) (see PARA 1826), for the names and service addresses referred to in reg 7(1)(e) (names and service addresses of persons authorised to accept service of documents on behalf of an overseas company in respect of a UK establishment) (see PARA 1826) or for the list referred to in reg 7(1)(f) (list of permanent representatives of an overseas company in respect of a UK establishment) (see PARA 1826), or so much of a standard form required for delivering a return under reg 13 as is required for details of the alteration of particulars delivered under reg 6(1)(d), reg 7(1)(a) (address of UK establishment) (see PARA 1826), reg 7(1)(e) or reg 7(1)(f): see the Registrar of Companies and Applications for Striking Off Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1803, regs 1(2), 4(4). For these purposes, 'required' means required by rules made by the registrar under the Companies Act 2006 s 1117 (see PARA 136): see the Registrar of Companies and Applications for Striking Off Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1803, reg 4(9). Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(iii) The Registrar of Companies/F. CORRECTION OF MATERIAL KEPT ON THE REGISTER/161. Rectification of the register under court order.

161. Rectification of the register under court order.

The registrar of companies¹ must remove from the register² any material³:

- 311 (1) that derives from anything that the court has declared to be invalid or ineffective, or to have been done without the authority of the company⁴; or
- 312 (2) that a court declares to be factually inaccurate, or to be derived from something that is factually inaccurate, or forged⁵, and that the court directs should be removed from the register⁶.

The court order must specify what is to be removed from the register and indicate where on the register it is⁷. However, the court must not make an order for the removal from the register of anything the registration of which has had legal consequences in relation to the company⁸, as regards: (a) its formation⁹; (b) a change of name¹⁰; (c) its re-registration¹¹; (d) its becoming or ceasing to be a community interest company¹²; (e) a reduction of capital¹³; (f) a change of registered office¹⁴; (g) the registration of a charge¹⁵; or (h) its dissolution¹⁶, unless satisfied¹⁷ both that the presence of the material on the register has caused (or may cause) damage to the company¹⁸, and that the company's interest in removing the material outweighs any interest of other persons in the material continuing to appear on the register¹⁹.

Where in such a case the court does make an order for removal, it may make such consequential orders as appear just with respect to the legal effect (if any) to be accorded to the material by virtue of its having appeared on the register²⁰. A copy of the court's order must be sent to the registrar for registration²¹.

Where the court makes an order for the removal of anything from the register in this way²², it may give the following directions²³:

- 313 (i) it may direct that any note on the register²⁴ that is related to the material that is the subject of the court's order is to be removed from the register²⁵;
- 314 (ii) it may direct that its order must not be available for public inspection as part of the register²⁶;
- 315 (iii) it may direct that no note is to be made on the register as a result of its order²⁷, or that any such note must be restricted to such matters as may be specified by the court²⁸.

However, the court must not give any such direction²⁹ unless it is satisfied³⁰: (A) that either the presence on the register of the note (or, as the case may be, of an unrestricted note)³¹ or the availability for public inspection of the court's order³², may cause damage to the company³³; and (B) that the company's interest in non-disclosure outweighs any interest of other persons in disclosure³⁴.

G. THE REGISTRAR'S INDEX OF NAMES

163. Registrar's index of company names.

The registrar of companies¹ must keep an index (called the 'registrar's index of company names') of the names of the following companies and other bodies²:

- 316 (1) UK-registered companies³;
- 317 (2) any body to which any provision of the Companies Acts applies by virtue of regulations⁴ that govern unregistered companies⁵; and
- 318 (3) overseas companies⁶ that have registered particulars with the registrar⁷, other than companies that appear to the registrar not to be required to do so⁸;
- 319 (4) limited partnerships registered in the United Kingdom⁹;
- 320 (5) limited liability partnerships incorporated in the United Kingdom¹⁰;
- 321 (6) European Economic Interest Groupings registered in the United Kingdom¹¹;
- 322 (7) open-ended investment companies authorised in the United Kingdom¹²;
- 323 (8) societies registered under the Industrial and Provident Societies Act 1965 or the Industrial and Provident Societies Act (Northern Ireland) 1969¹³.

Any person may inspect the registrar's index of company names¹⁴.

The Secretary of State¹⁵ may by order¹⁶ amend the list at heads (4) to (8) above¹⁷ either by the addition of any description of body, or by the deletion of any description of body¹⁸; and the Secretary of State may by regulations¹⁹ amend the enactments²⁰ relating to any description of body for the time being within heads (4) to (8) above²¹, so as to²²:

- 324 (a) require the registrar to be provided with information as to the names of bodies registered, incorporated, authorised or otherwise regulated under those enactments²³; and
- 325 (b) make provision in relation to such bodies corresponding to that made by the Companies Act 2006 in relation to company names which are the same as, or similar to, an existing company name²⁴.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(iii) The Registrar of Companies/H. LANGUAGE REQUIREMENTS/164. Translation and transliteration requirements relating to documents.

H. LANGUAGE REQUIREMENTS

164. Translation and transliteration requirements relating to documents.

In relation to all documents¹ required to be delivered to the registrar of companies² under any provision of the Companies Acts, or of the Insolvency Act 1986³, provision has been made for⁴:

- 326 (1) documents to be drawn up and delivered in English⁵;
- 327 (2) documents relating to Welsh companies⁶;
- 328 (3) documents that may be drawn up and delivered in other languages⁷; and
- 329 (4) certified translations⁸.

Accordingly, the general rule is that all documents required to be delivered to the registrar must be drawn up and delivered in English⁹. This is subject to the provisions listed in heads (2) and (3) above¹⁰.

The following documents¹¹, namely:

- 330 (a) agreements required to be forwarded to the registrar¹² because they affect the company's constitution¹³;

- 331 (b) documents required to be delivered¹⁴ under the provisions relating to companies included in the accounts of a larger group¹⁵;
- 332 (c) instruments or copy instruments required to be delivered¹⁶ under the provisions relating to company charges¹⁷;
- 333 (d) documents of any other description specified in regulations made by the Secretary of State¹⁸, may be drawn up and delivered to the registrar in a language other than English, but when delivered to the registrar they must be accompanied by a certified translation into English¹⁹.

A company may deliver to the registrar one or more certified translations of any document relating to the company that is or has been delivered to the registrar²⁰. The Secretary of State may by regulations²¹ specify the languages, and the descriptions of document, in relation to which this facility is available²². The power of the registrar to impose requirements as to the form and manner of delivery²³ includes power to impose requirements as to the identification of the original document and the delivery of the translation in a form and manner enabling it to be associated with the original²⁴.

Names and addresses in a document delivered to the registrar must contain only letters, characters and symbols (including accents and other diacritical marks) that are permitted²⁵. The Secretary of State may make provision by regulations²⁶, as to the letters, characters and symbols (including accents and other diacritical marks) that are permitted²⁷, and permitting or requiring the delivery of documents in which names and addresses have not been transliterated into a permitted form²⁸.

Where a name or address is or has been delivered to the registrar in a permitted form using other than Roman characters, the company (or other body) to which the document relates may deliver to the registrar a transliteration into Roman characters²⁹. The power of the registrar to impose requirements as to the form and manner of delivery³⁰ includes power to impose requirements as to the identification of the original document and the delivery of the transliteration in a form and manner enabling it to be associated with the original³¹.

The Secretary of State may make provision by regulations³² requiring the certification of transliterations and prescribing the form of certification³³; and different provision may be made for compulsory and voluntary transliterations³⁴.

4 Companies Act 2006 s 1102(1). The Secretary of State may make provision by regulations applying all or any of the provisions listed at heads (1) to (4) in the text, with or without modifications, in relation to documents delivered to the registrar under any other enactment: s 1102(2). Regulations made under s 1102 are subject to negative resolution procedure (ie the statutory instrument containing the regulations is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament): see ss 1102(4), 1289. As to the meaning of 'enactment' see PARA 17 note 2. As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6. As to the making of regulations under the Companies Act 2006 generally see ss 1288-1292. 8 Companies Act 2006 s 1102(3). Head (4) in the text refers to the provision made by s 1107: see s 1102(3). For the purposes of Pt 35 (ss 1059A-1120) (registrar of companies) (see PARAS 135 et seq, 165 et seq), a 'certified translation' means a translation certified to be a correct translation: s 1107(1). In the case of any discrepancy between the original language version of a document and a certified translation, the company may not rely on the translation as against a third party, but a third party may rely on the translation unless the company shows that the third party had knowledge of the original: s 1107(2). For these purposes, a 'third party' means a person other than the company or the registrar: s 1107(3).

Regulations made under s 1105 are subject to negative resolution procedure (i.e. the statutory instrument containing the regulations is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament): see ss 1105(3), 1289. In exercise of the powers conferred by s 1105(2)(d), the Secretary of State has made the Companies (Registrar, Languages and Trading Disclosures) Regulations 2006, SI 2006/3429, reg 4 (applied by virtue of the Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b)); the Registrar of Companies and Applications for Striking Off Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1803, reg 7; the Overseas Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1801, reg 78; and the Overseas Companies (Execution of Documents and Registration of Charges) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1917, reg 27; and see the Companies (Cross-Border Mergers) Regulations 2007, SI 2007/2974 (as to which see note 4).

19 Companies Act 2006 s 1105(1). However, s 1105 does not apply to a document relating to a Welsh company that is drawn up and delivered in Welsh: see s 1104(5); and PARA 165. See also note 8.

20 Companies Act 2006 s 1106(1). The provisions of s 1106 do not apply where the original document was delivered to the registrar before 1 January 2007 (i.e. the day on which s 1106 came into force: see the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 1, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2006, SI 2006/3428, art 2(1)(g)): Companies Act 2006 s 1106(6). The regulations must provide that the facility mentioned in s 1106 is available as from 1 January 2007 (as to the significance of this date see PARA 141 note 16), in relation to all the official languages of the European Union, and in relation to all documents subject to the Directive disclosure requirements (see s 1078; and PARA 144): s 1106(3). In exercise of the powers conferred by s 1106(2), the Secretary of State has made the Companies (Registrar, Languages and Trading Disclosures) Regulations 2006, SI 2006/3429; and see the Companies (Cross-Border Mergers) Regulations 2007, SI 2007/2974 (as to which see note 4). Accordingly, the facility described in the Companies Act 2006 s 1106 is available in relation to all the official languages of the European Union, and all documents subject to the Directive disclosure requirements: Companies (Registrar, Languages and Trading Disclosures) Regulations 2006, SI 2006/3429, reg 5.

22 Companies Act 2006 s 1106(2). As to the regulations so made see note 21.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(3) COMPANY FORMATION AND REGISTRATION/(iii) The Registrar of Companies/H. LANGUAGE REQUIREMENTS/165. Documents relating to Welsh companies.

165. Documents relating to Welsh companies.

In relation to all documents¹ required to be delivered to the registrar of companies² under any provision of the Companies Acts, or of the Insolvency Act 1986³, provision has been made⁴ to allow for such documents, where they relate to a Welsh company⁵, to be drawn up and delivered to the registrar in Welsh⁶.

On delivery to the registrar, any such document must be accompanied by a certified translation⁷ into English, unless it is: (1) of a description excepted from that requirement by regulations made by the Secretary of State⁸; or (2) in a form prescribed⁹ in Welsh (or partly in Welsh and partly in English)¹⁰.

Where a document is properly delivered to the registrar in Welsh without a certified translation into English, the registrar must obtain such a translation if the document is to be available for public inspection¹¹. (The translation is treated as if delivered to the registrar in accordance with the same provision as the original)¹².

A Welsh company may deliver to the registrar a certified translation into Welsh of any document in English that relates to the company and is or has been delivered to the registrar¹³.

166. Enforcement of company's duty to make returns.

Where a company¹ has made default in complying with any obligation under the Companies Acts either to deliver a document² to the registrar of companies³ or to give notice to him of any matter⁴, the registrar, or any member⁵ or creditor of the company, may give notice to the company requiring it to comply with the obligation⁶.

If the company fails to make good the default within 14 days after the service of a notice requiring it to do so, the registrar, or any member or creditor of the company, may apply to the court⁷ for an order directing the company, and any specified officer⁸ of it, to make good the default within a specified time⁹. Any such order may provide that all costs of and incidental to the application are to be borne by the company or by any officers of the company responsible for the default¹⁰.

Nothing in these enforcement provisions¹¹ affects the operation of any enactment making it an offence, or imposing a civil penalty, in respect of any such default¹².

(4) RE-REGISTRATION AND ITS EFFECTS

(i) In general

167. Alteration of status by re-registration.

A company¹ may, by re-registration under the Companies Act 2006², alter its status³:

334 (1) from a private company⁴ to a public company⁵;

- 335 (2) from a public company to a private company⁶;
- 336 (3) from a private limited company⁷ to an unlimited company⁸;
- 337 (4) from an unlimited private company to a limited company⁹;
- 338 (5) from a public company to an unlimited private company¹⁰.

In accordance with Part 2 of the Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004¹¹, an existing company may become a community interest company¹² and a community interest company may become a charity¹³ or an industrial and provident society¹⁴.

It is not possible for a company limited by shares¹⁵ to alter its status to a company limited by guarantee¹⁶, or vice versa.

Public Company/168. Procedure on application to re-register a private company as a public company.

(ii) Private Company becoming a Public Company

168. Procedure on application to re-register a private company as a public company.

A private company¹ (whether limited² or unlimited³) may be re-registered under the Companies Act 2006⁴ as a public company limited by shares⁵ provided that⁶:

- 339 (1) a special resolution⁷ that it should be so re-registered is passed⁸;
- 340 (2) the following conditions are met⁹, namely: (a) that the company has a share capital¹⁰; (b) that the statutory requirements are met¹¹ as regards its share capital¹²; (c) that the statutory requirements are met¹³ as regards its net assets¹⁴; (d) if the provisions regarding the recent allotment¹⁵ of shares for a non-cash consideration apply¹⁶, that the statutory requirements of those provisions are met¹⁷; and (e) that the company has not previously been re-registered as unlimited¹⁸; and
- 341 (3) an application for re-registration is delivered to the registrar of companies¹⁹, together with the other necessary documents²⁰, and a statement of compliance²¹.

An application for re-registration as a public company must contain: (i) a statement of the company's proposed name on re-registration²²; and (ii) in the case of a company without a secretary²³, a statement of the company's proposed secretary²⁴. The statement of the company's proposed secretary must contain the required particulars of the person who is or the persons who are to be the secretary or joint secretaries of the company²⁵; and it must also contain a consent by the person named as secretary, or each of the persons named as joint secretaries, to act in the relevant capacity²⁶.

The application must be accompanied by:

- 342 (A) a copy of the special resolution²⁷ that the company should re-register as a public company²⁸;
- 343 (B) a copy of the company's articles of association²⁹ as proposed to be amended³⁰;
- 344 (C) a copy of the balance sheet and of any other documents that are required³¹ regarding the company's net assets³²; and
- 345 (D) if the provisions regarding the recent allotment of shares for a non-cash consideration apply³³, a copy of the valuation report³⁴, if any³⁵.

The statement of compliance that is required to be delivered under head (3) above together with the application is a statement that the statutory requirements³⁶ as to re-registration as a public company have been complied with³⁷. The registrar may accept the statement of compliance as sufficient evidence that the company is entitled to be re-registered as a public company³⁸.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(4) RE-REGISTRATION AND ITS EFFECTS/(ii) Private Company becoming a Public Company/169. Additional requirements relating to share capital.

169. Additional requirements relating to share capital.

At the time that the special resolution is passed¹, that a private company² should be re-registered as a public company³, the following requirements with respect to its share capital⁴ must be met⁵:

346 (1) the nominal value⁶ of the company's allotted share capital⁷ must be not less than the authorised minimum⁸;

347 (2) each of the company's allotted shares must be paid up⁹ at least as to one-quarter of the nominal value of that share and the whole of any premium on it¹⁰;

348 (3) if any shares in the company or any premium on them have been fully or partly paid up by an undertaking given by any person that he or another should do work or perform services (whether for the company or any other person), the undertaking must have been performed or otherwise discharged¹¹;

349 (4) if shares have been allotted as fully or partly paid up as to their nominal value or any premium on them otherwise than in cash¹², and the consideration for the allotment consists of or includes an undertaking to the company (other than one to which the condition in head (3) above applies)¹³, then either the undertaking must have been performed or otherwise discharged¹⁴, or there must be a contract between the company and some person pursuant to which the undertaking is to be performed within five years from the time the special resolution for re-registration¹⁵ is passed¹⁶.

For the purpose of determining whether the requirements in heads (2), (3) and (4) above are met, the following shares in the company may be disregarded¹⁷:

- 350 (a) shares which were allotted before 22 June 1982¹⁸, in the case of a company then registered in Great Britain¹⁹;
- 351 (b) shares which were allotted in pursuance of an employees' share scheme²⁰ and by reason of which the company would, but for this provision, be precluded under head (2) above (but not otherwise) from being re-registered as a public company²¹.

Shares disregarded under head (a) or head (b) above are to be treated as not forming part of the allotted share capital for the purposes of head (1) above²².

A company must not be re-registered as a public company if it appears to the registrar of companies²³ that²⁴: (i) the company has resolved to reduce its share capital²⁵; (ii) the reduction: (A) is made under the provisions²⁶ that allow a limited company to pass a resolution redenominating some or all of its shares (that is, for the purpose of adjusting the nominal values of the redenominated shares and so obtain values that are, in the opinion of the company, more suitable)²⁷; or (B) is supported by a statutory solvency statement²⁸; or (C) has been confirmed by an order of the court²⁹; and (iii) the effect of the reduction is, or will be, that the nominal value of the company's allotted share capital is below the authorised minimum³⁰.

Additional requirements relating to net assets; meaning of 'unqualified report'.

170. Additional requirements relating to net assets; meaning of 'unqualified report'.

A private company¹ applying to re-register as a public company² must obtain³:

352 (1) a balance sheet prepared as at a date not more than seven months before the date on which the application to re-register is delivered to the registrar of companies⁴;

353 (2) an unqualified report⁵ by the company's auditor on that balance sheet⁶; and

354 (3) a written statement by the company's auditor that in his opinion at the balance sheet date the amount of the company's net assets was not less than the aggregate of its called-up share capital and undistributable reserves⁷.

Between the balance sheet date and the date on which the application for re-registration is delivered to the registrar, there must be no change in the company's financial position that results in the amount of its net assets becoming less than the aggregate of its called-up share capital and undistributable reserves⁸.

2 As to the meaning of 'public company' see PARA 102. As to the procedure on application to re-register a private company as a public company see PARA 168. As to fees payable to the registrar under the Companies Act 2006 Pt 7 (ss 89-111) (see PARAS 167 et seq, 171 et seq) see the Registrar of Companies (Fees) (Companies, Overseas Companies and Limited Liability Partnerships) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2101, reg 3, Sch 1 para 7(b).

5 For these purposes, an 'unqualified report' means:

78 (1) if the balance sheet was prepared for a financial year of the company, a report stating without material qualification the auditor's opinion that the balance sheet has been properly prepared in accordance with the requirements of the Companies Act 2006 (s 92(3)(a));

79 (2) if the balance sheet was not prepared for a financial year of the company, a report stating without material qualification the auditor's opinion that the balance sheet has been properly prepared in accordance with the provisions of the Companies Act 2006 which would have applied if it had been prepared for a financial year of the company (s 92(3)(b)).

References in the company law provisions of the Companies Act 2006 to the requirements of that Act include the requirements of regulations and orders made under it: s 1172. As to the meaning of the 'company law provisions' of the Companies Act 2006 see PARA 16 note 6. For the purposes of s 92(3), a qualification is material unless the auditor states in his report that the matter giving rise to the qualification is not material for the purpose of determining (by reference to the company's balance sheet) whether at the balance sheet date the amount of the company's net assets was not less than the aggregate of its called-up share capital and undistributable reserves: s 92(5). In Pt 7 (ss 89-111) (see PARAS 167 et seq, 171 et seq), 'net assets' and 'undistributable reserves' have the same meaning as in s 831 (net asset restriction on distributions by public companies) (see PARA 1393): s 92(6). For the purposes of an auditor's report on a balance sheet that was not prepared for a financial year of the company, the provisions of the Companies Act 2006 apply with such modifications as are necessary by reason of that fact: s 92(4). As to the meanings of 'share' and 'share capital' see PARA 1042; and as to the meaning of 'called-up share capital' see PARA 1048. As to the meaning of 'financial year' see PARA 711. Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(4) RE-REGISTRATION AND ITS EFFECTS/(ii) Private Company becoming a Public Company/171. Recent allotment of shares for non-cash consideration.

171. Recent allotment of shares for non-cash consideration.

If shares¹ have been allotted² by the company³ in the period between the date as at which the required balance sheet⁴ is prepared and the passing of the special resolution⁵ that the private company⁶ in question should re-register as a public company⁷, and if those shares were allotted as fully or partly paid up⁸ as to their nominal value⁹ or any premium on them otherwise than in cash¹⁰, then the registrar of companies¹¹ must not entertain an application by the company for re-registration as a public company¹² unless¹³:

355 (1) the consideration for the allotment¹⁴ has been independently valued¹⁵; and

356 (2) the valuer's report has been made to the company (in accordance with such procedure) during the six months immediately preceding the allotment of the shares¹⁶, or unless the allotment is in connection with either a share exchange¹⁷ or a proposed merger with another company¹⁸.

An allotment is in connection with a share exchange if¹⁹:

357 (a) the shares are allotted in connection with an arrangement²⁰ under which the whole or part of the consideration for the shares allotted is provided by²¹: (i) the transfer to the company allotting the shares of shares (or shares of a particular class) in another company²²; or (ii) the cancellation of shares (or shares of a particular class) in another company²³; and

358 (b) the allotment is open to all the holders of the shares of the other company in question²⁴ (or, where the arrangement applies only to shares of a particular class, to all the holders of the company's shares of that class) to take part in the arrangement in connection with which the shares are allotted²⁵.

It is immaterial, for the purposes of deciding whether an allotment is in connection with a share exchange, whether or not the arrangement in connection with which the shares are allotted involves the issue to the company allotting the shares of shares (or shares of a particular class) in the other company²⁶.

There is a proposed merger with another company²⁷ for these purposes if one of the companies concerned proposes to acquire all the assets and liabilities of the other in exchange for the issue of its shares or other securities to shareholders of the other (whether or not accompanied by a cash payment)²⁸.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(4) RE-REGISTRATION AND ITS EFFECTS/(ii) Private Company becoming a Public Company/172. Issue of certificate of re-registration as a public company.

172. Issue of certificate of re-registration as a public company.

If, on an application for re-registration as a public company¹, the registrar of companies² is satisfied that the company is entitled to be so re-registered, the company must be re-registered accordingly³.

The registrar must issue a certificate of incorporation⁴ altered to meet the circumstances of the case⁵; and the certificate must state that it is issued on re-registration and it must state the date on which it is issued⁶. However, the registrar must not issue the certificate if it appears to him that the company has resolved to reduce its share capital⁷ under certain specified statutory provisions⁸ and that the effect of the reduction is, or will be, that the nominal value⁹ of the company's allotted share capital¹⁰ is below the authorised minimum¹¹.

On the issue to a company of the certificate¹²:

- 359 (1) the company, by virtue of the issue of that certificate, becomes a public company¹³;
- 360 (2) the changes in the company's name and articles take effect¹⁴; and
- 361 (3) where the application contained a statement of the proposed secretary¹⁵, the person or persons named in the statement as secretary or joint secretary of the company are deemed to have been appointed to that office¹⁶.

The certificate is conclusive evidence that the requirements of the Companies Act 2006¹⁷ as to re-registration¹⁸ have been complied with¹⁹.

Where a private company re-registers as a public company, the last statement of capital relating to the company received by the registrar²⁰ under any provision of the Companies Acts becomes subject to the Directive disclosure requirements²¹, and the provisions that require the registrar to give public notice of the receipt of certain documents²² apply as if the statement had been received by the registrar when the re-registration takes effect²³.

173. Procedure on application to re-register a public company as a private limited company.

A public company¹ may be re-registered under the Companies Act 2006² as a private limited company³ if:

- 362 (1) a special resolution⁴ that it should be so re-registered is passed⁵;
- 363 (2) the following conditions are met⁶, namely: (a) where no application⁷ for cancellation of the resolution has been made⁸, that either, having regard to the number of members⁹ who consented to or voted in favour of the resolution, no such application may be made¹⁰, or the period within which such an application could be made has expired¹¹; or (b) where such an application has been made¹², that either the application has been withdrawn¹³, or an order has been made confirming the resolution and a copy of that order has been delivered to the registrar of companies¹⁴.
- 364 (3) an application for re-registration is delivered to the registrar¹⁵, together with the other necessary documents¹⁶, and a statement of compliance¹⁷.

An application for re-registration as a private limited company must contain a statement of the company's proposed name on re-registration¹⁸; and the application must be accompanied by: (i) a copy of the special resolution¹⁹ that the company should re-register as a private limited company²⁰; (ii) a copy of the company's articles of association²¹ as proposed to be amended²².

The statement of compliance that is required to be delivered under head (3) above together with the application is a statement that the statutory requirements²³ as to re-registration as a private limited company have been complied with²⁴. The registrar may accept the statement of compliance as sufficient evidence that the company is entitled to be re-registered as a private limited company²⁵.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(4) RE-REGISTRATION AND ITS EFFECTS/(iii) Public Company becoming a Private Company/174. Application to court to cancel resolution to re-register as private limited company.

174. Application to court to cancel resolution to re-register as private limited company.

Where a special resolution¹ by a public company² to be re-registered as a private limited company³ has been passed⁴, an application to the court for the cancellation of that resolution may be made⁵:

- 365 (1) by the holders of not less in the aggregate than 5 per cent in nominal value⁶ of the company's issued share capital⁷ or any class of it⁸;
- 366 (2) if the company is not limited by shares⁹, by not less than 5 per cent of its members¹⁰; or
- 367 (3) by not less than 50 of the company's members¹¹, but not by a person who has consented to or voted in favour of the resolution¹².

The application must be made within 28 days after the passing of the resolution and may be made on behalf of the persons entitled to make the application by such one or more of their number as they may appoint for the purpose¹³.

On making such an application¹⁴, the applicants, or the person making the application on their behalf, must immediately give notice to the registrar of companies¹⁵. On being served with notice of any such application, the company must immediately give notice to the registrar¹⁶; and, if a company fails to comply with this requirement, an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer of the company who is in default¹⁷, and any person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale¹⁸ and (for continued contravention) a daily default fine¹⁹ not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale²⁰.

On the hearing of the application, the court must make an order either cancelling²¹ or confirming²² the resolution²³; and may:

- 368 (a) make that order on such terms and conditions as it thinks fit²⁴;

- 369 (b) adjourn the proceedings, if it thinks fit, in order that an arrangement may be made to the satisfaction of the court for the purchase of the interests of dissentient members²⁵; and
- 370 (c) give such directions and make such orders as it thinks expedient for facilitating or carrying into effect any such arrangement²⁶.

The court's order may, if the court thinks fit, provide for the purchase by the company of the shares of any of its members²⁷ and for the reduction accordingly of the company's capital²⁸, and may make such alteration in the company's articles²⁹ as may be required in consequence of that provision³⁰.

Within 15 days of the making of the court's order on the application, or within such longer period as the court may at any time direct, the company must deliver to the registrar of companies a copy of the order³¹. A company which fails to comply with this requirement, and any officer of it who is in default, commits an offence³² and any person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale and (for continued contravention) a daily default fine not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale³³.

The court's order may, if the court thinks fit, require the company not to make any, or any specified, amendments to its articles without the permission of the court³⁴.

176. Procedure on application to re-register as unlimited company.

A private limited company¹ may be re-registered as an unlimited company² if:

- 373 (1) all the members of the company³ have assented to its being so re-registered⁴;
- 374 (2) the following condition is met⁵, namely that the company has not previously been re-registered as limited⁶; and
- 375 (3) an application for re-registration is delivered to the registrar of companies⁷, together with the other necessary documents⁸, and a statement of compliance⁹.

An application for re-registration as an unlimited company must contain a statement of the company's proposed name on re-registration¹⁰; and the application must be accompanied by: (a) the prescribed form of assent¹¹ to the company's being registered as an unlimited company, authenticated by or on behalf of all the members of the company¹²; (b) a copy of the company's articles¹³ as proposed to be amended¹⁴.

The statement of compliance that is required to be delivered under head (3) above together with the application is a statement that the statutory requirements as to re-registration¹⁵ as an unlimited company have been complied with¹⁶. The statement must contain a statement by the directors¹⁷ of the company¹⁸: (i) that the persons by whom or on whose behalf the form of assent is authenticated constitute the whole membership of the company¹⁹; and (ii) if any of the members have not authenticated that form themselves, that the directors have taken all reasonable steps to satisfy themselves that each person who authenticated it on behalf of a member was lawfully empowered to do so²⁰. The registrar may accept the statement of compliance as sufficient evidence that the company is entitled to be re-registered as an unlimited company²¹.

177. Issue of certificate of re-registration as unlimited company.

If, on an application for re-registration of a private limited company¹ as an unlimited company², the registrar of companies³ is satisfied that the company is entitled to be so re-registered, the company must be re-registered accordingly⁴.

The registrar must issue a certificate of incorporation⁵ altered to meet the circumstances of the case⁶; and the certificate must state that it is issued on re-registration and it must state the date on which it is issued⁷.

On the issue to a company of the certificate:

- 376 (1) the company, by virtue of the issue of that certificate, becomes an unlimited company⁸; and
- 377 (2) the changes in the company's name and articles take effect⁹.

The certificate is conclusive evidence that the requirements of the Companies Act 2006¹⁰ as to re-registration¹¹ have been complied with¹².

178. Procedure on application to re-register unlimited company as private limited company.

An unlimited company¹ may be re-registered as a private limited company² if:

- 378 (1) a special resolution³ that it should be so re-registered is passed⁴;
- 379 (2) the following condition is met⁵, namely that the company has not previously been re-registered as unlimited⁶; and
- 380 (3) an application for re-registration is delivered to the registrar of companies⁷, together with the other necessary documents⁸, and a statement of compliance⁹.

An application for re-registration as a limited company must contain a statement of the company's proposed name on re-registration¹⁰; and it must be accompanied by: (a) a copy of the special resolution¹¹ that the company should re-register as a private limited company¹²; (b) if the company is to be limited by guarantee, a statement of guarantee¹³; (c) a copy of the company's articles of association¹⁴ as proposed to be amended¹⁵.

The statement of compliance that is required to be delivered under head (3) above together with the application is a statement that the statutory requirements as to re-registration¹⁶ as a limited company have been complied with¹⁷. The registrar may accept the statement of compliance as sufficient evidence that the company is entitled to be re-registered as a limited company¹⁸.

The statement of guarantee that is required to be delivered under head (b) above in the case of a company that is to be limited by guarantee must state that each member¹⁹ undertakes that, if the company is wound up²⁰ while he is a member, or within one year after he ceases to be a member, he will contribute to the assets of the company such amount as may be required for²¹: (i) payment of the debts and liabilities of the company contracted before he ceases to be a member²²; (ii) payment of the costs, charges and expenses of winding up²³; and (iii) adjustment of the rights of the contributories among themselves²⁴, not exceeding a specified amount²⁵.

180. Statement of capital required where company already has share capital.

An unlimited company¹ which on re-registration as a private limited company² already has allotted share capital³ must, within 15 days after the re-registration, deliver a statement of capital to the registrar of companies⁴. (However, this does not apply if the information which would be included in the statement has already been sent to the registrar in either a statement of capital and initial shareholdings⁵, or in a statement of capital contained in an annual return⁶).

The statement of capital must state with respect to the company's share capital⁷ on re-registration⁸:

- 383 (1) the total number of shares of the company⁹;
- 384 (2) the aggregate nominal value of those shares¹⁰;
- 385 (3) for each class of shares¹¹: (a) prescribed particulars of the rights attached to the shares¹²; (b) the total number of shares of that class¹³; and (c) the aggregate nominal value of shares of that class¹⁴; and
- 386 (4) the amount paid up and the amount (if any) unpaid on each share¹⁵ (whether on account of the nominal value of the share or by way of premium)¹⁶.

If default is made in complying with these requirements¹⁷, an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer of the company who is in default¹⁸; and any person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale¹⁹ and (for continued contravention) a daily default fine²⁰ not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale²¹.

181. Procedure on application to re-register public company as a private unlimited company.

A public company limited by shares¹ may be re-registered as an unlimited private company with a share capital² if:

- 387 (1) all the members of the company³ have assented to its being so re-registered⁴;
 388 (2) the following condition is met⁵, namely that the company has not previously been re-registered either as limited or as unlimited⁶; and
 389 (3) an application for re-registration is delivered to the registrar of companies⁷, together with the other necessary documents⁸, and a statement of compliance⁹.

An application for the re-registration of a public company as an unlimited private company must contain a statement of the company's proposed name on re-registration¹⁰; and the application must be accompanied by: (a) the prescribed form of assent¹¹ to the company's being registered as an unlimited company, authenticated by or on behalf of all the members of the company¹²; (b) a copy of the company's articles¹³ as proposed to be amended¹⁴.

The statement of compliance that is required to be delivered under head (3) above together with the application is a statement that the statutory requirements as to re-registration¹⁵ as an unlimited private company have been complied with¹⁶. The statement must contain a statement by the directors¹⁷ of the company¹⁸; (i) that the persons by whom or on whose behalf the form of assent is authenticated constitute the whole membership of the company¹⁹; and (ii) if any of the members have not authenticated that form themselves, that the directors have taken all reasonable steps to satisfy themselves that each person who authenticated it on behalf of a member was lawfully empowered to do so²⁰. The registrar may accept the statement of compliance as sufficient evidence that the company is entitled to be re-registered as an unlimited private company²¹.

182. Issue of certificate of re-registration as private unlimited company.

If, on an application for re-registration of a public company¹ as an unlimited private company², the registrar of companies³ is satisfied that the company is entitled to be so re-registered, the company must be re-registered accordingly⁴.

The registrar must issue a certificate of incorporation⁵ altered to meet the circumstances of the case⁶; and the certificate must state that it is issued on re-registration and it must state the date on which it is so issued⁷.

On the issue to a company of the certificate:

390 (1) the company, by virtue of the issue of that certificate, becomes an unlimited private company⁸; and

391 (2) the changes in the company's name and articles take effect⁹.

The certificate is conclusive evidence that the requirements of the Companies Act 2006¹⁰ as to re-registration¹¹ have been complied with¹².

(vii) Old Public Companies

183. Meaning and classification of 'old public company'.

An 'old public company' is a company¹ limited by shares² or by guarantee³ and having a share capital⁴ in respect of which the following conditions are satisfied⁵:

392 (1) the company either existed on 22 December 1980⁶ or was incorporated after that date pursuant to an application made before that date⁷;

393 (2) on that date or, if later, on the day of the company's incorporation, the company was not or (as the case may be) would not have been a private company within the Companies Act 1948⁸; and

394 (3) the company has not since that date or the day of the company's incorporation (as the case may be) either been re-registered as a public company⁹ or become¹⁰ a private company¹¹.

With some exceptions¹², references in the Companies Acts to a public company, or a company other than a private company, are to be read as including, unless the context otherwise requires, references to an old public company, and references to a private company are to be read accordingly¹³.

184. Re-registration of old public company as public company.

An old public company¹ may be re-registered as a public company² if³:

- 395 (1) the directors⁴ pass a resolution⁵ that it should be so re-registered⁶; and
- 396 (2) an application for the purpose in the prescribed form⁷ and signed by a director or secretary⁸ of the company is delivered to the registrar of companies⁹ together with the following documents¹⁰, namely: (a) a printed copy of the articles as altered in pursuance of the resolution¹¹; and (b) a statutory declaration¹² in the prescribed form¹³ by a director or secretary of the company that the resolution has been passed and that the necessary statutory conditions for re-registering¹⁴ were satisfied at the time of the resolution¹⁵; and

186. Old public company becoming private.

An old public company¹ may pass a special resolution not to be re-registered² as a public company³; and the provisions of the Companies Act 2006 which allow for shareholders, subject to certain conditions, to apply to the court for cancellation of such a resolution apply⁴ to the resolution as they would apply to a special resolution by a public company to be re-registered as private⁵. If either 28 days from the passing of the resolution elapse without such an application being made⁶, or if such an application is made and proceedings are concluded⁷ on the application without the court making an order for the cancellation of the resolution⁸, the registrar of companies must issue the company with a certificate stating that it is a private company; and the company then becomes a private company by virtue of the issue of the certificate⁹.

If an old public company delivers to the registrar of companies a statutory declaration¹⁰ in the prescribed form¹¹ by a director¹² or secretary¹³ of the company that the company does not at the time of the declaration satisfy the necessary statutory conditions¹⁴ for the company to be re-registered as public, the registrar must issue the company with a certificate stating that it is a private company; and the company then becomes a private company by virtue of the issue of the certificate¹⁵.

A certificate issued to a company in this way¹⁶ is conclusive evidence that the relevant statutory requirements have been complied with¹⁷ and that the company is a private company¹⁸.

187. Failure by old public company to obtain new classification.

If at any time a company which is an old public company¹ has not complied with the requirement to deliver to the registrar of companies² a declaration that the company does not satisfy the necessary statutory conditions for the company to be re-registered as a public company³, the company, and any officer of it who is in default⁴, is guilty of an offence⁵, unless at that time the company:

400 (1) has applied to be re-registered as a public company⁶ and the application has not been refused or withdrawn⁷; or

401 (2) has passed a special resolution not to be so re-registered⁸, and the resolution has not been revoked, and has not been cancelled⁹ by a court order¹⁰.

A person guilty of such an offence¹¹ is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding one-fifth of the statutory maximum¹² or (on conviction after continued contravention) to a daily default fine¹³ not exceeding one-fiftieth of the statutory maximum for every day on which the requirement to deliver the declaration to the registrar of companies is contravened¹⁴.

188. Shares of old public company held by or charged to itself.

Notwithstanding the general provision¹ that references in the Companies Acts² to a public company³ or a company other than a private company⁴ are to be read as including an old public company⁵, references to a public company in those provisions of the Companies Act 2006 which relate to the treatment of a company's shares⁶ when acquired by itself⁷ do not include an old public company; and references in those provisions to a private company are to be read accordingly⁸.

In the case of a company which after 22 March 1982⁹ remained an old public company and did not before that date apply to be re-registered under the then statutory provisions¹⁰ as a public company, any charge on its own shares¹¹ which was in existence on or immediately before that date is a permitted charge for the purposes of those provisions of the Companies Act 2006 dealing with the maintenance of capital¹², and accordingly not void under the general provisions to that effect¹³.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(4) RE-REGISTRATION AND ITS EFFECTS/(viii) Existing Company becoming a Community Interest Company/191. Existing companies becoming a community interest company.

(viii) Existing Company becoming a Community Interest Company

191. Existing companies becoming a community interest company.

If a company is to become a community interest company¹:

- 405 (1) the company must by special resolution²: (a) state that it is to be a community interest company³; (b) make such alterations of its articles of association⁴ as it considers necessary to comply with the statutory requirements⁵ or otherwise appropriate in connection with becoming a community interest company⁶; and (c) change its name to comply with the statutory requirements⁷;
- 406 (2) the following specified conditions must be met⁸, namely that: (a) where no application⁹ for cancellation of the special resolutions has been made, having regard to the number of members who consented to or voted in favour of the resolutions, no such application may be made¹⁰, or the period within which such an application could be made has expired¹¹; or (b) where such an application has been made, the application has been withdrawn¹², or an order has been made confirming the resolutions and a copy of that order has been delivered to the registrar of companies¹³; and

- 407 (3) an application must be delivered to the registrar of companies¹⁴ together with the other documents that are so required¹⁵.

The statutory duty to forward to the registrar of companies copies of resolutions that affect the company's constitution¹⁶ applies to the special resolutions¹⁷.

Where special resolutions have been passed with a view to the company becoming a community interest company, an application to the court for the cancellation of the resolutions may be made¹⁸:

- 408 (i) by the holders of not less in the aggregate than 15 per cent in nominal value of the company's issued share capital¹⁹ or any class of the company's issued share capital²⁰ (disregarding any shares held by the company as treasury shares)²¹;
- 409 (ii) if the company is not limited by shares²², by not less than 15 per cent of its members²³; or

but not by a person who has consented to or voted in favour of the resolutions²⁶. The application must be made within 28 days after the date on which the resolutions are passed or made (or, if the resolutions are passed or made on different days, the date on which the last of them is passed or made)²⁷, and they may be made on behalf of the persons entitled to make it by such one or more of their number as they may appoint for the purpose²⁸. On the hearing of the application, the court must make an order either cancelling or confirming the resolutions²⁹. The court may make that order on such terms and conditions as it thinks fit³⁰; if it thinks fit, the court may adjourn the proceedings in order that an arrangement may be made to the satisfaction of the court for the purchase of the interests of dissentient members³¹; and the court may give such directions, and make such orders, as it thinks expedient for facilitating or carrying into effect any such arrangement³². The court's order may, if the court thinks fit, provide for the purchase by the company of the shares of any of its members and for the reduction accordingly of the company's capital³³, and make such alteration in the company's articles as may be required in consequence of that provision³⁴. The court's order may, if the court thinks fit, require the company not to make any, or any specified, amendments to its articles without the leave of the court³⁵.

An application to become a community interest company must be accompanied by a copy of the special resolutions³⁶, by a copy of the company's articles as proposed to be amended³⁷, and by the prescribed conversion documents³⁸.

On receiving an application to become a community interest company together with the other documents required to accompany it, the registrar of companies must, instead of recording the documents and entering a new name on the register³⁹, forward a copy of each of the documents to the Regulator⁴⁰, and retain the documents pending the Regulator's decision⁴¹.

The Regulator must decide whether the company is eligible to become a community interest company⁴². A company is eligible to become a community interest company if:

- 411 (A) its articles (as proposed to be amended) comply with the statutory requirements⁴³;
- 412 (B) its proposed name complies with the statutory requirements⁴⁴; and
- 413 (C) the Regulator, having regard to the application and accompanying documents and any other relevant considerations, considers that the company will satisfy the community interest test and is not an excluded company⁴⁵.

The Regulator must give notice of the decision to the registrar of companies, but the registrar is not required to record it⁴⁶.

If the Regulator decides that the company is eligible to be formed as a community interest company, the registrar of companies must proceed in accordance with the statutory requirements which govern registration on a change of name and the issue of a new certificate of incorporation⁴⁷; and, if the registrar enters the new name of the company on the register, he must also retain and record the application to become a community interest company together with the other documents required to accompany it⁴⁸. The new certificate of incorporation must state that it is issued on the company's conversion to a community interest company⁴⁹, must state the date on which it is issued⁵⁰, and must state that the company is a community interest company⁵¹. On the issue of the certificate, the company by virtue of the issue of the certificate becomes a community interest company⁵², and the changes in the company's name and articles take effect⁵³. The certificate is conclusive evidence that the company is a community interest company⁵⁴.

If the Regulator decides that the company is not eligible to become a community interest company, the company may appeal to the Appeal Officer⁵⁵ against the decision⁵⁶.

If a company that is an English charity becomes a community interest company, that does not affect the application of any property acquired under any disposition or agreement previously made otherwise than for full consideration in money or money's worth, or any property representing property so acquired, or the application of any property representing income which has previously accrued, or the application of the income from any such property⁵⁷.

17 Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 s 37(3) (as substituted: see note 2). The Companies Act 2006 s 30 (see PARA 231) applies to the special resolutions as follows: (1) s 30 is complied with by forwarding copies of the resolutions together with the application in accordance with the Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 s 37C (see the text and notes 36-41) (s 37(3)(a) (as so substituted)); (2) copies of the resolutions must not be so forwarded before the relevant date (s 37(3)(b) (as so substituted)); and (3) the Companies Act 2006 s 30(1) (see PARA 231) has effect in relation to the resolutions as if it referred to 15 days after the relevant date (Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 s 37(3)(c) (as so substituted)). For these purposes, the relevant date is: (a) if an application is made under s 37A (see the text and notes 18-35) for cancellation of the special resolutions, either the date on which the court determines the application (or if there is more than one application, the date on which the last to be determined by the court is determined), or such later date as the court may order (s 37(4) (a) (as so substituted)); (b) if there is no such application, either, if having regard to the number of members who consented to or voted in favour of the resolutions, no such application may be made, the date on which the resolutions were passed or made (or, if the resolutions were passed or made on different days, the date on which the last of them was passed or made) or, in any other case, the end of the period for making such an application (s 37(4)(b) (as so substituted)).

18 Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 s 37A(1) (ss 37A-37C added by SI 2009/1941). On making an application under the Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 s 37A the applicants, or the person making the application on their behalf (see the text and notes 27-28), must immediately give notice to the registrar of companies: s 37B(1) (as so added). This is without prejudice to any provision of rules of court as to service of notice of the application: s 37B(1) (as so added). On being served with notice of any such application, the company must immediately give notice to the registrar: s 37B(2) (as so added). If a company fails to comply with s 37B(2), an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer of the company who is in default: s 37B(4) (as so added). A person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale and (for continued contravention) a daily default fine not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale: s 37B(5) (as so added). As to the meaning of 'officer who is in default' see PARA 315; and as to the meaning of 'officer' generally see PARA 607. Within 15 days of the making of the court's order on the application, or such longer period as the court may at any time direct, the company must deliver to the registrar a copy of the order: s 37B(3) (as so added). If a company fails to comply with s 37B(3), an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer of the company who is in default: s 37B(4) (as so added). A person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale and (for continued contravention) a daily default fine not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale: s 37B(5) (as so added).

192. Limitations on re-registration of community interest company.

A community interest company¹ is excluded from re-registering² as an unlimited company³.

If a community interest company which is not a public company⁴ re-registers as a public company⁵, or if a community interest company which is a public company re-registers as a private company⁶, the certificate of incorporation issued in each case⁷ must contain a statement that the company is a community interest company⁸. The fact that the certificate of incorporation contains such a statement is conclusive evidence that the company is a community interest company⁹.

193. Ceasing to be a community interest company.

A community interest company¹ may not cease to be a community interest company except by dissolution² or by virtue of the provisions which allow for such a company to become a charity³ or (if regulations are so made⁴) by virtue of regulations that allow for such a company to become an industrial and provident society⁵.

For these purposes, 'charity' means an English charity: Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 s 63(1) (definition substituted by SI 2007/1093). COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(4) RE-REGISTRATION AND ITS EFFECTS/(ix) Changes of Status affecting Community Interest Companies/194. Community interest company becoming a charity.

194. Community interest company becoming a charity.

If a company is to cease being a community interest company¹ and become a charity²:

- 414 (1) the company must by special resolution³: (a) state that it is to cease to be a community interest company⁴; (b) make such alterations of its articles of association⁵ as it considers appropriate⁶; and (c) change its name so that it does not comply with the statutory requirements that govern the names that are reserved for community interest companies⁷;
- 415 (2) the following specified conditions must be met⁸, namely that: (a) where no application⁹ for cancellation of the special resolutions has been made, having regard to the number of members who consented to or voted in favour of the resolutions, no such application may be made¹⁰, or the period within which such an application could be made has expired¹¹; or (b) where such an application has been made, the application has been withdrawn¹², or an order has been made confirming the resolutions and a copy of that order has been delivered to the registrar of companies¹³; and
- 416 (3) an application must be delivered to the registrar of companies¹⁴ together with the other documents that are so required¹⁵.

The statutory duty to forward to the registrar of companies copies of resolutions that affect the company's constitution¹⁶ applies to the special resolutions¹⁷.

Where special resolutions have been passed with a view to a company ceasing to be a community interest company and becoming a charity, an application to the court for the cancellation of the resolutions may be made¹⁸:

- 417 (i) by the holders of not less in the aggregate than 15 per cent in nominal value of the company's issued share capital¹⁹ or any class of the company's issued share capital²⁰ (disregarding any shares held by the company as treasury shares)²¹;
- 418 (ii) if the company is not limited by shares²², by not less than 15 per cent of its members²³; or

but not by a person who has consented to or voted in favour of the resolutions²⁶. The application must be made within 28 days after the date on which the resolutions were passed or made (or, if the resolutions were passed or made on different days, the date on which the last of them was passed or made)²⁷, and they may be made on behalf of the persons entitled to make it by such one or more of their number as they may appoint for the purpose²⁸. On the hearing of the application, the court must make an order either cancelling or confirming the resolutions²⁹. The court may make that order on such terms and conditions as it thinks fit³⁰; if it thinks fit, the court may adjourn the proceedings in order that an arrangement may be made to the satisfaction of the court for the purchase of the interests of dissentient members³¹; and the court may give such directions, and make such orders, as it thinks expedient for facilitating or carrying into effect any such arrangement³². The court's order may, if the court thinks fit, provide for the purchase by the company of the shares of any of its members and for the reduction accordingly of the company's capital³³, and make such alteration in the company's articles as may be required in consequence of that provision³⁴. The court's order may, if the court thinks fit, require the company not to make any, or any specified, amendments to its articles without the leave of the court³⁵.

An application to cease to be a community interest company and become a charity must be accompanied by a copy of the special resolutions³⁶, by a copy of the company's articles as proposed to be amended³⁷, and by the statement that is required³⁸.

On receiving an application to cease to be a community interest company and become a charity, together with the other documents required to accompany it, the registrar of companies must, instead of recording the documents and entering a new name on the register³⁹, forward a copy of each of the documents to the Regulator⁴⁰, and retain the documents pending the Regulator's decision⁴¹.

The Regulator must decide whether the company is eligible to cease being a community interest company⁴². A company is eligible to cease being a community interest company if it has complied with the provisions above that govern such an application⁴³ and if none of the following applies⁴⁴, namely:

- 420 (A) the Regulator has⁴⁵ appointed an auditor to audit the company's annual accounts and the audit has not been completed⁴⁶;
- 421 (B) civil proceedings instituted by the Regulator in the name of the company⁴⁷ have not been either determined or discontinued⁴⁸;
- 422 (C) a director of the company holds office by virtue of an order⁴⁹ of the Regulator appointing him as a director of the company⁵⁰;
- 423 (D) a director of the company is suspended⁵¹ by order of the Regulator pending a decision whether to remove him as director⁵²;
- 424 (E) there is a manager in respect of the property and affairs of the company appointed⁵³ by order of the Regulator⁵⁴;
- 425 (F) the Official Property Holder⁵⁵ holds property as trustee for the company⁵⁶;
- 426 (G) the Regulator has ordered⁵⁷ a person who holds property on behalf of a community interest company (or on behalf of a trustee of a community interest company) not to part with the property without the Regulator's consent, and ordered any debtor of a community interest company not to make any payment in respect of the debtor's liability to the company without the Regulator's consent, and that order is still in force in relation to the company⁵⁸;
- 427 (H) the Regulator has by order⁵⁹ restricted the transactions which may be entered into by a community interest company, or the nature or amount of the payments that a community interest company may make, and that order is still in force in relation to the company⁶⁰;
- 428 (I) a petition has been presented for the company to be wound up⁶¹.

The Regulator must give notice of the decision to the registrar of companies, but the registrar is not required to record it⁶².

If the Regulator decides that the company is eligible to cease being a community interest company, the registrar of companies must proceed in accordance with the statutory requirements which govern registration on a change of name and the issue of a new certificate of incorporation⁶³; and, if the registrar enters the new name of the company on the register, he must also retain and record the application to become a community interest company together with the other documents that are required to accompany it⁶⁴. The new certificate of incorporation must state that it is issued on the company's ceasing to be a community interest company⁶⁵, and it must state the date on which it is issued⁶⁶. On the issue of the certificate, the changes in the company's name and articles take effect⁶⁷, and the company ceases to be a community interest company⁶⁸.

If the Regulator decides that the company is not eligible to cease being a community interest company, the company may appeal to the Appeal Officer⁶⁹ against the decision⁷⁰.

17 Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 s 54(3) (as substituted: see note 2). The Companies Act 2006 s 30 (see PARA 231) applies to the special resolutions as follows: (1) s 30 is complied with by forwarding copies of the resolutions together with the application in accordance with the Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 s 54C (see the text and notes 36-41) (s 54(3)(a) (as so substituted)); (2) copies of the resolutions must not be so forwarded before the relevant date (s 54(3)(b) (as so substituted)); and (3) the Companies Act 2006 s 30(1) (see PARA 231) has effect in relation to the resolutions as if it referred to 15 days after the relevant date (Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 s 54(3)(c) (as so substituted)). For these purposes, the relevant date is: (a) if an application is made under s 54A (see the text and notes 18-35) for cancellation of the special resolutions, either the date on which the court determines the application (or if there is more than one application, the date on which the last to be determined by the court is determined), or such later date as the court may order (s 54(4) (a) (as so substituted)); (b) if there is no such application, either, if having regard to the number of members who consented to or voted in favour of the resolutions, no such application may be made, the date on which the resolutions were passed or made (or, if the resolutions were passed or made on different days, the date on which the last of them was passed or made) or, in any other case, the end of the period for making such an application (s 54(4)(b) (as so substituted)).

18 Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 s 54A(1) (ss 54A-54C added by SI 2009/1941). On making an application under the Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 s 54A, the applicants, or the person making the application on their behalf (see the text and notes 27-28), must immediately give notice to the registrar of companies: s 54B(1) (as so added). This is without prejudice to any provision of rules of court as to service of notice of the application: s 54B(1) (as so added). On being served with notice of any such application, the company must immediately give notice to the registrar: s 54B(2) (as so added). If a company fails to comply with s 54B(2), an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer of the company who is in default: s 54B(4) (as so added). A person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale and (for continued contravention) a daily default fine not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale: s 54B(5) (as so added). COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(4) RE-REGISTRATION AND ITS EFFECTS/(ix) Changes of Status affecting Community Interest Companies/195. Community interest company becoming an industrial and provident society.

195. Community interest company becoming an industrial and provident society.

Unless regulations made under the Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004¹ make provision to the contrary², a community interest company³ may not convert itself into a registered society under the Industrial and Provident Societies Act 1965⁴. However, if regulations do make such provision⁵ they may include provision modifying the relevant provisions of the Industrial and Provident Societies Act 1965⁶ in its application by virtue of the regulations⁷.

Accordingly⁸, a community interest company may convert itself into a permitted industrial and provident society⁹ and, for these purposes, the relevant provisions of the Industrial and Provident Societies Act 1965¹⁰ apply to community interest companies with such modifications as are specified under the regulations so made¹¹.

1 As to the making of regulations under the Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 generally see s 62 (amended by SI 2009/1941).

2 See the text and notes 8-11.

3 As to community interest companies see PARA 82.

4 Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 s 56(1) (amended by SI 2007/1093). The text refers to conversion into a registered society under the Industrial and Provident Societies Act 1965 s 53 (resolution for conversion of company into society) (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 50 (2008) PARA 2417): see the Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 s 56(1) (as so amended). As to industrial and provident societies generally see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 50 (2008) PARA 2394 et seq.

9 For these purposes, 'permitted industrial and provident society' means an industrial and provident society which has a restriction on the use of its assets in accordance with the Community Benefit Societies (Restriction on Use of Assets) Regulations 2006, SI 2006/264, reg 4 (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 50 (2008) PARA 2402): see the Community Interest Company Regulations 2005, SI 2005/1788, reg 2 (definition added by SI 2009/1942).

11 See the Community Interest Company Regulations 2005, SI 2005/1788, reg 6A (as added: see note 8). The regulations referred to in the text are the Community Interest Company Regulations 2005, SI 2005/1788, as they have been amended by SI 2009/1942, made under the Companies (Audit, Investigations and Community Enterprise) Act 2004 s 56 (amongst other provisions).

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(5) COMPANY AND BUSINESS NAMES/(i) General Requirements as to Company Name/196. Prohibition or restriction on registration under certain names.

(5) COMPANY AND BUSINESS NAMES

(i) General Requirements as to Company Name

196. Prohibition or restriction on registration under certain names.

A company¹ must not be registered under the Companies Act 2006² by a name³ if, in the opinion of the Secretary of State⁴, its use by the company would constitute a criminal offence⁵, or it is offensive⁶.

The approval of the Secretary of State⁷ is required for a company to be registered under the Companies Act 2006 by a name that:

- 429 (1) would be likely to give the impression that the company is connected with Her Majesty's government or the Welsh Assembly Government⁸, or with a local authority⁹, or with any public authority¹⁰ that is specified for these purposes¹¹ by regulations made by the Secretary of State¹²; or
- 430 (2) includes a word or expression for the time being specified in regulations made by the Secretary of State for these purposes¹³.

The Secretary of State may by regulations made under head (1) or under head (2) above require that, in connection with an application for the approval of the Secretary of State¹⁴, the applicant must seek the view of a specified¹⁵ government department or other body¹⁶. Where such a requirement applies, the applicant must request the specified department or other body (in writing) to indicate whether (and if so why) it has any objections to the proposed name¹⁷. Where such a request is made in connection with an application for the registration of a company under the Companies Act 2006, the application must include a statement that such a request has been made¹⁸ and must be accompanied by a copy of any response received¹⁹. Where such a request is made in connection with a change in a company's name²⁰, the notice of the change sent to the registrar of companies²¹ must be accompanied by a statement by a director²² or secretary²³ of the company that such a request has been made²⁴, and a copy of any response received²⁵.

1 As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

2 As to company registration under the Companies Act 2006 see PARA 111 et seq. As to companies registered but not formed under the Companies Act 2006, and as to overseas companies, see PARA 32.

3 As to the company name generally see PARA 200 et seq. As to the registered name of an overseas company see PARA 1827.

4 Companies Act 2006 s 53. As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6.

5 Companies Act 2006 s 53(a).

6 Companies Act 2006 s 53(b).

7 Before determining under the Companies Act 2006 s 55 (see head (2) in the text) whether to approve the registration of a company under a name which includes the expression 'chamber of commerce' or 'siambr fasnach', or any other expression for the time being specified in regulations under s 55 which begins with the words 'chamber of' or 'chambers of' (or the Welsh equivalents), the Secretary of State must consult at least one relevant representative body: Company and Business Names (Chamber of Commerce, etc) Act 1999 s 2(1) (amended by SI 2009/1941). The Secretary of State may publish guidance with respect to factors which may be taken into account in determining whether to approve the registration of a name to which the Company and Business Names (Chamber of Commerce, etc) Act 1999 s 2 applies: s 2(2). The relevant representative bodies for these purposes are the British Chambers of Commerce and the body known as the Scottish Chambers of Commerce (see s 4(1)); but the Secretary of State may by order made by statutory instrument amend s 4(1) by adding or deleting from it the name of any body (whether corporate or unincorporated) (see s 4(2), (3)). At the date at which this volume states the law, no such order had been made.

The functions conferred on the Secretary of State by the Companies Act 2006 s 54 and s 55 (both formerly the Companies Act 1985 s 26(2)) may be exercised by, or by employees of, such person (if any) as may be authorised in that behalf by the Secretary of State: see the Contracting Out (Functions in relation to the Registration of Companies) Order 1995, SI 1995/1013, art 5, Sch 3 para 1(a); and the Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b); and PARA 8.

8 Companies Act 2006 s 54(1)(a) (amended as from 6 November 2009 by SI 2009/2958). This provision also applies to a name that would be likely to give the impression that the company is connected with any part of the Scottish administration or Her Majesty's Government in Northern Ireland: see the Companies Act 2006 s 54(1)(a) (as so amended).

9 Companies Act 2006 s 54(1)(b). For these purposes, 'local authority' means a local authority within the meaning of the Local Government Act 1972 (see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 29(1) (Reissue) PARA 24) (or a council constituted under the Local Government etc (Scotland) Act 1994 s 2 or a district council in Northern Ireland), the Common Council of the City of London or the Council of the Isles of Scilly: Companies Act 2006 s 54(2). As to the Common Council of the City of London see LONDON GOVERNMENT vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 51 et seq. As to the Council of the Isles of Scilly see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 29(1) (Reissue) PARA 40.

10 For these purposes, 'public authority' includes any person or body having functions of a public nature: Companies Act 2006 s 54(2). As to public bodies and public authorities generally see ADMINISTRATIVE LAW vol 1(1) (2001 Reissue) PARA 6 et seq.

11 Ie for the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 s 54: see s 54(1)(c).

12 Companies Act 2006 s 54(1)(c). Regulations made under s 54 are subject to affirmative resolution procedure (ie the regulations must not be made unless a draft of the statutory instrument containing them has been laid before Parliament and approved by a resolution of each House of Parliament): see ss 54(3), 1290. As to the making of regulations under the Companies Act 2006 generally see ss 1288-1292. As to the regulations that have been made under s 54 see the Company, Limited Liability Partnership and Business Names (Public Authorities) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2982.

13 Companies Act 2006 s 55(1). Head (2) in the text refers to regulations made by the Secretary of State under s 55: see s 55(1). Such regulations are subject to approval after being made: s 55(2). Regulations under the Companies Act 2006 that are subject to 'approval after being made' must be laid before Parliament after being made, and they must cease to have effect at the end of 28 days beginning with the day on which they were made unless during that period they are approved by resolution of each House: s 1291(1). In reckoning the period of 28 days, no account is to be taken of any time during which Parliament is dissolved or prorogued or during which both Houses are adjourned for more than four days: s 1291(2). The regulations ceasing to have effect does not affect anything previously done under them or it, or the making of new regulations: s 1291(3). It is the duty of the Secretary of State to secure that the expression 'chamber of commerce' and its Welsh equivalent ('siambr fasnach') is specified in regulations under s 55 (company names requiring approval of Secretary of State), as an expression for the registration of which as or as part of a company's name the approval of the Secretary of State is required: Company and Business Names (Chamber of Commerce, etc) Act 1999 s 1 (amended by SI 2009/1941). Accordingly, as to the words and expressions that are specified for the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 s 55(1) see the Company, Limited Liability Partnership and Business Names (Sensitive Words and Expressions) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2615, regs 3, 4, Sch 1 Pts 1, 2.

14 Ie under the Companies Act 2006 s 54 (see head (1) in the text) or under s 55 (see head (2) in the text), as the case may be: see s 56(1).

15 For these purposes, 'specified' means specified in the regulations: Companies Act 2006 s 56(5). Accordingly, in connection with applications for Secretary of State approval where the situation of the registered office or principal place of business is irrelevant, see the Company, Limited Liability Partnership and Business Names (Sensitive Words and Expressions) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2615, reg 5, Sch 2 Pt 1; and as to applications where the situation of the registered office or principal place of business is relevant see reg 6, Sch 2 Pt 2.

23 As to the company secretary and other officers see PARA 603.

24 Companies Act 2006 s 56(4)(a).

25 Companies Act 2006 s 56(4)(b). The contents of any document sent to the registrar containing views expressed pursuant to s 56 must not be made available by him for public inspection: see s 1087; and PARA 150.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(5) COMPANY AND BUSINESS NAMES/(i) General Requirements as to Company Name/197. Permitted characters etc in company names.

197. Permitted characters etc in company names.

The Secretary of State¹ may make provision by regulations²: (1) as to the letters or other characters, signs or symbols (including accents and other diacritical marks) and punctuation that may be used in the name of a company³ registered under the Companies Act 2006⁴; and (2) specifying a standard style or format for the name of a company for the purposes of registration⁵. The regulations may prohibit the use of specified⁶ characters, signs or symbols when appearing in a specified position (in particular, at the beginning of a name)⁷. A company may not be registered under the Companies Act 2006 by a name that consists of or includes anything that is not permitted in accordance with such regulations⁸.

1 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6 et seq.

2 Companies Act 2006 s 57(1). As to the making of regulations under the Companies Act 2006 generally see ss 1288-1292. Regulations under s 57 are subject to negative resolution procedure (ie the statutory instrument containing the regulations is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament): see ss 57(4), 1289. As to the regulations so made see the Company and Business Names (Miscellaneous Provisions) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1085; and notes 4, 7, 8.

3 As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

4 Companies Act 2006 s 57(1)(a). Accordingly, the characters, signs, symbols and punctuation that may be used in any part of the name of a company registered under the Companies Act 2006 (the 'permitted characters') are:

84 (1) any character, sign or symbol set out in the Company and Business Names (Miscellaneous Provisions) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1085, reg 2, Sch 1 Table 1 (reg 2(1),(2)(a));

85 (2) 0, 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 or 9 (reg 2(1),(2)(b));

86 (3) full stop, comma, colon, semi-colon or hyphen (reg 2(1),(2)(c)); and

87 (4) any other punctuation referred to in Sch 1 Table 2 column 1 but only in one of the forms set out opposite that punctuation in Sch 1 Table 2 column 2 (reg 2(1),(2)(d)).

As to company registration under the Companies Act 2006 see PARA 111 et seq. As to companies registered but not formed under the Companies Act 2006, and as to overseas companies, see PARA 32.

5 Companies Act 2006 s 57(1)(b).

6 For these purposes, 'specified' means specified in the regulations: Companies Act 2006 s 57(5).

7 Companies Act 2006 s 57(2). Accordingly, the signs and symbols set out in the Company and Business Names (Miscellaneous Provisions) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1085, Sch 1 Table 3 are permitted characters that may be used but not as one of the first three permitted characters of the name: reg 2(1),(3).

8 Companies Act 2006 s 57(3). The name must not consist of more than 160 permitted characters: Company and Business Names (Miscellaneous Provisions) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1085, reg 2(1), (4). For the purposes of computing the number of permitted characters in reg 2(4), any blank space between one permitted character and another in the name is to be counted as though it was a permitted character: reg 1(3).

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(5) COMPANY AND BUSINESS NAMES/(i) General Requirements as to Company Name/198. Other restrictions on names.

198. Other restrictions on names.

A company¹ may not carry on business² with a name containing the words 'Red Cross', 'Geneva Cross', 'Red Crescent' or 'Red Lion and Sun' without the authority of the Secretary of State³; nor a name closely resembling the name of an association incorporated by royal charter, which has its name protected⁴ by Order in Council, without the authority of the association⁵; nor a name containing the word 'Anzac' or any word closely resembling that word without the authority of the Secretary of State given on the request of the government of the Commonwealth of Australia or of the Dominion of New Zealand⁶. In all these cases, the registrar of companies⁷ will refuse to register⁸ a company unless the relevant authority is produced.

If a company carries on business under a business name which does not consist of its corporate name without any addition, it must comply with the relevant requirements of the Companies Act 2006 which govern business names⁹.

The words 'limited' or 'cyfyngedig' may be lawfully used as the last word of a trading name only by a company incorporated with limited liability¹⁰. However, there is on the one hand no necessity to use the word 'company' as part of the company's name, nor on the other is there any restriction on its use. Subject to the restrictions mentioned elsewhere¹¹, the subscribers of the memorandum may choose any name they please¹².

In certain circumstances, a director¹³ or shadow director¹⁴ of a company may be personally debarred from using the name of that company if it has gone into insolvent liquidation on or after 29 December 1986, or any name so similar as to suggest an association with that company¹⁵.

199. Name consisting of trade mark.

Where a registered trade mark¹ contains, or consists of, the name of a company², and the name of the company is subsequently changed, application should be made to the Registrar of Trade Marks³ to enter the change of name in the register of trade marks⁴.

Where the registered proprietors of a mark transfer their business to a company under the same name with the addition of the word 'limited', that word will be allowed to be added to the mark⁵, but the word 'limited' must not be abbreviated⁶.

A company which has carried on business under another name is entitled to protection for the latter as a trade name, although it has not complied with the statutory requirements⁷ as to the use of its name⁸.

(ii) Indications of Company Type or Legal Form

A. PUBLIC AND PRIVATE LIMITED COMPANIES GENERALLY

200. Required indications for limited companies.

Any application for company registration¹ must state the proposed name of the company².

The name of a limited company³ that is a public company⁴ must end with the words 'public limited company' or 'plc'⁵. In the case of a Welsh company⁶, its name may instead end with 'cwmni cyfyngedig cyhoeddus' or 'ccc'⁷.

The name of a limited company that is a private company⁸ must end with 'limited' or 'ltd'⁹, although, in the case of a Welsh company, its name may instead end with 'cyfyngedig' or 'cyf'¹⁰. Certain private companies are exempt from this requirement¹¹.

Separate provision is made in relation to community interest companies¹².

Under the provisions that govern reductions made in a company's share capital¹³, the court may, if for any special reason it thinks proper to do so, make an order directing that the company must, during such period (commencing on or at any time after the date of the order) as is specified in the order, add to its name as its last words the words 'and reduced'¹⁴.

Exemption from requirement to use 'limited' as part of name.

B. EXEMPTION FROM REQUIREMENT TO USE 'LIMITED'

201. Exemption from requirement to use 'limited' as part of name.

A private company¹ is exempt from the requirement to have its name end with the word 'limited' (or one of the permitted alternatives)² if:

- 431 (1) it is a charity³;
- 432 (2) it is exempted from the requirement⁴ by regulations made by the Secretary of State⁵; or
- 433 (3) it meets the conditions specified to allow either a private company limited by shares⁶, or a private company limited by guarantee⁷, as the case may be, to continue an existing exemption⁸.

Further to head (3) above, a private company limited by shares that on 25 February 1982⁹ was registered in Great Britain¹⁰, and had a name that, by virtue of a licence under the Companies Act 1948¹¹ (or corresponding earlier legislation¹²), did not include the word 'limited' or any of the permitted alternatives¹³, is exempt from the requirement to have a name ending with 'limited' (or a permitted alternative)¹⁴ so long as it does not change its name¹⁵, and so long as it continues to meet the following two conditions¹⁶, namely: (a) that the objects of the company are the promotion of commerce, art, science, education, religion, charity or any profession, and anything incidental or conducive to any of those objects¹⁷; and (b) that the company's articles¹⁸ require its income to be applied in promoting its objects¹⁹, prohibit the payment of dividends, or any return of capital, to its members²⁰, and require all the assets that would otherwise be available to its members generally to be transferred on its winding up²¹ either to another body with objects similar to its own²², or to another body the objects of which are the promotion of charity and anything incidental or conducive thereto²³, whether or not the body is a member of the company²⁴.

Also further to head (3) above, a private company limited by guarantee that immediately before 1 October 2009²⁵ was exempt²⁶ from the requirement to have a name including the word 'limited' (or a permitted alternative)²⁷, and had a name that did not include the word 'limited' (or any of the permitted alternatives)²⁸, is exempt from the requirement to have a name ending with 'limited' (or a permitted alternative)²⁹ so long as it does not change its name, and so long as it continues to meet the following two conditions³⁰, namely: (i) that the objects of the company are the promotion of commerce, art, science, education, religion, charity or any profession, and anything incidental or conducive to any of those objects³¹; and (ii) that the company's articles require its income to be applied in promoting its objects³², prohibit the payment of dividends to its members³³, and require all the assets that would otherwise be available to its members generally to be transferred on its winding up³⁴ either to another body with objects similar to its own³⁵, or to another body the objects of which are the promotion of charity and anything incidental or conducive thereto³⁶, whether or not the body is a member of the company³⁷.

The registrar of companies³⁸ may refuse to register a private limited company by a name that does not include the word 'limited' (or a permitted alternative) unless a statement has been delivered to him that the company meets the conditions for exemption³⁹. The registrar may accept the statement as sufficient evidence of the matters stated in it⁴⁰.

The Financial Services Authority⁴¹ continues to be exempt from the requirements of the Companies Acts relating to the use of 'limited' as part of its name⁴².

As to the regulations so made under s 60 see the Company and Business Names (Miscellaneous Provisions) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1085. Accordingly, a private company limited by guarantee is exempt from the requirement of the Companies Act 2006 s 59 (as to which see PARA 200) so long as it meets the following two conditions (Company and Business Names (Miscellaneous Provisions) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1085, reg 3(1)), namely:

88 (1) that the objects of that company are the promotion or regulation of commerce, art, science, education, religion, charity or any profession, and anything incidental or conducive to any of those objects (reg 3(2));

89 (2) that the company's articles of association require its income to be applied in promoting its objects (reg 3(3)(a)); prohibit the payment of dividends, or any return of capital, to its members (reg 3(3)(b)); and require all the assets that would otherwise be available to its members generally to be transferred on its winding up either to another body with objects similar to its own, or to another body the objects of which are the promotion of charity and anything incidental or conducive thereto (whether or not the body is a member of the company) (reg 3(3)(c)).

202. Prohibition on alteration of articles which affect conditions for exemption.

A private company¹ that is exempt² from the requirement to use 'limited' (or a permitted alternative) as part of its name³, and whose name does not include 'limited' (or any of the permitted alternatives)⁴, must not amend its articles⁵ so that it ceases to comply with the required conditions for exemption⁶. If this prohibition is contravened, an offence is committed by the company and by every officer of the company who is in default⁷; and any person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale⁸ and (for continued contravention) to a daily default fine⁹ not exceeding one-tenth of level 5 on the standard scale¹⁰.

90 (1) a company was exempt by virtue of the Companies Act 1985 s 30 (repealed) from the requirement to have a name including the word 'limited' (or a permitted alternative) (Companies Act 2006 s 63(4)(a)); and

91 (2) the company's memorandum or articles contained provision preventing an alteration of them without the approval of either the Board of Trade (or any other department or Minister) or the Charity Commission (s 63(4)(b)), that provision, and any condition of any such licence as is mentioned in s 61(1)(a)(ii) (ie a licence under the Companies Act 1948 s 19 or corresponding earlier legislation) (see PARA 201) requiring such provision, ceases to have effect (Companies Act 2006 s 63(4)). D. INAPPROPRIATE USE OF INDICATIONS OF COMPANY TYPE OR LEGAL FORM

204. Inappropriate use in name of indications of company type or legal form.

The Secretary of State¹ may make provision by regulations² prohibiting the use in a company name³ of specified⁴ words, expressions or other indications⁵:

- 434 (1) that are associated with a particular type of company or form of organisation⁶; or
- 435 (2) that are similar to words, expressions or other indications associated with a particular type of company or form of organisation⁷.

The regulations may prohibit the use of words, expressions or other indications either in a specified part, or otherwise than in a specified part, of a company's name⁸, or in conjunction with (or otherwise than in conjunction with) such other words, expressions or indications as may be specified⁹.

A company must not be registered under the Companies Act 2006¹⁰ by a name that consists of or includes anything prohibited by such regulations¹¹.

Accordingly, a company must not be so registered by a name that includes:

- 436 (a) otherwise than at the end of the name, a specified expression or abbreviation of such an expression¹² (or any expression or abbreviation specified as similar)¹³;
- 437 (b) in any part of the name a specified expression or abbreviation¹⁴ (or any expression or abbreviation specified as similar) unless that company is a RTE company¹⁵;
- 438 (c) in any part of the name a specified expression or abbreviation¹⁶ (or any expression or abbreviation specified as similar) unless that company is a RTM company¹⁷;
- 439 (d) in any part of the name a specified expression or abbreviation¹⁸ (or any expression or abbreviation specified as similar)¹⁹;
- 440 (e) immediately before a specified expression or abbreviation²⁰ any of the other specified abbreviations²¹ (or any abbreviation specified as similar)²².

A private company limited by guarantee²³ which is exempt from the requirement to have its name end with the word 'limited' (or one of the permitted alternatives)²⁴ must not be registered under the Companies Act 2006 by a name that concludes with any of the specified words²⁵ (or any word specified as similar)²⁶ or by a name that concludes with a specified expression or abbreviation of such an expression²⁷ (or any expression or abbreviation specified as similar)²⁸.

An unlimited company²⁹ must not be registered under the Companies Act 2006 by a name that concludes with a word or abbreviation specified for these purposes³⁰ (or any word or abbreviation specified as similar)³¹ or by a name that concludes with a specified expression or abbreviation of such an expression³² (or any expression or abbreviation specified as similar)³³.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(5) COMPANY AND BUSINESS NAMES/(iii) Procedure where Company Names are Similar/A. SIMILARITY TO OTHER NAME ON REGISTRAR'S INDEX/205. Name that is the same or similar to an existing name.

(iii) Procedure where Company Names are Similar

A. SIMILARITY TO OTHER NAME ON REGISTRAR'S INDEX

205. Name that is the same or similar to an existing name.

A company¹ must not be registered under the Companies Act 2006² by a name that is the same as another name appearing in the index of company names³ which is kept by the registrar of companies⁴.

The Secretary of State⁵ may make provision by regulations⁶ supplementing this prohibition⁷. Such regulations may make provision as to matters that are to be disregarded⁸, and as to words, expressions, signs or symbols that are, or are not, to be regarded as the same⁹, for these purposes¹⁰; and such regulations may provide:

- 441 (1) that registration by a name that would otherwise be so prohibited¹¹ is permitted either in specified circumstances¹², or with specified consent¹³; and
- 442 (2) that if those circumstances obtain or that consent is given at the time a company is registered by a name, a subsequent change of circumstances or withdrawal of consent does not affect the registration¹⁴.

Accordingly, a company may be registered under the Companies Act 2006 by a proposed same name¹⁵ if the following conditions are met¹⁶, namely:

- 443 (a) that the company or other body whose name already appears in the registrar's index of company names ('Body X') consents to the proposed same name being the name of a company ('Company Y')¹⁷;
- 444 (b) that Company Y forms, or is to form, part of the same group as Body X¹⁸; and
- 445 (c) that Company Y provides to the registrar a copy of a statement made by Body X indicating¹⁹: (i) the consent of Body X as referred to in head (a) above²⁰; and (ii) that Company Y forms, or is to form, part of the same group as Body X²¹.

The registrar may accept the statement referred to in head (c) above as sufficient evidence that the conditions referred to in head (a) and head (b) above have been met²².

If the written consent referred to in head (a) above is given by Body X, a subsequent withdrawal of that consent does not affect the registration of Company Y by that proposed same name²³.

8 Companies Act 2006 s 66(3)(a). For these purposes, the Company and Business Names (Miscellaneous Provisions) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1085, reg 7, Sch 3 has effect for setting out the matters to be disregarded: reg 7(a). For the purposes of computing the number of permitted characters in Sch 3 para 7, any blank space between one permitted character and another in the name is to be counted as though it was a permitted character: reg 1(3).

9 Companies Act 2006 s 66(3)(b). For these purposes, the Company and Business Names (Miscellaneous Provisions) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1085, Sch 3 has effect for setting out the words, expressions, signs and symbols that are to be regarded as the same: reg 7(b). See note 8.

18 Company and Business Names (Miscellaneous Provisions) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1085, reg 8(2)(b). For these purposes, 'group' means a parent undertaking and its subsidiary undertakings: Companies Act 2006 s 474(1); definition applied by the Company and Business Names (Miscellaneous Provisions) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1085, reg 8(6)(a). As to the meanings of 'parent undertaking' and 'subsidiary undertaking' in the Companies Acts see PARA 26.

19 Company and Business Names (Miscellaneous Provisions) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1085, reg 8(2)(c). If the proposed same name is to be taken by a company which has not yet been incorporated, the copy of such statement must be provided to the registrar instead by the person who delivers to the registrar the application for registration of the company (and the reference in reg 8(1) to the conditions in reg 8(2) must be read accordingly): reg 8(3).

B. SIMILARITY TO OTHER NAME IN WHICH PERSON HAS GOODWILL

(A) COMPANY NAMES ADJUDICATORS AND RULES OF PROCEDURE

206. Appointment of company names adjudicators.

The Secretary of State¹ must appoint persons to be company names adjudicators².

The persons appointed must have such legal or other experience as, in the Secretary of State's opinion, makes them suitable for appointment³.

An adjudicator:

- 446 (1) holds office in accordance with the terms of his appointment⁴;
- 447 (2) is eligible for re-appointment when his term of office ends⁵;
- 448 (3) may resign at any time by notice in writing given to the Secretary of State⁶;
- and
- 449 (4) may be dismissed by the Secretary of State on the ground of incapacity or misconduct⁷.

One of the adjudicators must be appointed Chief Adjudicator⁸, who performs such functions as the Secretary of State may assign to him⁹. The other adjudicators are to undertake such duties as the Chief Adjudicator may determine¹⁰.

The Secretary of State also may: (a) appoint staff for the adjudicators¹¹; (b) pay remuneration and expenses to the adjudicators and their staff¹²; (c) defray other costs arising in relation to the performance by the adjudicators of their functions¹³; (d) compensate persons for ceasing to be adjudicators¹⁴.

SIMILARITY TO OTHER NAME IN WHICH PERSON HAS GOODWILL/(A) Company Names Adjudicators and Rules of Procedure/207. Rules of procedure before company names adjudicator.

207. Rules of procedure before company names adjudicator.

The Secretary of State¹ may make rules² about proceedings before a company names adjudicator³. The rules may, in particular, make provision:

- 450 (1) as to how an application is to be made and the form and content of an application or other documents⁴;
- 451 (2) for fees to be charged⁵;
- 452 (3) about the service of documents and the consequences of failure to serve them⁶;
- 453 (4) as to the form and manner in which evidence is to be given⁷;
- 454 (5) for circumstances in which hearings are required and those in which they are not⁸;
- 455 (6) for cases to be heard by more than one adjudicator⁹;
- 456 (7) setting time limits for anything required to be done in connection with the proceedings (and allowing for such limits to be extended, even if they have expired)¹⁰;
- 457 (8) enabling the adjudicator to strike out an application, or any defence, in whole or in part, either on the ground that it is vexatious, has no reasonable prospect of

- success or is otherwise misconceived¹¹, or for failure to comply with the requirements of the rules¹²;
- 458 (9) conferring power to order security for costs¹³;
- 459 (10) as to how far proceedings are to be held in public¹⁴;
- 460 (11) requiring one party to bear the costs of another and as to assessing the amount of such costs¹⁵.

The rules may confer on the Chief Adjudicator¹⁶ power to determine any matter that could be the subject of provision in the rules¹⁷.

SIMILARITY TO OTHER NAME IN WHICH PERSON HAS GOODWILL/(B) Objection to Company's Registered Name/208. Application objecting to a company's registered name.

(B) OBJECTION TO COMPANY'S REGISTERED NAME

208. Application objecting to a company's registered name.

A person (the 'applicant') may object to a company's registered name¹ on the ground²:

- 461 (1) that it is the same as a name associated with the applicant in which he has goodwill³; or
- 462 (2) that it is sufficiently similar to such a name that its use in the United Kingdom⁴ would be likely to mislead by suggesting a connection between the company and the applicant⁵.

The objection must be made by application to a company names adjudicator⁶; and such an application must: (a) be made on the appropriate form⁷; (b) include a concise statement of the grounds on which the application is made⁸; (c) include an address for service in the United Kingdom⁹; and (d) be filed at the Office¹⁰.

The company concerned is the primary respondent to the application¹¹; but any of its members¹² or directors¹³ may be joined as respondents¹⁴.

The adjudicator must send a copy of the appropriate form to the primary respondent¹⁵; and he must specify a period within which the primary respondent must file its defence¹⁶. The primary respondent, before the end of that period, must file a counter-statement on the appropriate form¹⁷, otherwise the adjudicator may treat it as not opposing the application and may make an order¹⁸ as he would if an application were upheld¹⁹. In its counter-statement, the primary respondent must:

- 463 (i) include an address for service in the United Kingdom²⁰;
- 464 (ii) include a concise statement of the grounds on which it relies²¹;
- 465 (iii) state which of the allegations in the statement of grounds of the applicant it admits and which it denies²²; and
- 466 (iv) state which of the allegations it is unable to admit or deny, but which it requires the applicant to prove²³.

When the specified period²⁴ within which the primary respondent must file its defence has expired, the adjudicator must specify the periods within which evidence may be filed by the parties²⁵. All evidence must be accompanied by the appropriate form, and must be copied to all other parties in the proceedings²⁶. Where the applicant files no evidence in support of its application, the adjudicator may treat it as having withdrawn its application²⁷. The adjudicator also may strike out the application or any defence in whole or in part if it is vexatious, has no reasonable prospect of success or is otherwise misconceived²⁸.

7 Company Names Adjudicator Rules 2008, SI 2008/1738, r 3(1)(a). For these purposes, the 'appropriate form' means the form determined by the Chief Adjudicator in relation to a particular matter: r 1(2). The Chief Adjudicator has the power to determine the form and content of any form required to be used by the Company Names Adjudicator Rules 2008, SI 2008/1738: r 2(1). Where a form is so required to be used, that form must be accompanied by the fee, if any, specified in r 2(2), Schedule in respect of that matter: r 2(2). Accordingly, a fee of £400 is specified in respect of the form required by r 3(1): Schedule. As to the Chief Adjudicator see PARA 206.

9 Company Names Adjudicator Rules 2008, SI 2008/1738, r 3(1)(c). Where a person has provided an address for service in the United Kingdom under r 3, he may substitute a new address for service in the United Kingdom by notifying the adjudicator on the appropriate form: r 13(1). As to the appropriate form see note 7. Where the primary respondent has a registered office in the United Kingdom, the adjudicator may treat this as the address for service in the United Kingdom unless and until an alternative address is provided: r 13(2). As to a company's registered office see PARA 129.

10 Company Names Adjudicator Rules 2008, SI 2008/1738, r 3(1)(d). For these purposes, the 'Office' means the office of the company names adjudicator at the Intellectual Property Office, Concept House, Cardiff Road, Newport, South Wales NP10 8QQ: r 1(2). For the transaction of relevant business by the public under the Companies Act 2006, the Office must be open on Monday to Friday between 9 in the morning and midnight, and on Saturday between 9 in the morning and 1 in the afternoon, unless the day is an excluded day: Company Names Adjudicator Rules 2008, SI 2008/1738, r 14(1). For the transaction of all other business by the public under the Companies Act 2006, the Office must be open on Monday to Friday between 9 in the morning and 5 in the afternoon unless the day is an excluded day: Company Names Adjudicator Rules 2008, SI 2008/1738, r 14(2). The following are excluded days for the transaction of any business by the public under the Companies Act 2006: a Sunday; Good Friday; Christmas Day; a day which is specified or proclaimed to be a bank holiday by or under the Banking and Financial Dealings Act 1971 s 1 (see TIME vol 97 (2010) PARA 321); or a Saturday where the previous Friday and the following Monday are both excluded days: Company Names Adjudicator Rules 2008, SI 2008/1738, r 15(1). Any application or document received on an excluded day must be treated as having been filed on the next day on which the Office is open for relevant business: r 15(2). Where any period for filing any document ends on an excluded day that period must be extended to the next day on which the Office is open for relevant business: r 15(3). For the purposes of rr 14, 15 'relevant business' means the filing of any application or other document: r 14(3).

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(5) COMPANY AND BUSINESS NAMES/(iii) Procedure where Company Names are Similar/B. SIMILARITY TO OTHER NAME IN WHICH PERSON HAS GOODWILL/(C) Procedure, Decisions and Orders/209. Procedure in hearings before company names adjudicator.

(C) PROCEDURE, DECISIONS AND ORDERS

209. Procedure in hearings before company names adjudicator.

Any party to an application which has been made objecting to a company's registered name¹ may, by filing the appropriate form², request to be heard in person before a decision is made by the company names adjudicator³ under the Companies Act 2006 or under the company names adjudicator rules⁴. Following such a request, the adjudicator must decide whether a decision can be made without an oral hearing in circumstances where⁵:

- 467 (1) the primary respondent⁶ files no evidence⁷; or
- 468 (2) the applicant files no evidence in reply to the respondent's evidence⁸; or
- 469 (3) the decision will not terminate the proceedings⁹.

Where the adjudicator decides that a decision can be made without an oral hearing, the adjudicator will specify a period for the parties to submit written submissions before making a decision¹⁰. Where the adjudicator decides that a hearing is necessary, he must require the parties or their legal representatives to attend a hearing and he must give the parties at least 14 days' notice of the hearing¹¹.

At any stage of proceedings before him, the adjudicator may direct that the parties to the proceedings attend a case management conference or pre-hearing review¹². The adjudicator may give such directions as to the management of the proceedings as he thinks fit, and in particular he may¹³:

- 470 (a) direct a document to be filed or to be copied to a party to proceedings within a specified period¹⁴;
- 471 (b) allow for the electronic filing and sending of documents¹⁵;
- 472 (c) direct how documents filed or sent electronically are to be authenticated¹⁶;
- 473 (d) direct that a document shall not be available for public inspection¹⁷;
- 474 (e) require a translation of any document¹⁸;
- 475 (f) direct that a witness be cross-examined¹⁹;
- 476 (g) consolidate proceedings²⁰;
- 477 (h) direct that proceedings are to be heard by more than one adjudicator²¹;
- 478 (i) direct that part of any proceedings be dealt with as separate proceedings²²; or
- 479 (j) suspend or stay proceedings²³.

The adjudicator may control the evidence by giving directions as to the issues on which he requires evidence²⁴, the nature of the evidence which he requires to decide those issues²⁵, and the way in which the evidence is to be placed before him²⁶; and the adjudicator may use this power to exclude evidence which would otherwise be admissible²⁷. Subject to this rule, evidence that is filed²⁸ may be given by witness statement²⁹, affidavit³⁰ or statutory declaration³¹, or in any other form which would be admissible as evidence in proceedings before the court³². A witness statement may only be given in evidence if it includes a statement of truth³³, being, for these purposes, a statement that the person making the statement believes that the facts stated in a particular document are true³⁴. Such a statement must be dated and signed by the maker of the statement³⁵.

The adjudicator may extend (or further extend) any period which has been specified under the company names adjudicator rules³⁶ even if the period has expired³⁷; and any party can request an extension of any such time period³⁸. Any request for a retrospective extension must be filed before the end of the period of two months beginning with the date the time period in question expired³⁹.

Any hearing before the adjudicator of proceedings relating to an application⁴⁰ must be held in public⁴¹, although any party to the proceedings may apply to the adjudicator for the hearing to be held in private⁴². However, the adjudicator may only grant such an application⁴³ where it is in the interests of justice for the hearing to be in held in private⁴⁴, and where all the parties to the proceedings have had an opportunity to be heard on the matter⁴⁵. Where the application is granted, the hearing must be held in private⁴⁶.

All documents connected to proceedings are available for public inspection unless the adjudicator directs otherwise⁴⁷.

Any irregularity in procedure may be rectified on such terms as the adjudicator may direct⁴⁸.

The adjudicator may, at any stage in any proceedings before him under the Companies Act 2006, award to any party by order such costs as he considers reasonable, and direct how and by what parties they are to be paid⁴⁹. An application for security for costs must be made on the appropriate form⁵⁰. The adjudicator may require a person to give security for costs if he is satisfied, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, that it is just to require such security⁵¹.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(5) COMPANY AND BUSINESS NAMES/(iii) Procedure where Company Names are Similar/B. SIMILARITY TO OTHER NAME IN WHICH PERSON HAS GOODWILL/(C) Procedure, Decisions and Orders/210. Decisions in hearings before company names adjudicator.

210. Decisions in hearings before company names adjudicator.

If either ground upon which a person (the 'applicant') may object to a company's registered name¹, that is to say:

- 480 (1) that it is the same as a name associated with the applicant in which he has goodwill²; or
- 481 (2) that it is sufficiently similar to such a name that its use in the United Kingdom³ would be likely to mislead by suggesting a connection between the company and the applicant⁴, is established upon an application making objection to such a name, it is for the respondents⁵ to show⁶:

- 482 (a) that the name was registered before the commencement of the activities on which the applicant relies to show goodwill⁷; or
- 483 (b) that the company is operating under the name⁸, or is proposing to do so and has incurred substantial start-up costs in preparation⁹, or was formerly operating under the name and is now dormant¹⁰; or

- 484 (c) that the name was registered in the ordinary course of a company formation business and the company is available for sale to the applicant on the standard terms of that business¹¹; or
- 485 (d) that the name was adopted in good faith¹²; or
- 486 (e) that the interests of the applicant are not adversely affected to any significant extent¹³.

If none of those is shown, the objection must be upheld¹⁴. If the facts mentioned in head (a), head (b) or head (c) above are established, the objection must nevertheless be upheld if the applicant shows that the main purpose of the respondents (or any of them) in registering the name was to obtain money (or other consideration) from the applicant or prevent him from registering the name¹⁵. If the objection is not upheld under either such provision¹⁶, it must be dismissed¹⁷.

When the adjudicator has made a decision on the application¹⁸, he must send to the parties written notice of it, stating the reasons for his decision¹⁹; and, within 90 days of determining such an application²⁰, he must make his decision and his reasons for it available to the public²¹.

211. Orders following decision by company names adjudicator.

If an application made objecting to a company's registered name¹ is upheld², the company names adjudicator must make an order³:

487 (1) requiring the respondent company⁴ to change its name to one that is not an offending name⁵; and

488 (2) requiring all the respondents to take all such steps as are within their power to make, or facilitate the making, of that change⁶, and not to cause or permit any steps to be taken calculated to result in another company being registered with a name that is an offending name⁷.

The order must specify a date by which the respondent company's name is to be changed⁸ and may be enforced in the same way as an order of the High Court⁹.

If the respondent company's name is not changed in accordance with the order by the specified date, the adjudicator may determine a new name for the company¹⁰. If the adjudicator determines a new name for the respondent company, he must give notice of his determination to the applicant¹¹, to the respondents¹², and to the registrar of companies¹³.

SIMILARITY TO OTHER NAME IN WHICH PERSON HAS GOODWILL/(C) Procedure, Decisions and Orders/212. Appeal from adjudicator's decision.

212. Appeal from adjudicator's decision.

An appeal lies to the court¹ from any decision of a company names adjudicator² to uphold or dismiss an application made³ objecting to a company's registered name⁴.

Notice of appeal against a decision upholding an application must be given before the date specified in the adjudicator's order by which the respondent company's name is to be changed⁵. If notice of appeal is given against a decision upholding an application, the effect of the adjudicator's order is suspended⁶.

If on appeal the court either: (1) affirms the decision of the adjudicator to uphold the application⁷; or (2) reverses the decision of the adjudicator to dismiss the application⁸, the court may (as the case may require) specify the date by which the adjudicator's order is to be complied with, remit the matter to the adjudicator or make any order or determination that the adjudicator might have made⁹.

If the court determines a new name for the company it must give notice of the determination both to the parties to the appeal¹⁰, and to the registrar of companies¹¹.

1 Except as otherwise provided, in the Companies Acts, 'court' means the High Court or a county court: Companies Act 2006 s 1156(1). However, the Lord Chancellor may, with the concurrence of the Lord Chief Justice, by order exclude a county court from having jurisdiction under the Companies Acts, and, for the purposes of that jurisdiction attach that court's district, or any part of it, to another county court: s 1156(3). The Lord Chief Justice may nominate a judicial office holder (as defined in the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 109(4)) to exercise his functions under the Companies Act 2006 s 1156(3): s 1156(4). The provisions of the Companies Acts conferring jurisdiction on the 'court' as so defined have effect subject to any enactment or rule of law relating to the allocation of jurisdiction or distribution of business between courts in any part of the United Kingdom: s 1156(2). (iv) Secretary of State's Powers to Direct Change of Name

213. Power to direct change of name where company exemption ceases.

If it appears to the Secretary of State¹ that a company² whose name does not include 'limited' (or any of the permitted alternatives)³:

- 489 (1) has ceased to be entitled to exemption under the protections afforded charities⁴ or companies that fall within regulations made for the purpose⁵ by the Secretary of State⁶; or
- 490 (2) has carried on any business other than the promotion of any of the objects allowed under the conditions⁷ which provide for existing exemptions to continue⁸; or
- 491 (3) has allowed its income to be applied otherwise than in promoting such objects⁹; or
- 492 (4) has paid a dividend to its members¹⁰ or (in the case of a private company limited by shares only) made any return of capital to its members¹¹, he may direct the company to change its name¹² so that its name ends with 'limited' (or one of the permitted alternatives)¹³. The direction must be in writing and must specify the period within which the company is to change its name¹⁴.

If the company fails to comply with such a direction, an offence is committed by the company and by every officer of the company who is in default¹⁵; and any person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale¹⁶ and (for continued contravention) to a daily default fine¹⁷ not exceeding one-tenth of level 5 on the standard scale¹⁸.

A company that has been directed to change its name in this way¹⁹ may not, without the approval of the Secretary of State, subsequently change its name so that it does not include 'limited' (or one of the permitted alternatives)²⁰.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(5) COMPANY AND BUSINESS NAMES/(iv) Secretary of State's Powers to Direct Change of Name/214. Direction to change company name that is the same or similar to an existing name.

214. Direction to change company name that is the same or similar to an existing name.

The Secretary of State¹ may direct a company² to change its name if it has been registered in a name³ that is the same as or, in the opinion of the Secretary of State, too like: (1) a name appearing at the time of the registration in the index of company names⁴ which is kept by the registrar of companies⁵; or (2) a name that should have appeared in that index at that time⁶.

Any such direction must be given within 12 months of the company's registration by the name in question⁷, and must specify the period within which the company is to change its name⁸ (although the Secretary of State may by a further direction extend that period⁹).

If a company fails to comply with such a direction, an offence is committed by the company and by every officer of the company who is in default¹⁰; and any person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale¹¹ and (for continued contravention) to a daily default fine¹² not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale¹³.

The Secretary of State may make provision by regulations¹⁴ supplementing his power to direct a change of name¹⁵. Such regulations may make provision as to matters that are to be disregarded¹⁶, and as to words, expressions, signs or symbols that are, or are not, to be regarded as the same¹⁷, for these purposes¹⁸; and such regulations may provide:

- 493 (a) that no such direction is to be given in respect of a name in specified circumstances¹⁹, or if specified consent is given²⁰; and
- 494 (b) that a subsequent change of circumstances or withdrawal of consent does not give rise to grounds for such a direction²¹.

Except in the circumstances mentioned above, a company registered under the Companies Acts is not entitled to carry on its business²² in such a way, or under such a name, as to represent that its business is the business of any other company or firm or person; and the absence of fraud is immaterial²³. In such cases, the old company or firm may apply to the court for an injunction, and the principles then apply which apply to individuals trading under identical or similar names²⁴. This remedy is equally available to companies registered under the Companies Acts.

In some cases the court will grant an injunction before the new company has been registered²⁵, and will protect a foreign trader who has a market in England²⁶ from having the benefit of his trade name annexed by a trader in England through registration under the Companies Act 2006 of a company which assumes the name without justification²⁷.

215. Direction to change name due to irregularities.

If it appears to the Secretary of State¹ that misleading information has been given for the purpose of a company's registration² with a particular name³, or that an undertaking or assurance has been given for that purpose and has not been fulfilled⁴, then he may direct the company to change its name⁵.

Any such direction must be given within five years of the company's registration by the name in question⁶, and must specify the period within which the company is to change its name⁷ (although the Secretary of State may by a further direction extend that period⁸).

If a company fails to comply with such a direction, an offence is committed by the company and by every officer of the company who is in default⁹; and a person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale¹⁰ and (for continued contravention) to a daily default fine¹¹ not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale¹².

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(5) COMPANY AND BUSINESS NAMES/(iv) Secretary of State's Powers to Direct Change of Name/216. Power to require company to abandon misleading name.

216. Power to require company to abandon misleading name.

If, in the opinion of the Secretary of State¹, the name by which a company is registered² gives so misleading an indication of the nature of its activities as to be likely to cause harm to the public³, he may direct the company to change its name⁴.

The direction must be complied with within a period of six weeks from the date of the direction or such longer period as the Secretary of State may think fit to allow⁵. However, this does not apply if, within the period of three weeks from the date of the direction, the company duly makes an application to the court⁶ to set the direction aside⁷.

The court may set the direction aside or confirm it⁸. If the direction is confirmed, the court must specify the period within which the direction is to be complied with⁹.

If a company fails to comply with such a direction, an offence is committed by the company and by every officer of the company who is in default¹⁰; and a person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale¹¹ and (for continued contravention) to a daily default fine¹² not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale¹³.

218. Change of company name by the company by voluntary means.

Where a change of name¹ has been agreed to by a company² by special resolution³, the company must give notice to the registrar of companies⁴. Where a change of name by special resolution is conditional on the occurrence of an event, the notice given to the registrar of the change must specify that the change is conditional⁵, and state whether the event has occurred⁶. If the notice states that the event has not occurred:

- 499 (1) the registrar is not required to enter the new name on the register⁷ in place of the former name or to issue a certificate of incorporation⁸ altered to meet the circumstances of the case⁹ until further notice¹⁰;
- 500 (2) when the event occurs, the company must give notice to the registrar stating that it has occurred¹¹; and
- 501 (3) the registrar may rely on the statement as sufficient evidence of the matters stated in it¹².

Where a change of a company's name has been made by other means provided for by its articles¹³, the company must give notice to the registrar¹⁴, and the notice must be accompanied by a statement that the change of name has been made by means provided for by the company's articles¹⁵. The registrar may rely on the statement as sufficient evidence of the matters stated in it¹⁶.

219. Procedure on change of name and effect.

Where the registrar of companies¹ receives notice of a change of a company's name², then if he is satisfied that the new name complies with the requirements of the Companies Act 2006³ so far as it governs a company's name⁴, and that the requirements of the Companies Acts, and any relevant requirements of the company's articles⁵, with respect to a change of name are complied with⁶, the registrar must enter the new name on the register⁷ in place of the former name⁸. On the registration of the new name, the registrar must issue a certificate of incorporation altered to meet the circumstances of the case⁹. The change of name is not complete until it has been made upon the register and the new certificate has been issued; and, until the certificate is obtained, the company exists under its original name, although notice of a call stating the new name which is sent before the certificate is obtained is sufficient¹⁰.

A change of a company's name has effect from the date on which the new certificate of incorporation is issued¹¹. The effect of the issue of the certificate of incorporation on change of name is not to re-form or reincorporate the company as a new entity but to recognise the continued existence of the company under its new name¹². The change does not affect any rights or obligations of the company or render defective any legal proceedings by or against it¹³; and any legal proceedings that might have been continued or commenced against it by its former name may be continued or commenced against it by its new name¹⁴. If, after the issue of the certificate, it is found that the special resolution was not duly passed, application may be made to the registrar to vacate the registration¹⁵.

(vi) Trading Disclosures

220. Provision made as to trading disclosures.

The Secretary of State¹ may by regulations² make provision requiring companies³:

- 502 (1) to display specified⁴ information in specified locations⁵;
- 503 (2) to state specified information in specified descriptions of document or communication⁶; and
- 504 (3) to provide specified information on request to those they deal with in the course of their business⁷.

The regulations must in every case require disclosure of the name of the company⁸, and may make provision as to the manner in which any specified information is to be displayed, stated or provided⁹. The regulations may provide that, for the purposes of any requirement to disclose a company's name, any variation between a word or words required to be part of the name and a permitted abbreviation of that word or those words (or vice versa) is to be disregarded¹⁰. Such regulations also may provide that where a company fails, without reasonable excuse, to comply with any specified¹¹ requirement of the regulations an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer of the company who is in default¹²; and that a person guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale¹³ and, for continued contravention, a daily default fine¹⁴ not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale¹⁵.

1 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6 et seq.

2 Regulations under the Companies Act 2006 s 82 are subject to affirmative resolution procedure (ie the regulations must not be made unless a draft of the statutory instrument containing them has been laid before Parliament and approved by a resolution of each House of Parliament): see ss 82(5), 1290. As to the making of regulations under the Companies Act 2006 generally see ss 1288-1292. In exercise of the powers so conferred by s 82, the Secretary of State has made the Companies (Trading Disclosures) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/495. See further PARA 221.

The provisions of the Companies Act 2006 ss 82, 84, 85 apply to unregistered companies by virtue of the Unregistered Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2436, reg 3, Sch 1 para 4, but as modified thereby: see PARA 1666. As to the meaning of 'unregistered company' see PARA 1665.

3 Companies Act 2006 s 82(1). As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

4 For these purposes, 'specified' means specified in the regulations: Companies Act 2006 s 82(4).

5 Companies Act 2006 s 82(1)(a).

6 Companies Act 2006 s 82(1)(b).

7 Companies Act 2006 s 82(1)(c).

8 Companies Act 2006 s 82(2)(a).

9 Companies Act 2006 s 82(2)(b).

10 Companies Act 2006 s 82(3). For the purposes of Pt 5 Ch 6 (ss 82-85) (see also PARA 222), in considering a company's name no account is to be taken of:

104 (1) whether upper or lower case characters (or a combination of the two) are used (s 85(1)(a));

105 (2) whether diacritical marks or punctuation are present or absent (s 85(1)(b));

106 (3) whether the name is in the same format or style as is specified under s 57(1)(b) (see PARA 197) for the purposes of registration (s 85(1)(c)), provided there is no real likelihood of names differing only in those respects being taken to be different names (s 85(1)). This provision does not affect the operation of regulations under s 57(1)(a) (see PARA 197) permitting only specified characters, diacritical marks or punctuation: s 85(2).

11 For these purposes, 'specified' means specified in the regulations: Companies Act 2006 s 84(3).

12 Companies Act 2006 s 84(1)(a). The regulations may provide that, for the purposes of any provision made under s 84(1), a shadow director of the company is to be treated as an officer of the company: s 84(2). Accordingly, see the Companies (Trading Disclosures) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/495, reg 10(3); and PARA 221. As to the meaning of 'shadow director' see PARA 479. As to the meaning of 'officer who is in default' see PARA 315. As to the meaning of 'officer' generally see PARA 607. As to provision made for civil consequences to flow from a failure to make required disclosures see PARA 222.

221. Requirements as to disclosure of company's name etc.

A company¹ which has a common seal² must have its name³ engraved in legible characters on its seal⁴.

A company⁵ must display⁶ its registered name at its registered office⁷, and at any inspection place⁸. A company also must display its registered name at any location, other than a company's registered office or any inspection place, at which it carries on business⁹. Where a company is required to display its registered name at any office, place or location, the registered name must be so positioned that it may be easily seen by any visitor to that office, place or location¹⁰. The registered name must be displayed continuously but where any such office, place or location is shared by six or more companies, each such company is only required to display its registered name for at least 15 continuous seconds at least once in every three minutes¹¹. A company also must disclose the address of its registered office, any inspection place, and the type of company records which are kept at that office or place, to any person it deals with in the course of business who makes a written request to the company for that information¹².

Every company must disclose its registered name on:

- 505 (1) its business letters, notices and other official publications¹³;
- 506 (2) its bills of exchange, promissory notes, endorsements and order forms¹⁴;
- 507 (3) cheques purporting to be signed by or on behalf of the company¹⁵;
- 508 (4) orders for money, goods or services purporting to be signed by or on behalf of the company¹⁶;
- 509 (5) its bills of parcels, invoices and other demands for payment, receipts and letters of credit¹⁷;
- 510 (6) its applications for licences to carry on a trade or activity¹⁸; and
- 511 (7) all other forms of its business correspondence and documentation¹⁹.

Every company also must disclose its registered name on its websites²⁰.

On its business letters, its order forms, and its websites, every company must disclose the following particulars²¹:

- 512 (a) the part of the United Kingdom²² in which the company is registered²³;
- 513 (b) the company's registered number²⁴;
- 514 (c) the address of the company's registered office²⁵;
- 515 (d) in the case of a limited company²⁶ that is exempt from the obligation to use the word 'limited' as part of its registered name²⁷, the fact that it is a limited company²⁸;
- 516 (e) in the case of a community interest company²⁹ that is not a public company³⁰, the fact that it is a limited company³¹; and
- 517 (f) in the case of an investment company³², the fact that it is such a company³³.

If, in the case of a company having a share capital³⁴, there is a disclosure as to the amount of share capital on its business letters, on its order forms, or on its websites, that disclosure must refer to paid up share capital³⁵.

Where a company's business letter includes the name of any director of that company³⁶, other than in the text or as a signatory, the letter must disclose the name of every director of that company³⁷.

Where a company fails, without reasonable excuse, to comply with any such requirement relating to trading disclosures³⁸, an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer of the company who is in default³⁹. A person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale⁴⁰ and (for continued contravention) a daily default fine⁴¹ not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale⁴².

1 As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

2 A company may have a common seal, but need not have one: see the Companies Act 2006 s 45; and PARA 283.

3 As to the company name generally see PARA 200 et seq. As to companies registered but not formed under the Companies Act 2006, and as to overseas companies, see PARA 32. As to the registered name of an overseas company see PARA 1827. As to permitted contractions in relation to the words 'limited', 'public limited company' and their Welsh equivalents, which may be included as part of the ordinary name of the company, see the Companies Act 2006 ss 58, 59; and PARA 200. It seems that 'Company' may be abbreviated for present purposes to 'Coy', 'limited' to 'Ltd', and 'and' to '&': see F Stacey & Co Ltd v Wallis (1912) 106 LT 544; Banque de l'Indochine et de Suez SA v Euroseas Group Finance Co Ltd [1981] 3 All ER 198.

4 See the Companies Act 2006 s 45(2); and PARA 283. Where a bond had been entered into as a deed, but the company obtaining the bond had used a seal engraved with its trading name rather than its registered name, non-compliance with the statutory provisions did not in itself render the bond a nullity or unenforceable by a third party beneficiary against the surety which had validly sealed the bond: OTV Birwelco Ltd v Technical and General Guarantee Co Ltd [2002] EWHC 2240 (TCC), [2002] 4 All ER 668, [2002] 2 BCLC 723.

5 As to the meaning of 'company' generally see PARA 1. See note 8.

6 Any display or disclosure of information required by the Companies (Trading Disclosures) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/495, must be in characters that can be read with the naked eye: reg 2. As to compliance with the requirement under previous legislation that the company's name must be 'mentioned' see F Stacey & Co Ltd v Wallis (1912) 106 LT 544.

7 As to a company's registered office see PARA 129. As to incorporation by registration under the Companies Act 2006 see PARA 111 et seq.

8 Companies (Trading Disclosures) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/495, reg 3(1). For these purposes, 'inspection place' means any location, other than a company's registered office, at which a company keeps available for inspection any company record which it is required under the Companies Acts to keep available for inspection: Companies (Trading Disclosures) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/495, reg 1(2). See further the Companies (Company Records) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3006, reg 3, made under the Companies Act 2006 s 1136; and PARA 676. 'Company record' means any register, index, accounting records, agreement, memorandum, minutes or other document required by the Companies Acts to be kept by a company, and any register kept by a company of its debenture holders: Companies (Trading Disclosures) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/495, reg 1(2). A reference to any type of document is a reference to a document of that type in hard copy, electronic or any other form: reg 1(2). As to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16. As to the keeping of company records (the 'register') by the registrar see PARA 146; as to the registers etc that must be kept at a company's registered office see PARA 130; and as to a company's register of debenture holders see PARA 1321.

The Companies (Trading Disclosures) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/495, reg 3(1) does not apply to any company which has at all times since its incorporation been dormant: reg 3(2). As to the meaning of a company that is 'dormant' see PARA 28. The provisions of reg 3(1) also do not apply to the registered office or an inspection place of a company where: (1) in respect of that company, a liquidator, administrator or administrative receiver has been appointed (reg 3(3)(a) (reg 3(3) added by SI 2009/218)); and (2) the registered office or inspection place is also a place of business of that liquidator, administrator or administrative receiver (Companies (Trading Disclosures) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/495, reg 3(3)(b) (as so added)). As to administrators see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 158 et seq; as to administrative receivers see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 380 et seq; and as to the appointment of a liquidator see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 950.

9 Companies (Trading Disclosures) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/495, reg 4(1), (2). As to the meaning of 'carry on business' generally see PARA 1 note 1.

The provisions mentioned in the text do not apply to a location which is primarily used for living accommodation: reg 4(3). Nor do they apply to any location at which business is carried on by a company where: (1) in respect of that company, a liquidator, administrator or administrative receiver has been appointed (reg 4(4)(a) (reg 4(4)-(6) added by SI 2009/218)); and (2) the location is also a place of business of that liquidator, administrator or administrative receiver (Companies (Trading Disclosures) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/495, reg 4(4)(b) (as so added)). For these purposes, 'administrative receiver' has the meaning given by the Insolvency Act 1986 s 251 (see PARA 1336): Companies (Trading Disclosures) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/495, reg 4(6) (as so added). Nor do the provisions mentioned in the text apply to any location at which business is carried on by a company of which every director who is an individual is a relevant director: reg 4(5) (as so added). For these purposes, 'relevant director' means an individual in respect of whom the registrar of companies is required by regulations made pursuant to the Companies Act 2006 s 243(4) (see PARA 503) to refrain from disclosing protected information to a credit reference agency, where 'credit reference agency' has the meaning given in s 243(7) (see PARA 503) and 'protected information' has the meaning given in s 240 (see PARA 501): Companies (Trading Disclosures) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/495, reg 4(6) (as so added). COMPANIES ACTS/(5) COMPANY AND BUSINESS NAMES/(vi) Trading Disclosures/222. Civil remedies for breach of trading disclosure provisions.

222. Civil remedies for breach of trading disclosure provisions.

In relation to any legal proceedings brought by a company¹ which is subject to the trading disclosures provisions² to enforce a right arising out of a contract made in the course of a business in respect of which the company was, at the time the contract was made, in breach of regulations made under those provisions³, the proceedings must be dismissed if the defendant to the proceedings shows⁴:

- 518 (1) that he has a claim against the claimant arising out of the contract that he has been unable to pursue by reason of the latter's breach of the regulations⁵; or
- 519 (2) that he has suffered some financial loss in connection with the contract by reason of the claimant's breach of the regulations⁶, unless the court before which the proceedings are brought is satisfied that it is just and equitable to permit the proceedings to continue⁷.

This provision does not affect the right of any person to enforce such rights as he may have against another person in any proceedings brought by that person⁸.

1 As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

2 I.e a company to which the Companies Act 2006 s 82 applies (as to which see PARA 220): see s 83(1).

3 Companies Act 2006 s 83(1). The text refers to a company that was, at the time the contract was made, in breach of regulations made under s 82 (as to which see PARA 220): see s 83(1). The provisions of s 83 apply to unregistered companies by virtue of the Unregistered Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2436, reg 3, Sch 1 para 4, but as modified thereby: see PARA 1666. As to the meaning of 'unregistered company' see PARA 1665.

Under the Companies Act 1985 s 349(4) (repealed) (see now the Companies Act 2006 s 83), a director who signed a company cheque, bill of exchange etc which did not contain the name of the company was personally liable to the holder of the bill, etc, unless the amount was duly paid by the company: see Scottish and Newcastle Breweries Ltd v Blair 1967 SLT 72; Fiorentino Comm Giuseppe Srl v Farnesi [2005] EWHC 160 (Ch), [2005] 2 All ER 737, [2005] 1 WLR 3718. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(5) COMPANY AND BUSINESS NAMES/(vii) Business Names/223. Persons subject to the business names provisions of the Companies Act 2006.

(vii) Business Names

223. Persons subject to the business names provisions of the Companies Act 2006.

The business names provisions of the Companies Act 2006¹ apply to any person carrying on business in the United Kingdom². However, those provisions do not prevent:

- 520 (1) an individual carrying on business under a name consisting of his surname without any addition other than a permitted addition³; or
- 521 (2) individuals carrying on business in partnership⁴ under a name consisting of the surnames of all the partners without any addition other than a permitted addition⁵.

The 'permitted additions' for these purposes are: (a) in the case of an individual, his forename or initial⁶; (b) in the case of a partnership, the forenames of individual partners or the initials of those forenames⁷ or, where two or more individual partners have the same surname, the addition of 's' at the end of that surname⁸; and (c) in either case, an addition merely indicating that the business is carried on in succession to a former owner of the business⁹.

1 ie the Companies Act 2006 Pt 41 Ch 1 (ss 1192-1199) (see also PARA 224 et seq): see s 1192(1). As to Pt 41 Ch 2 (ss 1200-1206), which relates to trading disclosures required of individuals and partnerships, see PARTNERSHIP vol 79 (2008) PARA 9. (The equivalent provisions to Pt 41 Ch 2 that apply to companies are set out in ss 82-84: see PARAS 220, 222).

2 Companies Act 2006 s 1192(1). For these purposes, 'business' includes a profession: see s 1208. As to the meaning of 'carry on business' generally see PARA 1 note 1. As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 1 note 5.

However, s 1192 does not apply to the carrying on of a business by a person who:

- 107 (1) carried on the business immediately before 1 October 2009 (ie the date on which Pt 41 Ch 1 came into force: see the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, art 3(x)) (Companies Act 2006 s 1199(1), (2)(a)); and
- 108 (2) continues to carry it on under the name that immediately before that date was its lawful business name (s 1199(1), (2)(b)).

Where a business is transferred to a person on or after 1 October 2009, and that person carries on the business under the name that was its lawful business name immediately before the transfer, s 1192 does not apply in relation to the carrying on of the business under that name during the period of 12 months beginning with the date of the transfer: s 1199(3). For these purposes, 'lawful business name', in relation to a business, means a name under which the business was carried on without contravening the Business Names Act 1985 s 2(1) (repealed) (see now the Companies Act 2006 ss 1193-96; and PARA 224) or, after 1 October 2009, the provisions of Pt 41 Ch 1: s 1199(4). The Business Names Act 1985 (repealed) (see now the Companies Act 2006 Pt 41 Ch 1) was capable of applying to educational establishments as it was intended to deal with situations where a contracting party fails to disclose its true identity in documents which could be evidence of a contract: London College of Science and Technology Ltd v Islington London Borough Council [1997] ELR 162, 140 Sol Jo LB 166.

3 Companies Act 2006 s 1192(2)(a). For these purposes, 'surname', in relation to a peer or person usually known by a British title different from his surname, means the title by which he is known: see s 1208.

4 For these purposes, 'partnership' means a partnership within the Partnership Act 1890 (see PARTNERSHIP vol 79 (2008) PARA 1 et seq), or a limited partnership registered under the Limited Partnerships Act 1907 (see PARTNERSHIP vol 79 (2008) PARA 218 et seq), or a firm or entity of a similar character formed under the law of a country or territory outside the United Kingdom: see the Companies Act 2006 s 1208. As to the meaning of 'firm' see PARA 112 note 14. As to the meanings of 'firm' and 'partnership' generally see PARTNERSHIP vol 79 (2008) PARA 1; and as to the legal personality of a partnership or firm generally see PARTNERSHIP vol 79 (2008) PARA 2.

5 Companies Act 2006 s 1192(2)(b).

6 Companies Act 2006 s 1192(3)(a). For these purposes, 'initial' includes any recognised abbreviation of a name: see s 1208.

7 Companies Act 2006 s 1192(3)(b)(i).

8 Companies Act 2006 s 1192(3)(b)(ii).

9 Companies Act 2006 s 1192(3)(c).

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(5) COMPANY AND BUSINESS NAMES/(vii) Business Names/224. Business names requiring Secretary of State's approval.

224. Business names requiring Secretary of State's approval.

A person¹ must not, without the approval of the Secretary of State², carry on business in the United Kingdom³ under a name that:

- 522 (1) would be likely to give the impression that the business is connected with Her Majesty's government or the Welsh Assembly Government⁴, or with any local authority⁵, or with any public authority⁶ that is specified for these purposes⁷ by regulations made by the Secretary of State⁸; or
- 523 (2) includes a word or expression for the time being specified in regulations made by the Secretary of State for these purposes⁹.

A person who contravenes either prohibition under head (1) or under head (2) above commits an offence¹⁰; and where such an offence is committed by a body corporate¹¹, an offence is also committed by every officer of the body who is in default¹². Any person guilty of either such offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale¹³ and (for continued contravention) to a daily default fine¹⁴ not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale¹⁵.

The Secretary of State may by regulations made under head (1) or under head (2) above require that, in connection with an application for the approval of the Secretary of State¹⁶, the applicant must seek the view of a specified¹⁷ government department or other body¹⁸. Where such a requirement applies, the applicant must request the specified department or other body (in writing) to indicate whether (and if so why) it has any objections to the proposed name¹⁹. He must submit to the Secretary of State a statement that such a request has been made and a copy of any response received from the specified body²⁰. If these requirements are not complied with, the Secretary of State may refuse to consider the application for approval²¹.

Where approval has been given for the purposes of head (1) or head (2) above, and it appears to the Secretary of State that there are overriding considerations of public policy that require such approval to be withdrawn, the approval may be withdrawn by notice in writing given to the person concerned²². The notice must state the date as from which approval is withdrawn²³.

1 As to the persons to whom the Companies Act 2006 Pt 41 Ch 1 (ss 1192-1199) (see also PARAS 223, 225 et seq) (business names) applies see PARA 223. However, ss 1193-1196 do not apply to the carrying on of a business by a person who:

109 (1) carried on the business immediately before 1 October 2009 (ie the date on which Pt 41 Ch 1 came into force: see the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, art 3(x)) (Companies Act 2006 s 1199(1), (2)(a)); and

110 (2) continues to carry it on under the name that immediately before that date was its lawful business name (s 1199(1), (2)(b)).

Where a business is transferred to a person on or after 1 October 2009, and that person carries on the business under the name that was its lawful business name immediately before the transfer, ss 1193-1196 do not apply in relation to the carrying on of the business under that name during the period of 12 months beginning with the date of the transfer: s 1199(3). As to the meaning of 'lawful business name' for these purposes see PARA 223 note 2. As to the meaning of 'business' for these purposes see PARA 223 note 2. As to the meaning of 'carry on business' generally see PARA 1 note 1.

2 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6. It is the duty of the Secretary of State to secure that the expression 'chamber of commerce' and its Welsh equivalent ('siambr fasnach') is specified in regulations under s 1194 (business names requiring approval of Secretary of State) (see head (2) in the text), as an expression for the registration of which as or as part of a company's name the approval of the Secretary of State is required: Company and Business Names (Chamber of Commerce, etc) Act 1999 s 1 (amended by SI 2009/1941). Before determining under the Companies Act 2006 s 1194 whether to approve the carrying on of a business under a name which includes the expression 'chamber of commerce' or 'siambr fasnach', or any other expression for the time being specified in regulations under s 1194 which begins with the words 'chamber of' or 'chambers of' (or the Welsh equivalents), the Secretary of State must consult at least one relevant representative body: Company and Business Names (Chamber of Commerce, etc) Act 1999 s 3(1) (amended by SI 2009/1941). The Secretary of State may publish guidance with respect to factors which may be taken into account in determining whether to approve the use of a business name to which the Company and Business Names (Chamber of Commerce, etc) Act 1999 s 3 applies: s 3(2). The relevant representative bodies for these purposes are the British Chambers of Commerce and the body known as the Scottish Chambers of Commerce (see s 4(1)); but the Secretary of State may by order made by statutory instrument amend s 4(1) by adding or deleting from it the name of any body (whether corporate or unincorporated) (see s 4(2), (3)). At the date at which this volume states the law, no such order had been made.

The functions conferred on the Secretary of State by the Companies Act 2006 s 1193 (see head (1) in the text) or under s 1194 (see head (2) in the text) (together formerly the Business Names Act 1985 s 2(1)) may be exercised by, or by employees of, such person (if any) as may be authorised in that behalf by the Secretary of State: see the Contracting Out (Functions in relation to the Registration of Companies) Order 1995, SI 1995/1013, Sch 3 para 2; and the Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b); and PARA 8.

3 As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 1 note 5.

4 Companies Act 2006 s 1193(1)(a) (amended as from 6 November 2009 by SI 2009/2958). This provision also applies to a name that would be likely to give the impression that the business is connected with any part of the Scottish administration or Her Majesty's Government in Northern Ireland: see the Companies Act 2006 s 1193(1)(a) (as so amended).

5 Companies Act 2006 s 1193(1)(b). For these purposes, 'local authority' means a local authority within the meaning of the Local Government Act 1972 (see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 29(1) (Reissue) PARA 24) (or a council constituted under the Local Government etc (Scotland) Act 1994 s 2 or a district council in Northern Ireland), the Common Council of the City of London or the Council of the Isles of Scilly: Companies Act 2006 s 1193(2). As to the Common Council of the City of London see LONDON GOVERNMENT vol 29(2) (Reissue) PARA 51 et seq. As to the Council of the Isles of Scilly see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 29(1) (Reissue) PARA 40.

6 For these purposes, 'public authority' includes any person or body having functions of a public nature: Companies Act 2006 s 1193(2). As to public bodies and public authorities generally see ADMINISTRATIVE LAW vol 1(1) (2001 Reissue) PARA 6 et seq.

7 Ie for the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 s 1193: see s 1193(1)(c).

8 Companies Act 2006 s 1193(1)(c). Regulations made under s 1193 are subject to affirmative resolution procedure (ie the regulations must not be made unless a draft of the statutory instrument containing them has been laid before Parliament and approved by a resolution of each House of Parliament): see ss 1193(3), 1290. As to the making of regulations under the Companies Act 2006 generally see ss 1288-1292. As to the regulations that have been made under s 1193 see the Company, Limited Liability Partnership and Business Names (Public Authorities) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2982. There is no requirement for the purposes of head (1) in the text for the court to have before it evidence that confusion had in fact been caused as a result of the use of a business name said to have given the impression that the business was connected to the government: Department of Trade and Industry v Cedenio [2001] All ER (D) 323 (Feb) (considering the Business Names Act 1985 s 2(1) (repealed)).

9 Companies Act 2006 s 1194(1). Head (2) in the text refers to regulations made by the Secretary of State under s 1194: see s 1194(1). Regulations made under s 1194 are subject to approval after being made: s 1194(2). As to the meaning of 'approval after being made' see s 1291; and PARA 196 note 13. As to the words and expressions that are specified for the purposes of s 1194(1) see the Company, Limited Liability Partnership and Business Names (Sensitive Words and Expressions) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2615, reg 3, Sch 1 Pt 1.

10 Companies Act 2006 ss 1193(4), 1194(3). Because the statute carries criminal sanctions, it should not be given a purposive construction: Department of Trade and Industry v Cedenio [2001] All ER (D) 323 (Feb). The provisions of the Companies Act 2006 ss 1121-1123 (liability of officer in default) (see PARA 315) and 1125-1131 (general provisions about offences) (see PARA 1622 et seq) apply in relation to offences under Pt 41 (ss 1192-1208) (see also PARAS 223, 225 et seq) as in relation to offences under the Companies Acts: Companies Act 2006 s 1207. As to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

11 As to the meaning of 'body corporate' for the purposes of the Companies Acts see PARA 1 note 5.

12 Companies Act 2006 ss 1193(5), 1194(4). As to the meaning of 'officer who is in default' see PARA 315. As to the meaning of 'officer' generally see PARA 607.

13 As to the standard scale see PARA 1622.

14 As to the meaning of 'daily default fine' see PARA 1622.

15 Companies Act 2006 ss 1193(6), 1194(5).

16 Ie under the Companies Act 2006 s 1193 (see head (1) in the text) or under s 1194 (see head (2) in the text), as the case may be: see s 1195(1).

17 For these purposes, 'specified' means specified in the regulations: Companies Act 2006 s 1195(5). Accordingly, in connection with applications for Secretary of State approval where the situation of the registered office or principal place of business is irrelevant see the Company, Limited Liability Partnership and Business Names (Sensitive Words and Expressions) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2615, reg 5, Sch 2 Pt 1; and as to applications where the situation of the registered office or principal place of business is relevant see reg 6, Sch 2 Pt 2.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(5) COMPANY AND BUSINESS NAMES/(vii) Business Names/225. Business name containing inappropriate indication of company type or legal form.

225. Business name containing inappropriate indication of company type or legal form.

The Secretary of State¹ may make provision by regulations² prohibiting a person³ from carrying on business in the United Kingdom⁴ under a name consisting of or containing specified⁵ words, expressions or other indications⁶:

- 524 (1) that are associated with a particular type of company or form of organisation⁷; or
- 525 (2) that are similar to words, expressions or other indications associated with a particular type of company or form of organisation⁸.

The regulations may prohibit the use of words, expressions or other indications either in a specified part, or otherwise than in a specified part, of a name⁹, or in conjunction with (or otherwise than in conjunction with) such other words, expressions or indications as may be specified¹⁰.

A person who uses a name in contravention of such regulations commits an offence¹¹; and where such an offence is committed by a body corporate¹², an offence is also committed by every officer of the body who is in default¹³. Any person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale¹⁴ and (for continued contravention) to a daily default fine¹⁵ not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale¹⁶.

1 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6 et seq.

2 As to the making of regulations under the Companies Act 2006 generally see ss 1288-1292. Regulations under s 1197 are subject to negative resolution procedure (ie the statutory instrument containing the regulations is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament): see ss 1197(4), 1289. As to the regulations so made see the Company and Business Names (Miscellaneous Provisions) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1085; and note 10.

3 As to the persons to whom the Companies Act 2006 Pt 41 Ch 1 (ss 1192-1199) (see also PARAS 223 et seq, 226) (business names) applies see PARA 223. However, s 1197 does not apply to the carrying on of a business by a person who:

111 (1) carried on the business immediately before 1 October 2009 (ie the date on which Pt 41 Ch 1 came into force: see the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, art 3(x)) (Companies Act 2006 s 1199(1), (2)(a)); and

112 (2) continues to carry it on under the name that immediately before that date was its lawful business name (s 1199(1), (2)(b)).

Where a business is transferred to a person on or after 1 October 2009, and that person carries on the business under the name that was its lawful business name immediately before the transfer, s 1197 does not apply in relation to the carrying on of the business under that name during the period of 12 months beginning with the date of the transfer: s 1199(3). As to the meaning of 'lawful business name' for these purposes see PARA 223 note 2. As to the meaning of 'business' for these purposes see PARA 223 note 2. As to the meaning of 'carry on business' generally see PARA 1 note 1.

4 As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 1 note 5.

5 For these purposes, 'specified' means specified in the regulations: Companies Act 2006 s 1197(3).

6 Companies Act 2006 s 1197(1).

7 Companies Act 2006 s 1197(1)(a).

8 Companies Act 2006 s 1197(1)(b).

9 Companies Act 2006 s 1197(2)(a).

10 Companies Act 2006 s 1197(2)(b).

Accordingly, no person may carry on business in the United Kingdom under a name that concludes with any word or abbreviation set out in inverted commas in the Company and Business Names (Miscellaneous Provisions) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1085, reg 13, Sch 2 para 1(a), (b) unless that person is:

- 113 (1) a company or an overseas company registered in the United Kingdom by that name (reg 13(1)(a));
- 114 (2) an overseas company incorporated with that name (reg 13(1)(b) (amended by SI 2009/2404));
- 115 (3) a society registered under the Industrial and Provident Societies Act 1965 or the Industrial and Provident Societies Act (Northern Ireland) 1969 by that name (Company and Business Names (Miscellaneous Provisions) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1085, reg 13(1)(c));
- 116 (4) an incorporated friendly society (as defined in the Friendly Societies Act 1992 s 116: see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 50 (2008) PARAS 2082-2083) which has that name (Company and Business Names (Miscellaneous Provisions) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1085, reg 13(1)(d) (added by SI 2009/2404)); or
- 117 (5) a company to which the Companies Act 2006 s 1040 (companies authorised to register under the Companies Act 2006) (see PARA 33) applies which has that name (Company and Business Names (Miscellaneous Provisions) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1085, reg 13(1)(e) (added by SI 2009/2404)).

Nor may any person carry on business in the United Kingdom under a name that concludes with any word or abbreviation specified as similar to any word or abbreviation set out in inverted commas in Sch 2 para 1(a), (b): reg 13(2). For these purposes, the words or abbreviations specified as similar to the words and abbreviations set out in inverted commas in Sch 2 para 1(a), (b) are any in which:

- 118 (a) one or more characters have been omitted (reg 1(2), Sch 2 para 2(a));
- 119 (b) one or more characters, symbols, signs or punctuation have been added (reg 1(2), Sch 2 para 2(b)); or
- 120 (c) each of one or more characters has been substituted by one or more other characters, signs, symbols or punctuation (reg 1(2), Sch 2 para 2(c)), in such a way as to be likely to mislead the public as to the legal form of a company if included in the registered name of the company (reg 1(2), Sch 2 para 2). As to the meaning of 'overseas company' see PARA 1824. As to company registration under the Companies Act 2006 see PARA 111 et seq. As to companies registered but not formed under the Companies Act 2006, and as to overseas companies, see PARA 32. As to societies registered under the Industrial and Provident Societies Act 1965 see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 50 (2008) PARA 2410 et seq.

A person must not carry on business in the United Kingdom under a name that includes any expression or abbreviation set out in inverted commas in the Company and Business Names (Miscellaneous Provisions) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1085, Sch 2 para 3 unless that person is such a company, partnership or grouping as is indicated in that expression or abbreviation: reg 14(1). Nor may any person carry on business in the United Kingdom under a name that includes any expression or abbreviation specified as similar to any expression or abbreviation set out in inverted commas in Sch 2 para 3: reg 14(2). As to transitional provisions see reg 15. The expressions and abbreviations specified as similar to the expressions and abbreviations set out in inverted commas in Sch 2 para 3 are any in which:

- 121 (i) one or more characters have been omitted (reg 1(2), Sch 2 para 4(a));
- 122 (ii) one or more characters, symbols, signs or punctuation have been added (reg 1(2), Sch 2 para 4(b)); or
- 123 (iii) each of one or more characters has been substituted by one or more other characters, signs, symbols or punctuation (reg 1(2), Sch 2 para 4(c)), in such a way as to be likely to mislead the public as to the legal form of a company if included in the registered name of the company (reg 1(2), Sch 2 para 4).

226. Offence of trading under misleading business name.

A person¹ must not carry on business² in the United Kingdom³ under a name that gives so misleading an indication of the nature of the activities of the business as to be likely to cause harm to the public⁴.

A person who uses a name in contravention of this prohibition commits an offence⁵; and where such an offence is committed by a body corporate⁶, an offence is also committed by every officer of the body who is in default⁷. Any person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale⁸ and (for continued contravention) to a daily default fine⁹ not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale¹⁰.

COMPANIES ACTS/(6) THE COMPANY CONSTITUTION/(i) Introduction/227. Meaning of references to a company's constitution.

(6) THE COMPANY CONSTITUTION

(i) Introduction

227. Meaning of references to a company's constitution.

Unless the context otherwise requires, references in the Companies Acts¹ to the constitution of a company² (a 'company's constitution') include³:

- 526 (1) the company's articles of association⁴; and
- 527 (2) any of the following resolutions and agreements⁵:
 - 25
 - 44. (a) any special resolution⁶;
 - 45. (b) any resolution or agreement agreed to by all the members⁷ of a company that, if not so agreed to, would not have been effective for its purpose unless passed as a special resolution⁸;
 - 46. (c) any resolution or agreement agreed to by all the members of a class of shareholders⁹ that, if not so agreed to, would not have been effective for its purpose unless passed by some particular majority or otherwise in some particular manner¹⁰;
 - 47. (d) any resolution or agreement that effectively binds all members of a class of shareholders though not agreed to by all those members¹¹;
 - 48. (e) any other resolution or agreement which affects a company's constitution¹² by virtue of any enactment¹³.
 - 26

References to a company's constitution in the provisions of the Companies Act 2006 that (amongst other things) impose duties and limitations upon a company's directors¹⁴ include, in addition to the matters mentioned in heads (1) and (2) above¹⁵: (i) any resolution or other decision come to in accordance with the constitution¹⁶; and (ii) any decision by the members of the company, or a class of members, that is treated by virtue of any enactment or rule of law as equivalent to a decision by the company¹⁷.

1 As to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' for these purposes see PARA 16.

2 As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24. As to the effect of a company's constitution see PARA 243 et seq.

3 Companies Act 2006 s 17. The use of the word 'include' indicates that the list given in heads (1) and (2) in the text is not exhaustive, eg a company's certificate of incorporation has constitutional relevance serving as it does to define a company and therefore to indicate its general nature, powers and limitations: see PARA 119.

In the case of an unregistered company (see PARA 1665 et seq), any reference to the company's constitution must be read as referring to any instrument constituting or regulating the company: see the Unregistered Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2436, reg 5(1)(c); and PARA 1666. As to the meaning of 'unregistered company' see PARA 1665.

4 Companies Act 2006 s 17(a). As to the meaning of references to a company's 'articles' see PARA 228 note 2. As to articles of association generally see PARA 228 et seq.

5 Companies Act 2006 s 17(b). Head (2) in the text refers to any resolutions and agreements to which Pt 3 Ch 3 (ss 29-30) (resolutions and agreements affecting a company's constitution) applies (see s 29; heads (2)(a) to (2)(e) in the text; and PARA 231): see s 17(b). As to resolutions and decisions of the company generally see PARA 612 et seq.

6 See the Companies Act 2006 s 29(1)(a); and PARA 231. As to the meaning of 'special resolution' see PARA 614.

7 References in the Companies Act 2006 s 29(1) to a member of a company do not include the company itself where it is such a member by virtue only of its holding shares as treasury shares: see s 29(2); and PARA 231. As to the meaning of 'member' see PARA 321; and as to the meaning of 'shares' see PARA 1042. As to treasury shares see PARA 1251.

8 See the Companies Act 2006 s 29(1)(b); and PARA 231. The redenomination of shares does not affect any rights or obligations of members under the company's constitution, or any restrictions affecting members under the company's constitution: see s 624(1); and PARA 1168.

9 References in the Companies Act 2006 s 29(1) to a class of members of a company do not include the company itself where it is such a member by virtue only of its holding shares as treasury shares: see s 29(2); and PARA 231. As to classes of shares generally see PARA 1057 et seq.

10 See the Companies Act 2006 s 29(1)(c); and PARA 231.

11 See the Companies Act 2006 s 29(1)(d); and PARA 231.

12 In any other resolution or agreement to which the Companies Act 2006 Pt 3 Ch 3 applies (see note 5): see s 29(1)(e); and PARA 231.

13 See the Companies Act 2006 s 29(1)(e); and PARA 231. As to the meaning of 'enactment' see PARA 17 note 2.

14 In references to a company's constitution in the Companies Act 2006 Pt 10 (ss 154-259) (see PARA 478 et seq): see s 257(1); and PARA 540. A director of a company has a duty to act in accordance with the company's constitution: see s 171; and PARA 540. As to the meaning of 'director' see PARA 478.

15 In addition to the matters mentioned in the Companies Act 2006 s 17: see s 257(2); and PARA 540.

17 See the Companies Act 2006 s 257(1)(b); and PARA 540.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(6) THE COMPANY CONSTITUTION/(ii) Articles of Association/228. Power to prescribe model articles and their application.

(ii) Articles of Association

228. Power to prescribe model articles and their application.

A company¹ must have articles of association² prescribing regulations for the company³.

Unless it is a company to which model articles apply⁴, it must register articles of association⁵; and articles of association registered by a company must⁶: (1) be contained in a single document⁷; and (2) be divided into paragraphs numbered consecutively⁸.

The Secretary of State⁹ may by regulations prescribe¹⁰ model articles of association for companies¹¹; and different model articles may be prescribed for different descriptions of company¹². A company may adopt all or any of the provisions of model articles¹³.

On the formation of a limited company¹⁴:

528 (a) if articles are not registered¹⁵; or

529 (b) if articles are registered, in so far as they do not exclude or modify the relevant model articles¹⁶, the relevant model articles (so far as applicable) form part of the company's articles in the same manner and to the same extent as if articles in the form of those articles had been duly registered¹⁷.

According to the jurisprudence of the European Court of Justice, it may be that the articles should, in a case where the number of directors is only one, explicitly state, for the purpose of registration, that such one director may alone represent the company, even though this is in any event the position under the general law¹⁸.

1 As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

2 References in the Companies Acts to a company's 'articles' are to its articles of association (Companies Act 2006 s 18(4)); and, unless the context otherwise requires, references in the Companies Acts to a company's constitution include the company's articles (see s 17; and PARA 227). As to the articles of association of a community interest company see PARA 105.

In the case of an unregistered company (see PARA 1665 et seq), any reference to the company's articles of association must be read as referring to any instrument constituting or regulating the company: see the Unregistered Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2436, reg 5(1)(c); and PARA 1666. As to the meaning of 'unregistered company' see PARA 1665.

3 Companies Act 2006 s 18(1). Any such article, at any rate when read with other articles, may be directory only: Re Hansard Publishing Union Ltd (1892) 8 TLR 280, CA; Landowners West of England and South Wales Land Drainage and Inclosure Co v Ashford (1880) 16 ChD 411.

Provisions that immediately before 1 October 2009 were contained in a company's memorandum but are not provisions of the kind mentioned in the Companies Act 2006 s 8 (which substantially altered the purpose of the memorandum of association) (see PARA 104) are to be treated after that date as provisions of the company's articles: s 28(1). This applies not only to substantive provisions but also to provision for entrenchment, as defined in s 22 (see PARA 233): s 28(2). The provisions of Pt 3 (ss 17-38) (a company's constitution) about provision for entrenchment apply to such provision as they apply to provision made on the company's formation, except that the company's duty under s 23(1)(a) (see PARA 233) to give notice to the registrar of any provision for entrenchment contained in the articles does not apply: s 28(3). Nothing in s 18(3) (see the text and notes 6-8) is to be read as affecting the operation of s 28: see the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, art 5, Sch 2 para 3(2). Nor is anything in the Companies Act 2006 as a whole to be read as enabling a company to amend or omit provisions of its articles that were formerly in its memorandum so as to change its status as a limited or unlimited company otherwise than in accordance with the relevant provisions of Pt 7 (ss 89-111) (re-registration as a means of changing company's status) (see PARA 167 et seq): see the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, Sch 2 para 10. The date of 1 October 2009 is the date by which all the provisions of the Companies Act 2006 Pt 3 had been commenced: see the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, art 3. Where, in the case of an existing or transitional company, the company's articles are deemed to contain a statement of its name by virtue of the Companies Act 2006 s 28, and the company changes its name (by any means) on or after 1 October 2009, the company is not required to amend its articles in order to effect the change of name (see the Companies Act 2006 (Consequential Amendments, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2009, SI 2009/1941, art 5(1), (2)); and the company is not required to send a copy of its articles to the registrar in accordance with the Companies Act 2006 s 26 (see PARA 236) (see the Companies Act 2006 (Consequential Amendments, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2009, SI 2009/1941, art 5(4)). The deemed statement in the company's articles ceases to have effect when the change of name takes effect: art 5(3). As to the meaning of 'existing company' for these purposes see PARA 18 note 2; definition applied by art 5(6). As to the meaning of 'transitional company' for these purposes see PARA 17 note 4; definition applied by art 5(6).

Prior to the Companies Act 2006, the articles of association were considered subordinate to the memorandum of association; and any clause in them, if and so far as it was at variance with the memorandum, was to that extent overruled by it and inoperative: see Guinness v Land Corp'n of Ireland Ltd (1882) 22 ChD 349 at 376 per Cotton LJ; Angostura Bitters (Dr JGB Siegert & Sons) Ltd v Kerr [1933] AC 550 at 554, PC; Re Duncan Gilmour & Co Ltd, Duncan Gilmour & Co Ltd v Inman [1952] 2 All ER 871 at 874 per Wynn-Parry J. The memorandum was regarded as the charter of the company, defining its powers, while the articles of association (in their subsidiary role) defined the duties, rights and powers of the governing body as between themselves and the company at large, and the mode and form in which the business of the company was to be carried on and in which changes in its internal regulations may from time to time be made: see Ashbury v Watson (1885) 30 ChD 376, CA. However, in certain circumstances, the memorandum and articles were read together, at all events so far as was necessary to explain any ambiguity appearing in the terms of one document or to supplement it upon any matter as to which it is silent: see Angostura Bitters (Dr JGB Siegert & Sons) Ltd v Kerr at 554; Re Duncan Gilmour & Co Ltd, Duncan Gilmour & Co Ltd v Inman. 9 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6.

10 In the Companies Acts, 'prescribed' means prescribed (by order or by regulations) by the Secretary of State: Companies Act 2006 s 1167. As to the making of regulations under the Companies Act 2006 generally see ss 1288-1292. Regulations under s 19 are subject to negative resolution procedure (ie the statutory instrument containing the regulations is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament): ss 19(5), 1289. In exercise of the powers conferred by s 19, the Secretary of State has made the Companies (Model Articles) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3229 (as to which see PARA 229). Any amendment of model articles by regulations under the Companies Act 2006 s 19 does not affect a company registered before the amendment takes effect; and, for these purposes, 'amendment' here includes addition, alteration or repeal: s 19(4).

11 Companies Act 2006 s 19(1). See note 10. The default articles prescribed for the purposes of the Companies Act 1985 ('legacy articles'), ie the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, have not been revoked and may, in their amended form, continue to be used by companies after the commencement of the Companies Act 2006: see PARA 230; and see note 16.

See the Companies (Model Articles) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3229, regs 2-4, Sch 1 (private companies limited by shares), Sch 2 (private companies limited by guarantee), Sch 3 (public companies); and PARA 229. No such model articles have been prescribed for unlimited companies.

See also Gaiman v National Association for Mental Health [1971] Ch 317, [1970] 2 All ER 362 (provided that he follows the general form of the model articles, the draftsman is free to add, subtract or vary the articles as circumstances require). 15 Companies Act 2006 s 20(1)(a). As to the registration of articles see PARA 111 et seq.

16 Companies Act 2006 s 20(1)(b). For these purposes, the 'relevant model articles' means the model articles prescribed for a company of that description as in force at the date on which the company is registered (see notes 10, 11): s 20(2). The Secretary of State¹ has by regulations prescribed² different versions of model articles³ for the following different descriptions of company⁴:

- 530 (1) private companies limited by shares⁵;
- 531 (2) private companies limited by guarantee⁶; and
- 532 (3) public companies⁷.

The default articles prescribed for the purposes of the Companies Act 1985⁸ have not been revoked and may, in their amended form⁹, continue to be used by companies after the commencement of the Companies Act 2006¹⁰.

1 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6.

230. Legacy articles and the Companies Act 2006.

The Companies Act 2006 does not vary the rule that the version of the default articles¹ that applies to any given company is the version in force at the date that the company was registered².

Prior to 1 October 2009³, a company would have adopted default articles (known as 'Table A') that were issued under the Companies Act 1985⁴.

Where companies relied on the default articles prescribed for the purposes of the Companies Act 1985 ('Table A')⁵, or indeed any preceding version (such as the Companies Act 1948 'Table A'⁶), those articles continued to regulate the company after the Companies Act 2006 had come fully into force, unless action was taken to replace them⁷.

1 le the articles of association that govern a company's activities if its fails to register its own bespoke articles. As to the meaning of references to 'articles' see PARA 228 note 2. As to articles of association generally see PARAS 228-229, 231 et seq. As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16. A limited company need not register its articles: see PARA 228. As to the meaning of 'limited company' see PARA 102.

2 See the Companies Act 2006 s 19; and PARA 228. As to articles applicable to companies incorporated under the Companies Act 2006 see PARA 228. As to incorporation and registration under the Companies Act 2006 see PARA 111 et seq; and as to the re-registration of a private company as a public company under the Companies Act 2006 see PARAS 168-172.

3 le the date by which all the provisions of the Companies Act 2006 that affect the law in England and Wales had come into force: see PARA 17 note 1. Companies formed and registered between 1 October 2007 and 30 September 2009, which elected to adopt Table A articles, would have adopted such articles that had been specifically amended in order to make the articles compatible with the requirements of the Companies Act 2006 ('compatible articles'): see the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805 (amended by SI 1985/1052; SI 2000/3373; SI 2007/2541; SI 2007/2826; SI 2008/739); and see the Companies (Tables A to F) (Amendment) Regulations 2007, SI 2007/2541 (applicable to a company registered on or after 1 October 2007 and before 1 October 2009 which adopted Table A or Table C as its articles of association); the Companies (Tables A to F) (Amendment) (No. 2) Regulations 2007, SI 2007/2826 (applicable to a company registered on or after 1 October 2007 and before 1 October 2009 which adopted Table A as its articles of association); and the Companies (Tables A to F) (Amendment) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/739 (applicable to a company registered on or after 6 April 2008 and before 1 October 2009 which adopted Table C or Table E as its articles of association). The requirement for compatibility also led, in some instances, to articles which had appeared in the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, being revoked.

4 See the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805; and PARA 18. The expressions 'Table A', 'Table B' etc were not formally defined in statute, although they were referred to in statute, eg in the Companies Act 1985 s 8 (repealed).

The regulations in the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, reg 2, Schedule Table A and the forms in Schedule Tables B, C, D, E and F were the regulations and forms of memorandum and articles of association prescribed for the purposes of the Companies Act 1985 ss 3, 8 (repealed): see the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, reg 2. The Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, Schedule, Table A contains a model set of regulations for the management of a company limited by shares; Table B sets out the model memorandum of association for a private company limited by shares; and Table F sets out the model memorandum of association for a public company limited by shares. The Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, Schedule, Table C sets out the model memorandum of association for a company limited by guarantee and not having a share capital and applies modified Table A as articles of association; Table D Pts I-III sets out the model memorandum of association for a public or private company limited by guarantee and having a share capital and applies unmodified Table A as articles of association; and Table E sets out the model memorandum of association for an unlimited company having a share capital and applies modified Table A as articles of association. As to the meanings of 'company limited by guarantee', 'company limited by shares', 'private company', 'public company' and 'unlimited company' see PARA 102. As to the meanings of 'company having a share capital' and 'share capital' see PARA 1042.

As to the statutory authority of Table A see Re Barnard's Banking Co, ex p Contract Corp'n (1867) 3 Ch App 105 at 113-114 per Lord Cairns LJ; Re Pyle Works (1890) 44 ChD 534 at 571, CA; Lock v Queensland Investment and Land Mortgage Co [1896] AC 461, HL; New Balkis Eersteling Ltd v Randt Gold Mining Co [1904] AC 165 at 167, HL, per Lord Davey; Trevor v Whitworth (1887) 12 App Cas 409, HL. Case law that was applicable to Table A can be assumed generally to apply to model articles prescribed under the Companies Act 2006: see eg the cases cited in PARA 228 notes 5, 13, 16.

6 See PARA 18 note 4.

7 Nothing in the Companies Act 2006 affects the application in relation to an existing company of Table B in the Joint Stock Companies Act 1856 or Table A in the former Companies Acts or the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805: see the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, art 5, Sch 2 para 1; and PARA 18. As to the general savings made for existing companies under the Companies Act 2006 see PARA 18. As to the general provision made for continuity in company law see PARA 17. As to the formal adoption of amended articles see PARA 232 et seq. There is, of course, nothing to prevent a company from replacing their existing articles (whether they are based on default articles of previous vintage or not) with the model articles prescribed for the purposes of the Companies Act 2006, so long as the articles are altered in accordance with s 21: see PARA 232 et seq.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(6) THE COMPANY CONSTITUTION/(iii) Resolutions and Agreements relating to Constitution/231. Resolutions and agreements affecting a company's constitution.

(iii) Resolutions and Agreements relating to Constitution

231. Resolutions and agreements affecting a company's constitution.

A copy of every resolution or agreement¹ which falls under any of heads (1) to (5) below², namely:

- 533 (1) any special resolution³;
- 534 (2) any resolution or agreement agreed to by all the members of a company⁴ that, if not so agreed to, would not have been effective for its purpose unless passed as a special resolution⁵;
- 535 (3) any resolution or agreement agreed to by all the members of a class of shareholders⁶ that, if not so agreed to, would not have been effective for its purpose unless passed by some particular majority or otherwise in some particular manner⁷;
- 536 (4) any resolution or agreement that effectively binds all members of a class of shareholders though not agreed to by all those members⁸;
- 537 (5) any other resolution or agreement which affects a company's constitution⁹ by virtue of any enactment¹⁰, or (in the case of a resolution or agreement that is not in writing) a written memorandum setting out its terms, must be forwarded to the registrar of companies¹¹ within 15 days after it is passed or made¹².

If a company fails to comply with this requirement¹³, an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer of the company who is in default¹⁴; and any person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale¹⁵ and (for continued contravention) a daily default fine¹⁶ not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale¹⁷.

(iv) Alterations to Constitution

A. ALTERATION OF ARTICLES BY MEMBERS' RESOLUTION

232. How amendment of articles is effected.

A company¹ may amend its articles of association² by special resolution³.

A member⁴ of a company is not bound by any such alteration to its articles after the date on which he became a member⁵, if and so far as the alteration either requires him to take or subscribe for more shares⁶ than the number held by him at the date on which the alteration is made, or in any way increases his liability as at that date to contribute to the company's share capital⁷ or otherwise to pay money to the company, subject to agreement⁸.

The power of alteration, which is statutory, cannot be modified by the articles⁹. Nor can a company contract itself out of the power to alter its articles¹⁰, even by the express terms of the articles¹¹. The conferring of special voting rights on a particular class of shares, which would in effect make it impossible to alter the articles without the consent of a particular person, would not, however, be a provision depriving the company of the power to alter the articles; it is otherwise if the provisions were merely that no alteration should be made without the consent of a particular person¹².

Directors cannot by resolution alter the articles¹³; but the words 'articles of association' as used in a contract may refer to provisions put forward by the company as its articles even if they have not been validly adopted¹⁴.

1 As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

2 As to the meaning of references to a company's 'articles' see PARA 228 note 2. As to a company's articles of association generally see PARA 228 et seq. As to the amendment of 'entrenched provisions': see PARA 233. As to alterations to a company's articles that are required to be made when the company alters its status by means of re-registration see PARA 167 et seq.

3 Companies Act 2006 s 21(1). As to the meaning of 'special resolution' see PARA 614. The registrar of companies must be sent a copy of the amended articles (see PARA 236); and he has power to issue a notice to comply where a company has failed to observe the procedural requirements with respect to amended articles (see PARA 237). See also PARA 145. See also the Companies Act 2006 (Consequential Amendments, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2009, SI 2009/1941, art 5; and PARA 236.

If the company which is proposing to alter its articles is a charity whose objects clause is being altered thus, s 21(1) is subject, in England and Wales, to the procedure that must be observed in such cases (ie it is subject to the Charities Act 1993 s 64: see CHARITIES vol 8 (2010) PARA 238): see the Companies Act 2006 s 21(2). As to the meanings of 'England' and 'Wales' see PARA 1 note 5. As to the statement of a company's objects see PARA 240.

4 As to the meaning of 'member' see PARA 321.

5 Ie except where the member agrees in writing, either before or after the alteration is made, to be bound by the alteration: see the Companies Act 2006 s 25(2); and PARA 367.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(6) THE COMPANY CONSTITUTION/(iv) Alterations to Constitution/A. ALTERATION OF ARTICLES BY MEMBERS' RESOLUTION/233. Entrenched provisions of the articles.

233. Entrenched provisions of the articles.

The articles¹ of a company² may contain provision ('provision for entrenchment') to the effect that specified provisions of the articles may be amended or repealed³ only if conditions are met, or procedures are complied with, that are more restrictive than those applicable in the case of a special resolution⁴. As from a day to be appointed⁵, provision for entrenchment may only be made in this way either in the company's articles on formation, or by an amendment of the company's articles agreed to by all the members of the company⁶. Provision for entrenchment does not prevent amendment of the company's articles by agreement of all the members of the company⁷, or by order of a court or other authority having power to alter the company's articles⁸.

Where a company's articles: (1) on formation contain provision for entrenchment⁹; (2) are amended so as to include such provision¹⁰; or (3) are altered by order of a court or other authority so as to restrict or exclude the power of the company to amend its articles¹¹, the company must give notice of that fact to the registrar of companies¹². Similarly, where a company's articles: (a) are amended so as to remove provision for entrenchment¹³; or (b) are altered by order of a court or other authority so as to remove such provision¹⁴, or so as to remove any other restriction on, or any exclusion of, the power of the company to amend its articles¹⁵, the company must give notice of that fact to the registrar¹⁶.

Where a company's articles are subject either to provision for entrenchment¹⁷, or to an order of a court or other authority restricting or excluding the company's power to amend the articles¹⁸, if the company amends its articles¹⁹, and is required to send to the registrar a document making or evidencing the amendment²⁰, then the company must deliver with that document a statement of compliance²¹. The statement of compliance required is a statement certifying that the amendment has been made in accordance with the company's articles and, where relevant, any applicable order of a court or other authority²². The registrar may rely on the statement of compliance as sufficient evidence of the matters stated in it²³.

234. Rectification of mistake in company's articles of association.

A mistake in a company's articles of association¹ may be rectified only by altering the articles by special resolution² pursuant to the Companies Act 2006³; the court will not rectify the mistake in the course of proceedings⁴. A special resolution altering the articles may be followed immediately at the same meeting by a resolution operating under the articles as so altered⁵. Where the Companies Act 2006 requires the articles to give the necessary power, as in cases of a public company issuing redeemable shares⁶, the resolution purporting to exercise the power is of no avail unless the power is already in the articles or has been added by special resolution⁷.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(6) THE COMPANY CONSTITUTION/(iv) Alterations to Constitution/A. ALTERATION OF ARTICLES BY MEMBERS' RESOLUTION/235. How far company's articles of association may be altered.

235. How far company's articles of association may be altered.

Any alterations to a company's articles¹ must be made in good faith for the benefit of the company as a whole², that is of the corporators as a general body³. Subject to this, articles may be freely altered. It is for the shareholders and not the court to determine whether or not the alteration is for the benefit of the company; and the court will not readily interfere with an alteration made in good faith unless it is of such a character that no reasonable person could have regarded it as made for the benefit of the company⁴. The alteration may affect the rights of a member as between himself and the company by retrospective operation, since the shares are held subject to the statutory power of altering the articles⁵.

If a contract, whether with a member or an outsider, is so drawn as by its terms or implication to prohibit the company from altering its articles to the prejudice of the other contracting party, then, although the company cannot be precluded from altering its articles, thereby giving itself power to act upon the provisions of the altered articles, so to act may nevertheless be a breach of the contract⁶.

The articles cannot be so altered as to increase the liability of a member to contribute to share capital or otherwise to pay money to the company without his consent⁷; and a special resolution altering articles of association may be impeached if its effect is to discriminate between the majority of shareholders and the minority shareholders so as to give the former an advantage of which the latter are deprived⁸. In a case where an order by the court by way of protection of a member of the company against unfair prejudice⁹ requires the company not to make any, or any specified, alteration in its articles, the company has no power without leave of the court to make any such alteration¹⁰.

In British Murac Syndicate Ltd v Alperton Rubber Co Ltd [1915] 2 Ch 186, an injunction was granted to restrain an alteration of articles which would have involved a breach of contract; this was directly opposed to the decision in Punt v Symons & Co Ltd [1903] 2 Ch 506 (which was treated as being overruled by Baily v British Equitable Assurance Co [1904] 1 Ch 374, CA; revsd on other grounds sub nom British Equitable Assurance Co Ltd v Baily [1906] AC 35, HL), where it was held that a company could not contract itself out of its statutory powers of altering its articles as against an outside contractor (see Re Barrow Haematite Steel Co (1888) 39 ChD 582). However, the judgment of the Court of Appeal in Baily v British Equitable Assurance Co did not cite Punt v Symons & Co Ltd, and seems only to restate the position that a company cannot justify a breach of contract by such alteration. It is implicit in both the majority and minority opinions in Southern Foundries (1926) Ltd v Shirlaw that Punt v Symons & Co Ltd was correct (see Southern Foundries (1926) Ltd v Shirlaw at 713, 717 and 452, 454 per Viscount Maugham, at 722 and 458 per Lord Wright, at 731 and 464 per Lord Romer, and at 739-740 and 468-469 per Lord Porter), and that British Murac Syndicate Ltd v Alperton Rubber Co Ltd was wrongly decided (see Southern Foundries (1926) Ltd v Shirlaw at 740 and 469 per Lord Porter). 3 As to the meaning of 'registrar of companies' see PARA 131 note 2. As to the delivery of documents to the registrar see PARA 141; and as to the requirements generally for the proper delivery of documents to the registrar see PARA 142.

4 The provisions of the Companies Act 2006 s 26 do not require a company to set out in its articles any provisions of model articles that either are applied by the articles, or apply by virtue of s 20 (default application of model articles) (see PARA 228): s 26(2). The provisions of s 26 apply to unregistered companies by virtue of the Unregistered Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2436, reg 3, Sch 1 para 1, but as modified thereby: see PARA 1666. As to the meaning of 'unregistered company' see PARA 1665.

Nothing in the Companies Act 2006 s 28 (see PARA 228) requires a company to give notice to the registrar of an alteration of its articles: see the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, art 5, Sch 2 para 8. A company whose articles are deemed by virtue of the Companies Act 2006 s 28 to contain provisions formerly in its memorandum may comply with any obligation to send a person a copy of its articles either: (1) by appending to a copy of the other provisions of the articles a copy of the provisions of its old-style memorandum that are deemed to be provisions of the articles (see the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, Sch 2 para 9(1)(a)); or (2) by sending together with a copy of the other provisions of the articles a copy of its old-style memorandum indicating the provisions that are deemed to be provisions of the articles (see Sch 2 para 9(1)(b)). For these purposes, references to a company's 'old-style memorandum' are (in the case of an existing company) to its memorandum of association as it stood immediately before 1 October 2009, and (in the case of a transitional company) to its memorandum of association as it stood on its registration or re-registration (as the case may be) apart from the operation of the Companies Act 2006 s 28: see the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, Sch 2 para 9(2). As to the meaning of 'existing company' for these purposes see PARA 18 note 2; and as to the meaning of 'transitional company' for these purposes see PARA 17 note 4.

Where, in the case of an existing or transitional company, the company's articles are deemed to contain a statement of its name by virtue of the Companies Act 2006 s 28, and the company changes its name (by any means) on or after 1 October 2009 the company is not required to send a copy of its articles to the registrar in accordance with s 26: see the Companies Act 2006 (Consequential Amendments, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2009, SI 2009/1941, art 5(1), (4). Where the company, in complying with any obligation to send a person a copy of its articles, relies on the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, Sch 2 para 9(1)(a) (see head (1) above) or Sch 2 para 9(1)(b) (see head (2) above), it must (if it relies on Sch 2 para 9(1)(a)) omit the provision stating the company's former name or (if it relies on Sch 2 para 9(1)(b)) indicate that the provision stating the company's former name is no longer effective: see the Companies Act 2006 (Consequential Amendments, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2009, SI 2009/1941, art 5(5). As to the meaning of 'existing company' for these purposes see PARA 18 note 2; definition applied by art 5(6). As to the meaning of 'transitional company' for these purposes see PARA 17 note 4; definition applied by art 5(6).

5 Companies Act 2006 s 26(1). Any amendment of the company's articles (including every resolution or agreement required to be embodied in or annexed to copies of the company's articles issued by the company) and, after any amendment of the company's articles, the text of the articles as amended are subject to the disclosure requirements in s 1078: see PARA 144.

6 If it fails to comply with the Companies Act 2006 s 26: see s 26(3).

7 Companies Act 2006 s 26(3). As to the meaning of 'officer' see PARA 607; and as to the meaning of 'officer in default' see PARA 315.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(6) THE COMPANY CONSTITUTION/(iv) Alterations to Constitution/A. ALTERATION OF ARTICLES BY MEMBERS' RESOLUTION/237. Registrar's notice to comply in case of failure with respect to amended articles.

237. Registrar's notice to comply in case of failure with respect to amended articles.

If it appears to the registrar of companies¹ that a company has failed to comply with any enactment² requiring it either to send to the registrar a document³ making or evidencing an alteration in the company's articles⁴, or to send to the registrar a copy of the company's articles as amended⁵, the registrar may give notice to the company requiring it to comply⁶. The notice must state the date on which it is issued⁷, and require the company to comply within 28 days from that date⁸.

If the company complies with the notice within the specified time, no criminal proceedings may be brought in respect of the failure to comply with the relevant enactment⁹.

However, if the company does not comply with the notice within the specified time, it is liable to a civil penalty of £200¹⁰; and this is in addition to any liability to criminal proceedings in respect of the failure¹¹ to comply with the relevant enactment¹². The penalty may be recovered by the registrar and is to be paid into the Consolidated Fund¹³.

Notice to registrar required where company's constitution altered by enactment.

B. ALTERATION OF CONSTITUTION BY ENACTMENT OR ORDER

238. Notice to registrar required where company's constitution altered by enactment.

Where a company's constitution¹ is altered by an enactment², other than an enactment amending the general law, the company must give notice of the alteration to the registrar of companies³, specifying the enactment, not later than 15 days after the enactment comes into force⁴. In the case of a special enactment⁵, the notice must be accompanied by a copy of the enactment⁶.

If the enactment amends either the company's articles⁷, or a resolution or agreement which affects the company's constitution⁸, the notice must be accompanied by a copy of the company's articles, or the resolution or agreement in question, as amended⁹.

If a company fails to comply with this requirement¹⁰, an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer of the company who is in default¹¹; and any person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale¹² and (for continued contravention) a daily default fine¹³ not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale¹⁴.

3 As to the meaning of 'registrar of companies' see PARA 131 note 2. As to the delivery of documents to the registrar see PARA 141; and as to the requirements generally for the proper delivery of documents to the registrar see PARA 142.

4 Companies Act 2006 s 34(1), (2). A company must, on request by any member, send to him a copy of any document required to be sent to the registrar of companies under s 34(2): see s 32(1)(c); and PARA 242. As to the meaning of 'member' see PARA 321. The provisions of s 34 apply to unregistered companies by virtue of the Unregistered Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2436, reg 3, Sch 1 para 2, but as modified thereby: see PARA 1666. As to the meaning of 'unregistered company' see PARA 1665.

5 For these purposes, a 'special enactment' means an enactment that is not a public general enactment, and includes an Act for confirming a provisional order, any provision of a public general Act in relation to the passing of which any of the standing orders of the House of Lords or the House of Commons relating to Private Business applied, or any enactment to the extent that it is incorporated in or applied for the purposes of a special enactment: Companies Act 2006 s 34(4). Notice to registrar required where company's constitution altered by order.

239. Notice to registrar required where company's constitution altered by order.

Where a company's constitution¹ is altered by an order of a court or other authority, the company must give notice to the registrar of companies² of the alteration not later than 15 days after the alteration takes effect³.

The notice must be accompanied by a copy of the order⁴ and, if the order amends either the company's articles⁵, or a resolution or agreement which affects a company's constitution⁶, the notice must be accompanied by a copy of the company's articles, or the resolution or agreement in question, as amended⁷.

If a company fails to comply with this requirement⁸, an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer of the company who is in default⁹; and any person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale¹⁰ and (for continued contravention) a daily default fine¹¹ not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale¹².

(v) Stating a Company's Objects

240. Statement of company's objects.

Unless the articles of association¹ of a company² specifically restrict the objects of the company, its objects are unrestricted³.

Where a company amends its articles⁴ so as to add, remove or alter a statement of the company's objects⁵:

- 538 (1) it must give notice to the registrar of companies⁶;
- 539 (2) on receipt of the notice, the registrar must register it⁷; and
- 540 (3) the amendment is not effective until entry of that notice on the register⁸.

Any such amendment does not affect any rights or obligations of the company or render defective any legal proceedings by or against it⁹.

1 As to the meaning of references to 'articles' see PARA 228 note 2. As to articles of association generally see PARA 228 et seq.

2 As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

3 Companies Act 2006 s 31(1). This is a change from the situation that pertained under the Companies Act 1985 and earlier legislation where a company was obliged to state its objects in the memorandum of association. The role of the memorandum of association has been altered fundamentally under the Companies Act 2006, and provisions that immediately before 1 October 2009 were contained in a company's memorandum but are not provisions of the kind mentioned in the Companies Act 2006 s 8 are to be treated after that date as provisions of the company's articles: see s 28(1); and PARA 228. 1 October 2009 is the date by which s 8 had come fully into force: see the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, art 3(b). Where a company's objects are unrestricted, so is its capacity: see PARA 252. As to the consequences that may arise, in terms of a company's capacity to act, from stating a company's objects (or, in the case of companies formed before the Companies Act 2006 came into effect, from continuing to operate under existing objects) see the cases cited in PARAS 257-258.

4 As to provision made for the alteration of articles see PARA 232 et seq.

5 Companies Act 2006 s 31(2). The need to add, remove or alter a statement of the company's objects will be most applicable to existing companies which, because of s 28 (see PARA 228), will have objects in their articles.

In the case of a company that is a charity, the provisions of s 31 have effect subject to, in England and Wales, the Charities Act 1993 s 64 (see CHARITIES vol 8 (2010) PARA 238): see the Companies Act 2006 s 31(4). As to the meanings of 'England' and 'Wales' see PARA 1 note 5.

As to the delivery of documents to the registrar see PARA 141; and as to the requirements generally for the proper delivery of documents to the registrar see PARA 142. Any amendment of the company's articles (including every resolution or agreement required to be embodied in or annexed to copies of the company's articles issued by the company) is subject to the disclosure requirements in the Companies Act 2006 s 1078: see PARA 144.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(6) THE COMPANY CONSTITUTION/(vi) Constitutional Documents issued by or provided by the Company/241. Documents to be incorporated in or accompany copies of articles issued by company.

(vi) Constitutional Documents issued by or provided by the Company

241. Documents to be incorporated in or accompany copies of articles issued by company.

Every copy of a company's articles¹ issued by the company must be accompanied by²:

- 541 (1) a copy of any resolution or agreement³ relating to the company which affects its constitution⁴;
- 542 (2) where the company has been required to give notice to the registrar of companies⁵ under the provisions that apply where a company's constitution is altered by an enactment (other than an enactment amending the general law)⁶, a statement that the enactment in question alters the effect of the company's constitution⁷;
- 543 (3) where the company's constitution is altered by a special enactment⁸, a copy of the enactment⁹; and
- 544 (4) a copy of any order required to be sent to the registrar¹⁰ under the provisions that apply where a company's constitution is altered by an order of a court or other authority¹¹.

This provision does not require the articles to be accompanied by a copy of a document or by a statement if the effect of the resolution, agreement, enactment or order (as the case may be) on the company's constitution has been incorporated into the articles by amendment¹², or if the resolution, agreement, enactment or order (as the case may be) is not for the time being in force¹³.

If a company fails to comply with this requirement¹⁴, an offence is committed by every officer of the company who is in default¹⁵; and any person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale¹⁶ for each occasion on which copies are issued, or, as the case may be, requested¹⁷.

2 Companies Act 2006 s 36(1).

A company whose articles are deemed by virtue of the Companies Act 2006 s 28 (see PARA 228) to contain provisions formerly in its memorandum may comply with any obligation to send a person a copy of its articles either by appending to a copy of the other provisions of the articles a copy of the provisions of its old-style memorandum that are deemed to be provisions of the articles, or by sending together with a copy of the other provisions of the articles a copy of its old-style memorandum indicating the provisions that are deemed to be provisions of the articles: see the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, Sch 2 para 9(1). 242. Copies of constitutional documents to be provided to members.

A company¹ must, on request by any member², send to him the following documents³:

- 545 (1) an up-to-date copy of the company's articles of association⁴;
- 546 (2) a copy of any resolution or agreement⁵ relating to the company which affects its constitution⁶ and that is for the time being in force⁷;
- 547 (3) a copy of any document required to be sent to the registrar of companies⁸ under the provisions that apply where a company's constitution is altered either by an enactment (other than an enactment amending the general law)⁹ or by an order of a court or other authority¹⁰;
- 548 (4) a copy of any court order which either sanctions a compromise or arrangement¹¹ or facilitates a reconstruction or amalgamation¹²;
- 549 (5) a copy of any court order, made under the court's powers to protect members against unfair prejudice¹³, that alters the company's constitution¹⁴;

- 550 (6) a copy of the company's current certificate of incorporation¹⁵, and of any past certificates of incorporation¹⁶;
- 551 (7) in the case of a company with a share capital¹⁷, a current statement of capital¹⁸;
- 552 (8) in the case of a company limited by guarantee¹⁹, a copy of the statement of guarantee²⁰.

If a company makes default in complying with these requirements²¹, an offence is committed by every officer of the company who is in default²²; and any person guilty of such an offence is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale²³.

(vii) Effect of Company's Constitution

243. Binding as if under seal.

The provisions of a company's constitution¹ bind the company and its members² to the same extent as if there were covenants on the part of the company and of each member to observe those provisions³. By virtue of this, the constitution becomes a contract between the company and its members; it is a 'statutory contract' of a special nature with its own distinctive features⁴.

Once a company's articles are registered⁵, the court has no power to rectify them even if they do not accord with what is proved to be the concurrent intention of the members⁶. The articles should, however, be regarded as a business document and should be construed so as to give them reasonable business efficacy⁷, where a construction tending to that result is admissible on the language of the articles, in preference to a result which would or might prove unworkable⁸. A purely constructional implication is not precluded but the court will not imply a term from extrinsic circumstances⁹.

Money payable by a member to the company under its constitution is a debt due from him to the company¹⁰; and it is¹¹ of the nature of an ordinary contract debt¹².

3 Companies Act 2006 s 33(1). This provision gives effect to Hickman v Kent or Romney Marsh Sheep Breeders' Association [1915] 1 Ch 881 (see PARA 244).

The provision made by the Companies Act 2006 s 33(1) is subject to any overriding provisions of the Companies Act 2006 and may be modified by separate shareholder agreements and by amendment under s 21(1) (see PARA 232). As to shareholders' agreements see also PARA 251. In the case of any contract binding on a company and its members under s 33, the Contracts (Rights of Third Parties) Act 1999 s 1 (see CONTRACT) confers no rights on a third party: s 6(2) (amended by SI 2009/1941).

7 The 'business efficacy' test is merely one way of stating the proposition that the implication of a term is an exercise in the construction of the instrument as a whole: Attorney General of Belize v Belize Telecom Ltd [2009] UKPC 10 at [19], [2009] 2 All ER 1127 at [19] (construction of the articles of association of Belize Telecom Ltd). It follows that in every case in which it is said that some provision ought to be implied in an instrument, the question for the court is whether such a provision would spell out in express words what the instrument, read against the relevant background, would reasonably be understood to mean; there is only one question: is that what the instrument, read as a whole against the relevant background, would reasonably be understood to mean?: see Attorney General of Belize v Belize Telecom Ltd at [21]. The fact that any proposed implied term would be inequitable or unreasonable, or contradict what the parties have expressly said, or is incapable of clear expression, are all good reasons for saying that a reasonable man would not have understood that to be what the instrument meant: see Attorney General of Belize v Belize Telecom Ltd at [23], [27]. The approach to the question when to imply a term into a contract or other instrument which is set out in Attorney General of Belize v Belize Telecom Ltd has been endorsed in Mediterranean Salvage and Towage Ltd v Seamar Trading and Commerce Inc, The Reborn [2009] EWCA Civ 531 at [8]-[18], [2009] All ER (D) 83 (Jun) at [8]-[18] per Lord Clarke of Stone-cum-Ebony MR (considering terms of a charterparty).

See also Folkes Group plc v Alexander [2002] EWHC 51 (Ch), [2002] 2 BCLC 254 (court used additional words to construe an amended article whose natural and ordinary meaning gave a result so absurd that something had to have gone seriously wrong with its drafting); BWE International Ltd v Jones [2003] EWCA Civ 298, [2004] 1 BCLC 406; Davenport v Cream Holdings Ltd [2008] EWCA Civ 1363, [2008] All ER (D) 89 (Dec) (construction of articles proposed by defendant produced consequences so surprising that it was doubtful that they could have been within the contemplation of the parties).

244. How far articles constitute a contract.

The question of how far a company's articles¹ constitute a binding contract (on the one hand, between a company and its members² and, on the other hand, between its members inter se) is one of great difficulty and the principles are not altogether clear³. It has, however, been held that the contractual force given to the articles of association is limited to those provisions which apply to the relationship of members in their capacity as members and does not extend to those provisions which govern the relationship of a company and its directors⁴ as such⁵.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(6) THE COMPANY CONSTITUTION/(vii) Effect of Company's Constitution/245. Contract between company and member.

245. Contract between company and member.

A company's articles of association¹ constitute a contract between the company and a member² in respect of his rights³ and liabilities as a shareholder⁴; and a company may sue a member and a member may sue a company to enforce and restrain breaches of the regulations contained in the articles dealing with such matters⁵. The purpose of the articles is to define the position of the shareholder as a shareholder, not to bind him in his capacity as an individual⁶. The articles do not constitute a contract between the company and a member in respect of rights and liabilities which he has in a capacity other than that of member, whether he becomes a member originally or subsequently⁷; and, where such rights and liabilities are the subject of a written agreement, the articles will not be imported unless they are referred to⁸.

Where the articles provide that the company on incorporation is to enter into an agreement for the purchase of property and for the appointment of the vendor as a director⁹, the vendor who becomes a shareholder cannot sue nor can any person claiming through the vendor sue or rely on the articles as constituting a contract¹⁰; and, where the articles provide that a solicitor who subsequently becomes a shareholder is to be the solicitor of the company, he cannot sue the company on the articles¹¹. Similarly, where the articles provide that a director is to hold a certain number of shares¹², the provision does not constitute an agreement on his part to take the shares, even though he is already a member of the company¹³.

The articles may be evidence of the terms upon which services are rendered to the company¹⁴; thus an agreement on the part of a director to act on the terms as to qualification contained in the articles¹⁵, or on the part of the company to remunerate its directors on the terms of the articles¹⁶, may be inferred from the subsequent action of the parties.

Any contract, so far as it relates to the constitution of the company, or the rights or obligations of its incorporators or members, is exempt from the prohibitions on exclusion of liability imposed by the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977¹⁷.

246. Contract between members inter se.

While a company's articles of association¹ regulate the rights of the members² inter se, the older authorities support the view that they do not constitute a contract between the members inter se, but only a contract between the company and its members³. Therefore, the rights and liabilities of members as members under the articles may be enforced by or against the members only through the company⁴. However, more recent authorities support the direct enforcement by members of rights as members conferred by the articles⁵.

248. Notice of constitution.

Members of a company¹ are deemed to be aware of the contents of the company's constitution², and to understand its meaning³. In favour of a person dealing with a company⁶ in good faith, the power of the directors⁷ to bind the company, or authorise others to do so, is deemed to be free of any limitation under the company's constitution⁸; and such a person dealing with a company is not bound to inquire as to any limitation on the powers of the directors to bind the company or authorise others to do so, he is presumed to have acted in good faith unless the contrary is proved, and he is not to be regarded as acting in bad faith by reason only of his knowing that an act is beyond the powers of the directors under the company's constitution⁹.

249. Articles at variance with statutory provision.

Any provision in a company's articles¹ which is at variance with the provisions of the Companies Act 2006 is void, as, for example, an article purporting to authorise a company to forfeit, instead of selling, shares for debts due from a member otherwise than as a contributory²; to pay dividends out of capital or allot shares at a discount³; to limit the right of a member to present a winding-up petition⁴; to shut dissentient shareholders⁵ out of their statutory rights on a reconstruction of the company⁶; to fetter the power of the company to alter its articles⁷, or to increase its share capital⁸, or to register a transferee of shares without a proper instrument of transfer having been delivered⁹, or to bar a shareholder from petitioning for relief under the provisions which govern unfairly prejudicial conduct¹⁰.

A provision in any article which is in accordance with the model articles¹¹ is valid (subject to any subsequent legislation), as the model articles have statutory authority¹².

250. Restrictions on articles of association under the Companies Act 2006.

In certain cases, the Companies Act 2006 provides that certain provisions contained in the articles of association¹ are to be void or subject to restriction. Thus the production to a company of any document which is by law sufficient evidence of probate of the will, or letters of administration of the estate, or confirmation as executor of a deceased person, must be accepted by the company as sufficient evidence of the grant, notwithstanding anything in its articles²; and any provision of the company's articles is void in so far as it would have the effect of inhibiting or denying members' rights that are guaranteed under the Companies Act 2006³.

1 As to a company's articles of association generally see PARA 228 et seq.

2 See the Companies Act 2006 s 774; and PARA 434.

251. Shareholders' agreements.

Individual shareholders¹ may deal with their own interests by contract in such way as they may think fit; but such contracts, whether made by all or some only of the shareholders, create personal obligations, or a personal exception against themselves only, and do not become a regulation of the company or binding on the transferees of the parties to it or upon new or non-assenting shareholders².

Thus although a provision in a company's articles of association³ which restricts the company's statutory power to alter the articles⁴ or a formal undertaking by the company to that effect, would be invalid⁵, an agreement outside the articles between shareholders as to how they are to exercise their voting rights on a resolution to alter the articles would not necessarily be so⁶.

(7) CAPACITY

(i) In general

252. Capacity, and limits on capacity, deriving from corporate status.

Under the Companies Act 2006, a company¹ may be incorporated² for carrying out any lawful purpose³.

Moreover, a company is subject to the common law and to statutory provisions which affect the conduct of its affairs or business⁴, like any other person⁵, and may come within the scope of special statutory restrictions as, for example, those enabling restriction or winding-up orders to be made if the business is carried on by or on behalf of enemies or enemy subjects⁶ or those restricting the transfer of businesses abroad⁷, or those restricting insolvency proceedings or other legal processes while the company is in administration⁸.

Unless it is a private company⁹, a company registered under the Companies Act 2006 does not acquire the right to exercise all its powers immediately on incorporation, for it must comply with certain statutory requirements before it may either properly commence business or exercise its borrowing powers or enter into binding contracts¹⁰.

1 As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

2 As to incorporation upon registration under the Companies Act 2006 see PARA 119 et seq.

3 See the Companies Act 2006 s 7(2); and PARA 102. As to companies which are formed for an illegal purpose see PARA 106 et seq. The objects of a company are unrestricted unless its articles of association specifically restrict them: see s 31; and PARA 240. This is a change from the situation that pertained under the Companies Act 1985 where a company was obliged to state its objects in the memorandum of association (the role of which has been altered fundamentally under the Companies Act 2006). The case law that is cited in PARA 257 et seq derives from the time when the statement of a company's objects was a requirement.

4 See PARAS 254-256.

5 A limited company may be a 'respectable and responsible person' within the meaning of a proviso against assigning a lease without the landlord's consent: Willmott v London Road Car Co Ltd [1910] 2 Ch 525, CA; Re Greater London Properties Ltd's Lease, Taylor Bros (Grocers) Ltd v Covent Garden Properties Co Ltd [1959] 1 All ER 728, [1959] 1 WLR 503.

253. Company exceeding statutory powers.

A company¹, even if apparently authorised to do so by its constitution², cannot lawfully do anything beyond the powers given by the Companies Acts³. Thus it cannot, for example⁴:

- 553 (1) purchase its own shares⁵ save in compliance with the statutory requirements⁶; or
- 554 (2) in the case of a public company, give financial assistance for the purchase of its shares⁷; or
- 555 (3) reduce or repay capital without complying with the statutory requirements⁸; or
- 556 (4) distribute bonus shares gratuitously⁹; or
- 557 (5) allot shares at a discount¹⁰; or
- 558 (6) pay dividends on shares out of capital¹¹; or
- 559 (7) make presents to directors out of capital¹²; or
- 560 (8) make payments for the benefit of a section only of the shareholders¹³, such as paying the costs of a prosecution for libel¹⁴ or the costs of pursuing proceedings not instituted by itself, even though it is for the company's benefit¹⁵.

Many powers are conferred on a company¹ by the Companies Act 2006 unless they are restricted or excluded by the company's articles of association²; a small number of other powers are subject to authorisation.

For example, the following powers are conferred unless they are excluded or restricted, namely the power³:

561 (1) to increase its share capital⁴ by sub-dividing its shares (or any of them) into shares of a smaller nominal amount⁵ than its existing shares, or by consolidating and dividing all or any of its share capital into shares of a larger nominal amount than its existing shares⁶, or to redenominate its share capital (or any class of its share capital) by converting shares from having a fixed nominal value in one currency to having a fixed nominal value in another currency⁷;

562 (2) to reduce its share capital⁸;

563 (3) to issue redeemable shares, if a private company⁹;

564 (4) to purchase its own shares¹⁰.

The following powers are subject to authorisation, namely the power¹¹:

- 565 (a) to pay commission to a person in consideration of his subscribing or agreeing to subscribe (whether absolutely or conditionally) for shares in the company, or procuring or agreeing to procure subscriptions (whether absolute or conditional) for shares in the company¹²;
- 566 (b) to make provision for different amounts to be paid on its shares, with proportionate dividends¹³;
- 567 (c) to issue redeemable shares, if a public company¹⁴;
- 568 (d) to issue share warrants to bearer¹⁵;
- 569 (e) to provide, by a resolution of its directors¹⁶, for employees on cessation or transfer of the business of the company or any of its subsidiaries¹⁷.

(ii) Company's Powers

A. IN GENERAL

256. Objects and capacity.

Previously, the capacity of a company was determined by the breadth of the company's objects as expressed in the company's memorandum of association¹, and acts beyond those objects were ultra vires and void².

The Companies Act 2006 provides that, unless a company's articles³ specifically restrict the objects of the company⁴, its objects are unrestricted⁵. A company with unrestricted objects has an unrestricted capacity other than restrictions imposed by the requirements of the Companies Act 2006 and the general law⁶. However, it remains the duty of the directors to observe any limitation on their powers, whether flowing from the company's constitution or otherwise⁷.

B. STATEMENT OF COMPANY'S OBJECTS

257. Restricting a company's objects.

For companies formed under the Companies Act 2006¹, the company's objects are unrestricted², unless the company's articles³ specifically restrict them⁴.

Existing companies⁵ were required to have an objects clause in the memorandum of association and those clauses now are treated as forming part of the company's articles⁶. Those clauses, if retained⁷, would be regarded, it seems, as restricting the company's objects, although the original drafting of such clauses was intended to expand and not to restrict a company's capacity⁸.

Whether the company is a company formed under the Companies Act 2006 which chooses to restrict its objects, or is a company formed under the Companies Act 1985 or earlier enactments which retains its objects clause, the objects clause operates only to limit the powers of the directors⁹, for the validity of an act done by the company cannot be called into question on the ground of a lack of capacity by reason of anything in the company's constitution¹⁰. No issue of ultra vires may be raised¹¹, but it remains the duty of the directors of a company (now a statutory duty) to act in accordance with the constitution and to only exercise powers for the purposes for which they are conferred¹². The authorities on ultra vires¹³, though obsolete on that issue, may remain of some value in determining whether the directors have complied with that duty.

Persons dealing with the company in good faith are afforded a considerable measure of statutory protection against limitations on the directors' powers to bind the company¹⁴.

258. Construction of objects adopted by company.

The ordinary rules applicable to construing documents apply to the construction of the objects adopted by a company¹. The first question is: what is the fair construction of the company's constitution² as a whole? General words following a particular specification may be construed eiusdem generis, but there is no special rule of interpretation by reference to what are supposed to be the main or principal objects of a company where the question is whether something done or proposed to be done is *ultra vires*³. (However, this consideration may be of importance where the question is whether the company ought to be wound up on the ground that its substratum is gone)⁴. Although the subjective intent with which a transaction is carried out by the directors may result in a charge of misfeasance against them, and, if participated in by the other contracting party, may entitle the company to rescind the contract, such intent is irrelevant to the question whether the transaction is intra vires the company⁵.

It is possible to provide that the objects set out in the articles are to be construed as separate objects and are not limited by reference to any other clause or the name of the company⁶, but such a provision does not operate to turn what is properly a power into an object in itself⁷.

1 Under the Companies Act 2006, the objects of a company are unrestricted unless its articles of association specifically restrict them: see s 31; and PARA 240. This is a change from the situation that pertained under the Companies Act 1985 where a company was obliged to state its objects in the memorandum of association (the role of which has been altered fundamentally under the Companies Act 2006). The case law that is cited below and in PARA 257 derives from the time when the statement of a company's objects was a requirement. As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16. As to the meaning of 'company' more generally see PARA 1. For some purposes, it is necessary to discover what is the main object of a company. Cf Re Horsley & Weight Ltd [1982] Ch 442, [1982] 3 All ER 1045, CA (where a provision of the memorandum relating to the granting of pensions was construed as an independent object of the company).

In the light of the statutory modifications of the ultra vires doctrine (see PARAS 240, 252-256, 259 et seq), the distinction between an object and a power, in that context, is irrelevant but it remains of importance to questions of directors exceeding their authority (see Rolled Steel Products (Holdings) Ltd v British Steel Corp [1986] Ch 246, [1985] 3 All ER 52, CA), and to the statutory duty imposed on a director to act in the way he considers, in good faith, would be most likely to promote the success of the company for the benefit of its members as a whole (see the Companies Act 2006 s 172; and PARA 544).

259. Meaning of 'ultra vires'.

The term 'ultra vires' in its proper sense denotes some act or transaction on the part of a corporation¹ which, although not unlawful or contrary to public policy if done by an individual, is yet beyond the corporation's legitimate powers as defined by the statute under which it is formed², or the statutes which are applicable to it, or by its constitution³, although the scope of the ultra vires doctrine as it applies to companies and corporations is now restricted by statute⁴. The term is not appropriate in relation to any act or transaction which is beyond the lawful powers of any person. Thus the term is used in two senses: (1) beyond the powers of the company; and (2) beyond the powers of the directors⁵ under the authority conferred on them by the company or its constitution⁶.

Acts of directors which should not be undertaken by them without the sanction of the members⁷ of the company are often described as acts ultra vires the directors⁸; and exercises by the directors of powers for purposes other than the promotion of the objects⁹ of the company are also often denominated as being ultra vires¹⁰.

3 As to the meaning of references to a company's constitution see PARA 227.

5 As to a company's directors see PARA 478 et seq.

6 The term was also used in two different ways in relation exclusively to the powers of a company in Rolled Steel Products (Holdings) Ltd v British Steel Corp [1982] Ch 478, [1982] 3 All ER 1057 per Vinelott J. On appeal, however, the Court of Appeal considered that such use of the term could lead to confusion and that the term should be confined rigidly to 'describing acts which are beyond the corporate capacity of a company': see Rolled Steel Products (Holdings) Ltd v British Steel Corp [1986] Ch 246 at 297, [1985] 3 All ER 52 at 87, CA, per Slade LJ, and at 303 and 91 per Browne-Wilkinson LJ.

8 As to a director's liability to the company for causing it to commit ultra vires acts see PARA 585. As to the personal liability of a director for any breach of duty in tort see PARA 588.

9 Under the Companies Act 2006, the objects of a company are unrestricted unless its articles of association specifically restrict them: see s 31; and PARA 240. As to the meaning of references to 'articles' see PARA 228 note 2. As to articles of association generally see PARA 228 et seq.

10 Directors are under a statutory duty to act in accordance with the company's constitution, and to only exercise powers for the purposes for which they are conferred: see the Companies Act 2006 s 171; and PARA 540.

Formerly, when the capacity of a company¹ was limited by the objects clause in the memorandum², and the absence of a special power in the company's constitution³, it was, for example, *ultra vires*⁴:

- 580 (1) for any company to take shares⁵ in another carrying on a different class of business⁶;
- 581 (2) for one company to amalgamate with another company⁷;
- 582 (3) for a company which has power to invest on second mortgages, and which is a second mortgagee, to guarantee payment of the prior mortgage debt for good consideration⁸;
- 583 (4) for a company with power to lend to guarantee the debts of a company promoted by it⁹;
- 584 (5) unless first sanctioned¹⁰, for a company to treat its former employees not merely generously but beyond all entitlement¹¹;
- 585 (6) for a company authorised by its constitution to make and deal in railway carriages to purchase a concession for a foreign railway¹²;
- 586 (7) for a bill-broking company to take shares in a banking company for the purpose of increasing its own business¹³; and
- 587 (8) for a body dedicated to preventing cruelty to animals to pay money over to a political party whose aims include such an aim, but with no obligation to expend the money in any particular manner¹⁴.

261. Examples of acts not ultra vires.

Formerly, when the capacity of a company¹ was limited by the objects clause in the memorandum², it was not ultra vires³ for a trading company⁴, without any special powers to do so, to pay a pension to the family of a deceased officer⁵; or to give gratuities to its employees⁶; or to pay a loss not within the terms of a policy⁷; or to pay a reasonable brokerage for placing its shares⁸; or to let off a large part of a hotel for government offices⁹; or to take a larger house than necessary and underlet a portion¹⁰. A company established to buy a special brewery, but with general powers, may buy a different one, even though it will not have enough money left to buy the first¹¹. A trading company may borrow, with or without security¹²; or accept bills of exchange¹³; or deposit its title deeds to secure an overdraft¹⁴; or issue debenture stock¹⁵ as collateral security¹⁶.

A company formed to work a patent may purchase it¹⁷. A company whose powers include that of promoting may promote another company, subscribe shares, and pay the expenses of the promotion¹⁸. A chemical company may distribute money to scientific institutions in the United Kingdom for the furtherance of scientific education and research¹⁹. A company formed for the development of salt concessions and the manufacture of salt may export salt²⁰.

In these and similar cases, it is a question dependent on the true construction of the company's constitution and all the circumstances of the case whether the proceeding in question will facilitate or is otherwise incidental to the business which the company was formed to carry on²¹.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(7) CAPACITY/(ii) Company's Powers/B. STATEMENT OF COMPANY'S OBJECTS/262. Failure to act in accordance with restricted objects.

262. Failure to act in accordance with restricted objects.

Any shareholder of a company¹ may bring proceedings to restrain the doing of an act that is beyond either the company's constitution² or the directors' powers³.

If the directors act in breach of the constitution, the act may not be called into question on the grounds of a lack of capacity⁴. The breach of the constitution is a breach of the directors' duties⁵ which may be ratified by an ordinary resolution of the members⁶, although to authorise such acts in the future, an alteration to the articles by special resolution⁷ is required⁸. The possibility of ratification is subject, in the case of ratification to relieve a director of the consequences of his action (rather than to affirm the transaction), to the statutory requirements as to voting on that ratification⁹ and subject generally to the common law limits on ratification¹⁰. Even in the absence of ratification, the position of a person dealing with the company in good faith is protected by statute¹¹.

A corporation in a matter intra vires cannot be heard to deny a transaction to which all the shareholders have given their assent, even when such assent has been given in an informal manner, or by conduct, as distinct from a formal resolution at a duly convened meeting¹². If shareholders require directors to make certain decisions, or approve the decisions which the directors have already taken, then such decisions become the acts of the company, and binding on it, so that thereafter it cannot sue its directors in negligence¹³. However, it is otherwise if the shareholders or directors are acting fraudulently¹⁴.

C. BINDING THE COMPANY

263. Powers of directors to bind the company.

In favour of a person dealing with a company¹ in good faith, the power of the directors² to bind the company, or to authorise others to do so, is deemed to be free of any limitation under the company's constitution³.

For these purposes:

- 588 (1) a person 'deals with' a company if he is a party to any transaction or other act to which the company is a party⁴; and
- 589 (2) a person dealing with a company: (a) is not bound to inquire as to any limitation on the powers of the directors to bind the company or authorise others to do so⁵; (b) is presumed to have acted in good faith unless the contrary is proved⁶; and (c) is not regarded as acting in bad faith by reason only of his knowing that an act is beyond the powers of the directors under the company's constitution⁷.

These protections do not affect any right of a member of the company to bring proceedings to restrain the doing of an action that is beyond the powers of the directors⁸; but no such proceedings lie in respect of an act to be done in fulfilment of a legal obligation arising from a previous act of the company⁹. Nor do the statutory protections affect any liability incurred by the directors, or any other person, by reason of the directors' exceeding their powers¹⁰.

1 As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

2 As to the meaning of 'director' see PARA 478.

3 Companies Act 2006 s 40(1). The Companies Act 2006 s 40 has effect subject to s 41 (transactions with directors or their associates) (see PARA 264) and s 42 (charities) (see PARA 265): s 40(6). As to the meaning of references to a company's constitution see PARA 227. For these purposes, the references to limitations on the directors' powers under the company's constitution include limitations deriving: (1) from a resolution of the company or of any class of shareholders (s 40(3)(a)); or (2) from any agreement between the members of the company or of any class of shareholders (s 40(3)(b)). As to resolutions of the company generally see PARA 612 et seq. As to shareholders and membership of companies generally see PARAS 321 et seq, 1697 et seq. As to classes of shares and the rights attached to classes of shares generally see PARA 1057 et seq. See also Smith v Henniker-Major & Co (a firm) [2002] EWCA Civ 762, [2003] Ch 182, [2002] 2 BCLC 655 (whether act of an inquorate board attracts the protection of the Companies Act 1985 s 35A (see now the Companies Act 2006 s 40)); Ford v Polymer Vision Ltd [2009] EWHC 945 (Ch), [2009] 2 BCLC 160 (meeting of directors which was quorate but not validly convened constituted a constitutional limitation under the Companies Act 2006 s 40).

Persons dealing with the company may also rely on the rule in Royal British Bank v Turquand (1856) 6 E & B 327, which provides that such persons are not obliged to inquire into the internal proceedings of a company but can assume that all acts of internal management had been properly carried out, save where an outsider knows or ought to know of a failure to adhere to procedures: see PARA 266.

The provisions of the Companies Act 2006 s 40 apply to unregistered companies by virtue of the Unregistered Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2436, reg 3, Sch 1 para 3: see PARA 1666. As to the meaning of 'unregistered company' see PARA 1665.

The Companies Act 2006 s 40 reflects the requirements of EC Council Directive 68/151 (OJ L65, 14.3.68, p 8) (the 'First EC Company Law Directive') (see PARA 23).

4 Companies Act 2006 s 40(2)(a). See note 3. As to a director as a 'person dealing with a company' see Smith v Henniker-Major & Co (a firm) [2002] EWCA Civ 762, [2003] Ch 182, [2002] 2 BCLC 655. (However, the Companies Act 2006 s 40 is now qualified in s 40(6) (see note 3) so directors are governed by s 41 (transactions with directors or their associates) (see PARA 264) and not by s 40). A shareholder receiving bonus shares is not 'a person dealing with a company' for these purposes: see EIC Services Ltd v Phipps [2004] EWCA Civ 1069, [2005] 1 All ER 338, [2005] 1 WLR 1377, [2004] 2 BCLC 589 (the Companies Act 1985 s 35A(1) (see now the Companies Act 2006 s 40(1)) contemplated a bilateral transaction between the company and the person dealing with the company or an act to which both were parties, such as would bind the company other than in good faith; such would not be the case where a bonus issue was made by a single resolution applicable to all shareholders) (rvrsng on this point EIC Services Ltd v Phipps [2003] EWHC 1507 (Ch), [2003] 3 All ER 804, [2003] 1 WLR 2360, [2004] 2 BCLC 589). See also Cottrell v King [2004] EWHC 397 (Ch), [2004] 2 BCLC 413 (it was not clear that the operation of a share transfer provision in the articles could amount to 'dealing' with the company for these purposes).

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(7) CAPACITY/(ii) Company's Powers/C. BINDING THE COMPANY/264. Transactions involving director or person connected with director.

264. Transactions involving director or person connected with director.

If, or to the extent that, the validity of a transaction¹ depends on the statutory protection² afforded a person dealing with the company³ in good faith⁴, then where: (1) a company enters into such a transaction⁵; and (2) the parties to the transaction include: (a) a director of the company⁶ (or of its holding company)⁷; or (b) a person connected with any such director⁸, the transaction is voidable at the instance of the company⁹.

Whether or not it is avoided, any such party to the transaction as is mentioned in head (2)(a) or head (2)(b) above, and any director of the company who authorised the transaction, is liable¹⁰ to account to the company for any gain he has made directly or indirectly by the transaction¹¹, and to indemnify the company for any loss or damage resulting from the transaction¹².

The transaction ceases to be voidable if: (i) restitution of any money or other asset which was the subject matter of the transaction is no longer possible¹³; or (ii) the company is indemnified for any loss or damage resulting from the transaction¹⁴; or (iii) rights acquired bona fide for value and without actual notice of the directors' exceeding their powers by a person who is not party to the transaction would be affected by the avoidance¹⁵; or (iv) the transaction is affirmed by the company¹⁶.

Nothing in these provisions¹⁷ affects the rights of any party to the transaction not mentioned in head (2)(a) or head (2)(b) above¹⁸. But the court may, on the application of the company or any such party, make an order affirming, severing or setting aside the transaction on such terms as appear to the court to be just¹⁹.

- 1 For these purposes, 'transaction' includes any act: Companies Act 2006 s 41(7)(a).
- 2 It depends on the Companies Act 2006 s 40 (see PARA 263): see s 41(1).

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(7) CAPACITY/(ii) Company's Powers/C. BINDING THE COMPANY/265. Company's capacity not limited generally by its constitution; charities.

265. Company's capacity not limited generally by its constitution; charities.

The validity of an act done by a company¹ may not be called into question on the ground of lack of capacity by reason of anything in the company's constitution².

However, this statutory protection applies to the acts of a company that is a charity only in favour of a person who: (1) does not know at the time the act is done that the company is a charity³; or (2) gives full consideration in money or money's worth in relation to the act in question and does not know (as the case may be) either that the act is not permitted by the company's constitution, or that the act is beyond the powers of the directors⁴. Where a company that is a charity purports to transfer or grant an interest in property, the fact that (as the case may be) either the act was not permitted by the company's constitution⁵, or the directors in connection with the act exceeded any limitation on their powers under the company's constitution⁶, does not affect the title of a person who subsequently acquires the property or any interest in it for full consideration without actual notice of any such circumstances affecting the validity of the company's act⁷. In any proceedings so arising⁸, the burden of proving that a person knew that the company was a charity⁹, or that a person knew that an act was not permitted by the company's constitution or was beyond the powers of the directors¹⁰, lies on the person asserting that fact¹¹. In the case of a company that is a charity, the affirmation of a transaction whose validity depends upon the power of the directors to bind the company (or to authorise others to do so) free of any limitation under the company's constitution¹² is ineffective without the prior written consent of, in England and Wales¹³, the Charity Commission¹⁴.

COMPANIES ACTS/(7) CAPACITY/(ii) Company's Powers/C. BINDING THE COMPANY/266.
Notice of company's constitution assumed.

266. Notice of company's constitution assumed.

The doctrine of constructive notice means that persons contracting with a company, whether or not they are shareholders, are bound to know, or are precluded from denying that they know, the constitution of the company and its powers as given by statute and the constitution¹.

This doctrine of constructive notice of a company's registered documents is a purely negative one which does not operate against a company, but only in its favour². Its effect, however, is now much modified by statute which provides that a person dealing in good faith with a company is not bound to inquire as to whether it is permitted by the company's constitution or as to any limitation on the powers of the directors to bind the company or authorise others to do so³.

Presumption as to matters of internal management.

267. Presumption as to matters of internal management.

Persons contracting with a company and dealing in good faith have always been entitled to assume that acts within its constitution and powers have been properly and duly performed¹, and were never bound to inquire whether acts of internal management have been regular². This rule does not, however, apply to a director, or de facto director, who contracts with the company, as he should know the true position³. In any case, persons contracting with the company must take the articles of association in force to be those registered, and they are not entitled to assume that a special resolution has been passed pursuant to the articles, for that would have to be registered⁴, and where the act is within the company's power only on the fulfilment of a statutory condition, persons dealing with the company are bound to ascertain whether the condition has been fulfilled⁵. An irregularity may be cured by a special article validating certain acts of the officers notwithstanding any irregularity⁶; but the particular act to be protected must on the face of it comply with the articles⁷.

268. Notice of irregularity.

Actual or constructive notice of an irregularity prevents a person contracting with the company obtaining the protection of the rule that the regularity of internal management may be relied on¹, except where he is claiming for value through another who had no notice². A person does not obtain the protection of the rule where he was put on inquiry by the circumstances out of which the transaction with the company arose³.

Further, the rule does not operate to protect a person who has accepted a document which is a forgery⁴.

(iii) Acting through Agents

269. How a company may act.

A company¹, not being a physical person, may only act either by the resolution of its members², or by its agents³. It is not the agent of its members⁴, and a member as such is not the agent of the company⁵, the company being a separate entity or legal person apart from its members, who are not, even collectively, the company⁶. The legal position of a company, as so stated, must be regarded in relation to its contracts⁷, to torts committed by it⁸, and to such liabilities as regards acts which might bring it within the criminal law⁹.

A company exists because there is a rule, usually in a statute, which says that a persona ficta is deemed to exist and to have certain powers, rights and duties of a natural person; and the company exercises these through natural persons as its agents, those acts being attributable to the company¹⁰. It also makes itself subject to the general rules by which liability for the acts of others can be attributed to natural persons, such as ostensible authority in contract and vicarious liability in tort¹¹.

271. Directors' position as company's agents.

A company's directors¹ are agents of the company². Wherever an agent is liable, they are liable; and, where the liability would attach to the principal, and the principal only, the liability is the company's liability³. It does not follow that they are the only agents of the company; and they, or the company in general meeting where its powers in this respect are not exclusively vested in the directors, may appoint other agents of the company, by whose acts it will be bound⁴. For example, the secretary is able to bind the company in all administrative matters⁵, and clerks in a company's registered office⁶, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, are deemed to have authority during business hours in the absence of the secretary to receive notices on the company's behalf⁷.

In practice, it is clear that in many companies most of the transactions are carried out by employees of the company, not by the directors; such employees will in most cases have actual authority to bind the company in the matters with which their employment is concerned. All agents are limited at all times by a requirement to act for the benefit of the principal⁸.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(7) CAPACITY/(iii) Acting through Agents/272. Exercise of delegated powers.

272. Exercise of delegated powers.

Where there is a power of delegation to a committee of directors or a managing director, a person contracting with the company may assume that that power has been duly exercised¹. Where there is a power of delegation to agents, a person is entitled to assume only that such powers as are within the ostensible authority of such an agent have been so delegated²; but where an agreement entered into by a director is unusual, a person contracting with the company through that director is put upon inquiry as to whether the necessary power has been delegated to that director³. A person who has only ostensible authority to do an act or make a representation cannot make a representation which may be relied upon as giving a further agent an ostensible authority which he would not otherwise have had⁴.

Where a power of delegation has been exercised, the subsequent act of the agent within the scope of his authority is binding on the company as against the person with whom the company is contracting; but, if the power of delegation has not been exercised, a person is not entitled to rely on the supposed exercise of the power unless he actually knew of its existence, because there is no estoppel in such circumstances⁵.

A company which has appointed a manager of its business is bound by contracts made by him in the usual course of the business, even though sufficient powers have not in fact been delegated to him; and, where goods are supplied to the order of unauthorised persons, the company is liable if the goods are received and used for the purposes of its trade⁶.

273. Agent's liability for torts.

An agent who commits a tort in the course of his employment is himself liable in damages to the full amount¹, and, if more than one agent, each agent is so liable². This applies to a company's agent in the same way as to any person's agent; but one of two or more agents is not liable for the acts of the other or others unless he has expressly or impliedly authorised such acts³.

Directors are not responsible to third persons for torts committed by sub-agents of the company properly appointed, unless they themselves committed or knowingly procured the commission of the tortious acts⁴.

274. Position of company's agents.

The agent of a company cannot normally obtain an injunction to prevent his discharge, since the court will not usually specifically enforce a contract of personal service; but he will be left to his claim for damages¹. Agents of a company are in the position of agents of an individual, except that their principal is a corporate body and must act in accordance with its constitution². 277. Respective liability for contracts on part of company and agent.

A company is liable in respect of contracts made by its agents when acting within the scope of their authority, provided that the contract is within the company's powers¹, but not for acts or representations without that scope². The question whether the act or representation was committed or made by the agent for his own benefit or for the benefit of the company is irrelevant³. Similarly, the company may be bound by the knowledge of, or notice given to, a subordinate official⁴.

An agent may become liable on a contract made by him on behalf of a company if it is made in his own name and it does not appear from the document that he did not intend to contract as principal; and, where there is an ambiguity in this respect on the face of the document, parol evidence is admissible to explain it⁵. When an agent expressly contracts on behalf of his company or makes a contract in its name, he is not personally liable to the other contracting party in the absence of fraud or misrepresentation⁶ unless he expressly or impliedly warrants an authority which he does not have or a state of facts which does not exist⁷, in which case the contracting party has a remedy against him⁸. Thus borrowing by the directors is a warranty that they as directors, or the company, as the case may be, have or has power to borrow⁹. A director or other agent may, however, act in such a way as to expose himself to liability for breach of trust¹⁰.

278. Ratification of agents' acts.

A company cannot confirm or ratify anything which is beyond the powers conferred by statute¹. At common law, it was not possible for a company to ratify an ultra vires transaction, in the sense of an act beyond the capacity of the company as expressed or implied in the company's constitution². It is possible for a company to ratify conduct by a director³ amounting to negligence, default, breach of duty or breach of trust in relation to the company if the decision to ratify such conduct is duly made by resolution of the members of the company⁴.

A transaction by the directors which is beyond their own powers but within the company's powers may be ratified by a resolution of the company or even by acquiescence, provided the shareholders have knowledge of the facts relating to the transaction to be ratified or the means of knowledge are available to them⁵.

By resolution at a subsequent meeting, a company may ratify any business which it has purported to transact at a meeting informally called⁶. Such a ratification will not be implied merely from the fact that the shareholders have seen and passed without comment the balance sheet or formal documents⁷, but it may be implied from acquiescence⁸. A contract entered into by directors at a meeting irregularly constituted may be ratified at a subsequent duly constituted meeting, and is sufficiently ratified by proceedings being brought by the company to enforce it⁹. A company may ratify the institution and conduct of litigation commenced in its name without proper authority, but, until ratified, the proceedings may be stayed¹⁰.

(iv) Contracts

A. CONTRACTS BEFORE INCORPORATION OR COMMENCEMENT OF BUSINESS

279. Pre-incorporation contracts.

A company is not bound by contracts purporting to be entered into on its behalf by its promoters or other persons before its incorporation¹. After incorporation, it cannot ratify or adopt any such contract because in such cases there is no agency and the contract is that of the parties making it². The adoption and confirmation by a directors' resolution of a contract made before the incorporation of the company by persons purporting to act on its behalf does not create any contractual relation between it and the other party to the contract, or impose any obligation on it towards him³.

The principle that there is no agency before the company is incorporated does not apply where a company, awaiting a certificate of incorporation on change of name⁴, purports to contract in the new name; in such a case no personal liability attaches to a director for contracts authorised by him or made by him on behalf of the company in the new name⁵.

1 See PARA 63; FJ Neale (Glasgow) Ltd v Vickery 1973 SLT (Sh Ct) 88 (new company formed with same name as old company and taking over assets and goodwill not liable on old company's contracts). The person purporting to enter into such a contract is personally liable upon it: Kelner v Baxter (1866) LR 2 CP 174; Wilson & Co v Baker, Lees & Co (1901) 17 TLR 473. A contract which purports to be made by or on behalf of a company at a time when the company has not been formed has effect, subject to any agreement to the contrary, as one made with the person purporting to act for the company or as agent for it; and he is personally liable on the contract accordingly: see the Companies Act 2006 s 51 (cited in PARA 66); and the Overseas Companies (Execution of Documents and Registration of Charges) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1917 (cited in PARAS 282, 288, 1825, 1833). See also Phonogram Ltd v Lane [1982] QB 938, [1981] 3 All ER 182, CA. A contract cannot purport to be made on behalf of a company not yet formed if no one had thought of the new company at the time of contracting: Cotronic (UK) Ltd v Dezonie [1991] BCLC 721, CA (parties contracted with first company which in fact had been struck off the register and dissolved and, when this was discovered years later, a second company was incorporated; it was impossible to say that the contract purported to be made by or on behalf of the second company). The person actually issuing an invoice showing chargeable VAT is liable for that amount if he issues such invoices in the name of a company before its incorporation: Customs and Excise Comrs v Wells [1982] 1 All ER 920. A solicitor who prepares a company's constitutional documents cannot recover his costs for doing so from the company when it is incorporated (Re English and Colonial Produce Co Ltd [1906] 2 Ch 435, CA); or even the fees required to be paid on the registration of the company (Re National Motor Mail-Coach Co Ltd, Clinton's Claim [1908] 2 Ch 515, CA, overruling the decision of Buckley J in Re English and Colonial Produce Co Ltd at 439, which was not appealed against on this point). COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(7) CAPACITY/(iv) Contracts/A. CONTRACTS BEFORE INCORPORATION OR COMMENCEMENT OF BUSINESS/280. Adoption of pre-incorporation contracts.

280. Adoption of pre-incorporation contracts.

In order that the company may be bound by agreements entered into before its incorporation, there must be a new contract to the effect of the previous agreement¹; although this new contract may be inferred from the company's acts when incorporated², except where such acts are done in the mistaken belief that the agreement is binding³.

If the company has notice of a contract made before its incorporation between the persons under whom it claims property of which it takes possession and a former owner of the property, whereby a charge or incumbrance was imposed on the property, the company takes subject to the charge or incumbrance, although it is not liable to be sued for breach of the contract⁴.

It is the duty of directors of a company which is formed to adopt and enter into a contract to make careful and full inquiries before finally committing the company to it and to act as prudent men of affairs would in their own business⁵.

281. Contracts made before company entitled to commence business.

A company¹ that is a public company² must not do business³ or exercise any borrowing powers⁴ unless the registrar of companies⁵ has issued it with a certificate (a 'trading certificate') entitling it to do so⁶.

Any contract made by a company before the issue of the registrar's certificate is, nevertheless, not invalid on that account⁷. If, however, the company fails to comply with its obligations under any such contract within 21 days from being called upon to do so, the directors⁸ of the company are jointly and severally liable to indemnify any other party to the transaction in respect of any loss or damage suffered by him by reason of the company's failure to comply with its obligations⁹.

B. FORM OF CONTRACT; AUTHENTICATION OF DOCUMENTS

282. Company contracts.

Under the law of England and Wales¹ a contract may be made²:

- 590 (1) by a company³, by writing under its common seal⁴; or 591 (2) on behalf of a company, by any person acting under its authority, express or implied⁵; and any formalities required by law in the case of a contract made by an individual also apply, unless a contrary intention appears, to a contract made by or on behalf of a company⁶.

Contracts may be validly made between companies on a Sunday⁷.

1 As to the meanings of 'England' and 'Wales' see PARA 1 note 5.

2 Companies Act 2006 s 43(1).

The Secretary of State has made provision by regulations (see the Companies Act 2006 s 1045; and PARA 1825) applying s 43 to overseas companies, but with modifications: see the Overseas Companies (Execution of Documents and Registration of Charges) Regulations 2009, SI 2009/1917, reg 4. As to the meaning of 'overseas company' see PARA 1824. The provisions of the Companies Act 2006 s 43 apply also to unregistered companies by virtue of the Unregistered Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2436, reg 3, Sch 1 para 3: see PARA 1666. As to the meaning of 'unregistered company' see PARA 1665.

3 As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

4 Companies Act 2006 s 43(1)(a). See note 2. A company may have a common seal, but need not have one: see s 45; and PARA 283. As to contracts under seal see further PARA 287; and as to written contracts see PARA 284.

Contracts required in the case of individuals to be under seal are those which are made without valuable consideration; conveyances of land, leases, assignments and surrenders of leases, assignments of ships and shares in ships must also in most cases be under seal: see DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 10 et seq.

5 Companies Act 2006 s 43(1)(b). See note 2.

6 Companies Act 2006 s 43(2). See note 2. See also PARA 66 note 2. As to the name of the company being engraved on its seal see PARA 221. As to appointing an attorney to execute deeds see PARA 289. As to the company's power to have an official seal for use abroad see PARA 290. As to execution of deeds by corporations generally see CORPORATIONS vol 9(2) (2006 Reissue) PARA 1263 et seq. See also DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 40 et seq.

283. Company seal.

A company¹ may have a common seal², but need not have one³.

A company which has a common seal must have its name⁴ engraved in legible characters on the seal⁵. If a company fails to comply with this requirement⁶, an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer of the company who is in default⁷. An officer of a company, or a person acting on behalf of a company, also commits an offence if he uses, or authorises the use of, a seal purporting to be a seal of the company on which its name is not engraved as so required⁸. A person guilty of either such offence⁹ is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale¹⁰.

Under the model articles of association¹¹, any common seal may only be used by the authority of the directors¹², who may decide by what means and in what form any common seal is to be used¹³. Unless otherwise decided by the directors, if the company has a common seal and it is affixed to a document, the document must also be signed by at least one authorised person¹⁴ in the presence of a witness who attests the signature¹⁵.

Where the company is a public company, the directors also may decide under the model articles by what means and in what form any securities seal is to be used¹⁶; and if the company has a securities seal, it may only be affixed to securities by the company secretary or a person authorised to apply it to securities by the company secretary¹⁷. If a public company has an official seal for use abroad, it may only be affixed to a document if its use on that document, or documents of a class to which it belongs, has been authorised by a decision of the directors¹⁸.

1 As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

2 As to the use of the company's seal for making company contracts see PARA 282; for use in the execution of documents see PARA 288; for use outside the United Kingdom see PARA 290; and for use for sealing securities issued by the company, or for sealing documents creating or evidencing securities so issued, see PARA 291. As to the appointment of an attorney to execute deeds see PARA 289. See also PARAS 270, 287.

3 Companies Act 2006 s 45(1).

The Secretary of State may make provision by regulations applying the Companies Act 2006 ss 43-52 (see PARAS 282, 284 et seq) to overseas companies, subject to such exceptions, adaptations or modifications as may be specified in the regulations: see s 1045; and PARA 1825. However, at the date at which this volume states the law, no such provision has been made in relation to s 45.

The provisions of the Companies Act 2006 s 45(1) apply to unregistered companies by virtue of the Unregistered Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2436, reg 3, Sch 1 para 3: see PARA 1666. As to the meaning of 'unregistered company' see PARA 1665. In the case of an unregistered company, any reference to the common seal of the company must be read as referring to the common or other authorised seal of the company: see the Unregistered Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2436, reg 5(1)(d); and PARA 1666.

4 As to the requirements for, and limitations on, the name of a company registered under the Companies Acts see PARA 200 et seq.

5 Companies Act 2006 s 45(2). As to the name of the company being engraved on its common seal see further PARA 221. Where a bond had been entered into as a deed, but the company obtaining the bond had used a seal engraved with its trading name rather than its registered name, non-compliance with the Companies Act 1985 s 350 (see now the Companies Act 2006 s 45) did not in itself render the bond a nullity or unenforceable by a third party beneficiary against the surety which had validly sealed the bond: OTV Birwelco Ltd v Technical and General Guarantee Co Ltd [2002] EWHC 2240 (TCC), [2002] 4 All ER 668, [2002] 2 BCLC 723.

6 It fails to comply with the Companies Act 2006 s 45(2) (see the text and notes 4-5): see s 45(3).

7 Companies Act 2006 s 45(3). As to the meaning of 'officer' see PARA 607; and as to the meaning of 'officer in default' see PARA 315.

8 Companies Act 2006 s 45(4). The text refers to a seal of the company on which its name is not engraved as required by s 45(2) (see the text and notes 4-5): see s 45(4).

9 It is guilty of an offence under the Companies Act 2006 s 45: see s 45(5).

10 Companies Act 2006 s 45(5). As to the standard scale see PARA 1622.

11 As to model articles of association prescribed for the purposes of the Companies Act 2006, and their application generally, see PARA 228 et seq. Different versions of model articles have been so prescribed for use by private companies limited by shares (see the Companies (Model Articles) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3229, reg 2, Sch 1), private companies limited by guarantee (see reg 3, Sch 2), and public companies (see reg 4, Sch 3). As to the meanings of 'company limited by guarantee', 'company limited by shares', 'private company' and 'public company' see PARA 102. The default articles prescribed for the purposes of the Companies Act 1985 ('legacy articles'), ie the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, have not been revoked and may, in their amended form, continue to be used by companies after the commencement of the Companies Act 2006: see PARA 230.

12 Companies (Model Articles) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3229, Sch 1 Pt 5 art 49(1); Sch 2 Pt 4 art 35(1); Sch 3 Pt 5 art 81(1). Under the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, the seal may only be used by the authority of the directors or of a committee of directors authorised by the directors: see reg 2, Schedule, Table A art 101. As to a company's directors see PARA 478 et seq.

13 Companies (Model Articles) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3229, Sch 1 Pt 5 art 49(2); Sch 2 Pt 4 art 35(2); Sch 3 Pt 5 art 81(2). This wording is not used in the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805.

14 For these purposes, an authorised person is any director of the company, the company secretary (if any), or any person authorised by the directors for the purpose of signing documents to which the common seal is applied: Companies (Model Articles) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3229, Sch 1 Pt 5 art 49(4); Sch 2 Pt 4 art 35(4); Sch 3 Pt 5 art 81(4). This wording is not used in the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805. As to the company secretary and other officers see PARA 603. Private companies are not required to have a secretary: see PARA 601.

15 Companies (Model Articles) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3229, Sch 1 Pt 5 art 49(3); Sch 2 Pt 4 art 35(3); Sch 3 Pt 5 art 81(3). The wording used for the purposes of the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, allows the directors to determine who is to sign any instrument to which the seal is affixed and, unless otherwise so determined, it must be signed by a director and by the secretary or by a second director: see art 101.

17 Companies (Model Articles) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3229, Sch 3 Pt 5 art 81(6). For these purposes, references to the securities seal being affixed to any document include the reproduction of the image of that seal on or in a document by any mechanical or electronic means which has been approved by the directors in relation to that document or documents of a class to which it belongs: Sch 3 Pt 5 art 81(7). As to documents or information sent or supplied by electronic means see PARA 679.

284. Written contracts made by, or on behalf of, a company.

A contract which, if made between private persons, would be required under law to be in writing, signed by the parties to be charged therewith, may be made on behalf of the company in writing signed¹ by any person acting under its authority, express or implied². A contract so made is effectual in law and binds the company and its successors and all other parties to it; it may be varied or discharged in the same manner in which it is authorised so to be made.

It is not essential to the validity of a contract made on behalf of a company that the company should be described with precision, since the normal rule can be applied that a contract was to be construed by reference to the surrounding circumstances or in the light of the known facts³.

Many contracts when made by individuals are required by statute to be in writing and duly signed⁴; and such a contract, if made by a company, must comply with the like formalities⁵. A director's signature to a resolution referring to a draft agreement may be sufficient for this purpose⁶.

1 The signature may consist of the company's stamp: McDonald v John Twinn Ltd [1953] 2 QB 304, [1953] 2 All ER 589, CA (apprenticeship agreement). The Corporate Bodies' Contracts Act 1960 (see CORPORATIONS vol 9(2) (2006 Reissue) PARA 1272 et seq) does not apply to a company registered under the Companies Act 2006, to a company incorporated outside the United Kingdom, or to a limited liability partnership: Corporate Bodies' Contracts Act 1960 s 2 (substituted by SI 2009/1941). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 1 note 5. As to formation and registration under the Companies Act 2006 see PARA 102 et seq. 285. Parol contracts.

A contract which, if made between private persons, would under law be valid, although made by parol only, and not reduced into writing, may be made by parol on behalf of the company by any person acting under its authority, express or implied¹. A contract so made is effectual in law and binds the company and its successors; it may be varied or discharged in the same manner in which it is authorised so to be made².

A company is liable, equally with an individual, to be estopped by the acts of its agents, for example by a parol consent to an act, even though no resolution on the subject has been passed³.

1 See the Companies Act 2006 s 43(1); and PARA 282.

2 This proposition contains the provisions of the Companies Act 1985 s 36(2) (as originally enacted). Those provisions are not re-enacted in the Companies Act 2006 s 43 (see PARA 282) but the proposition nevertheless remains correct.

The question how far the benefit of a commercial contract is assignable by or to a company is decided on the same principles as in the case of an individual, and depends on the circumstances of each case¹.

C. EXECUTION OF DOCUMENTS

287. Execution of documents under seal.

A document is executed by a company by the affixing of its common seal¹; but while a company may have a common seal, there is no requirement to have one². If the company does have a common seal, and if it has adopted prescribed articles of association³, its articles will almost invariably contain provisions as to its affixation⁴. If these provisions are apparently complied with, the company will be bound as against a person dealing with it in good faith⁵. If no particular formalities are prescribed, whoever, as a matter of practice, manages the affairs of a company may use the seal for those acts which he is authorised to perform⁶.

A document that is a forgery does not ordinarily bind the company⁷.

Under the Companies Act 2006, in favour of a purchaser, a document is deemed to have been duly executed by a company if it purports to be signed on behalf of the company either by two authorised signatories, or by a director of the company in the presence of a witness who attests the signature: see s 44(5); and PARA 288.

However, there may be circumstances in which a company is estopped from denying the validity of a document (see DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 reissue) PARA 72) and the company may be bound where the person executing the document has ostensible authority to warrant that all formalities relating to execution have been complied with (see Lovett v Carson Country Homes Ltd [2009] EWHC 1143 (Ch), [2009] 2 BCLC 196 (distinguishing Ruben v Great Fingall Consolidated); and see PARA 387). The court in Lovett v Carson Country Homes Ltd also doubted (obiter) whether the Companies Act 2006 s 44(5) (see also note 5) should be subject to an implied proviso that it operates subject to Ruben v Great Fingall Consolidated: see Lovett v Carson Country Homes Ltd at [99].

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(7) CAPACITY/(iv) Contracts/C. EXECUTION OF DOCUMENTS/288. Execution of documents by signature.

288. Execution of documents by signature.

Under the law of England and Wales¹, a document is executed by a company² either: (1) by the affixing of its common seal³; or (2) by signature⁴.

If head (2) above applies, a document is validly executed by a company only if it is signed on behalf of the company either by two authorised signatories⁵, or by a director of the company in the presence of a witness who attests the signature⁶. A document signed in this way⁷ and expressed, in whatever words, to be executed by the company has the same effect as if executed under the common seal of the company⁸.

Where a document is to be signed by a person on behalf of more than one company, it is not duly signed by that person for these purposes⁹ unless he signs it separately in each capacity¹⁰.

In favour of a purchaser¹¹, a document is deemed to have been duly executed by a company if it purports to be signed on behalf of the company either by two authorised signatories, or by a director of the company in the presence of a witness who attests the signature¹².

A document is validly executed by a company as a deed¹³ if, and only if it is duly executed by the company¹⁴, and it is delivered as a deed¹⁵.

2 The Companies Act 2006 s 44 applies to a document that is (or purports to be) executed by a company in the name of or on behalf of another person whether or not that person is also a company: s 44(8). As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16. For these purposes, the following are 'authorised signatories': (1) every director of the company (s 44(3)(a)); and (2) in the case of a private company with a secretary or a public company, the secretary (or any joint secretary) of the company (s 44(3)(b)). References in s 44 to a document being (or purporting to be) signed by a director or secretary are to be read, in a case where that office is held by a firm, as references to its being (or purporting to be) signed by an individual authorised by the firm to sign on its behalf: s 44(7). 289. Appointment of attorney to execute deeds.

Under the law of England and Wales¹, a company² may, by instrument executed as a deed, empower any person, either generally or in respect of specified matters, as its attorney to execute deeds or other documents on its behalf³. A deed or other document so executed, whether in the United Kingdom⁴ or elsewhere, has effect as if executed by the company⁵.

2 As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

3 Companies Act 2006 s 47(1). The provisions of s 47 apply where the instrument empowering a person to act as a company's attorney is executed on or after 1 October 2009: see the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, art 5, Sch 2 para 16.

The Secretary of State may make provision by regulations applying the Companies Act 2006 ss 43-52 (see PARAS 282 et seq, 290 et seq) to overseas companies, subject to such exceptions, adaptations or modifications as may be specified in the regulations: see s 1045; and PARA 1825. However, at the date at which this volume states the law, no such provision has been made in relation to s 47. As to the meaning of 'overseas company' see PARA 1824.

290. Company's official seal for use outside the United Kingdom.

A company¹ that has a common seal² may have for use outside the United Kingdom³ an official seal⁴, which must be a facsimile of the company's common seal, with the addition on its face of the place or places where it is to be used⁵.

A company having an official seal for use outside the United Kingdom may, by writing under its common seal, authorise any person appointed for the purpose to affix the official seal to any deed or other document to which the company is party⁶.

As between the company and a person dealing with such an agent, the agent's authority continues, during the period mentioned in the instrument conferring the authority⁷, or, if no period is mentioned, then until notice of the revocation or determination of the agent's authority has been given to the person dealing with him⁸.

The person affixing the official seal must certify in writing on the deed or other document to which the seal is affixed the date on which, and the place at which, it is affixed⁹.

When duly affixed to a document, the official seal has the same effect as the company's common seal¹⁰.

1 As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

291. Company's official seal for share certificates etc.

A company¹ that has a common seal² may have, for use for sealing securities issued by the company³, or for sealing documents creating or evidencing securities so issued⁴, an official seal⁵, which must be a facsimile of the company's common seal, with the addition on its face of the word 'Securities'⁶. When duly affixed to a document, the official seal has the same effect as the company's common seal⁷.

A company which was incorporated before 12 February 1979⁸ and which has such an official seal⁹ may use the seal for sealing such securities and documents¹⁰, notwithstanding anything in any instrument constituting or regulating the company or in any instrument made before that date which relates to any securities issued by the company¹¹. Any provision of such an instrument which requires any such securities or documents to be signed does not apply to the securities or documents if they are sealed with that seal¹².

D. BILLS AND NOTES

292. Power to deal with bills and notes.

A non-trading company has no general power to incur liability on bills of exchange or promissory notes¹ and, although it may transfer the property in a bill or note, it cannot incur liability on it unless its instrument of incorporation expressly or by clear implication confers the power². The Companies Acts³ do not give to every company incorporated under it, as an incident of its incorporation⁴, the power of accepting bills or issuing negotiable instruments⁵, but leaves such power to be determined on the construction of its constitution⁶. If the constitutional documents are silent on the subject, the power may be inferred where the nature of the company's business involves such a power⁷.

A proviso in a bill of exchange by an unlimited company professing to limit the liability under the bill is void⁸.

1 As to liability of the parties on bills of exchange or promissory notes generally see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 49 (2008) PARA 1574 et seq. As to the personal liability of a company's officers see PARA 295.

The following companies have been held not to be trading companies which have as such the implied power: a waterworks company (Broughton v Manchester and Salford Waterworks Co (1819) 3 B & Ald 1); a cemetery company (Steele v Harmer (1845) 14 M & W 831); a gas company (Bramah v Roberts (1837) 5 Scott 172); a salt company (Bult v Morrell (1840) 12 Ad & El 745); a salvage company (Thompson v Universal Salvage Co (1848) 1 Exch 694); a mining company (Hawtayne v Bourne (1841) 7 M & W 595; Dickinson v Valpy (1829) 10 B & C 128 at 137); a railway company incorporated by statute (Bateman v Mid-Wales Rly Co (1866) LR 1 CP 499). 'Trade' probably has a more restricted significance than 'business': see PARA 1 note 1.

Companies with unrestricted objects under the Companies Act 2006 (see PARA 240) will have the powers referred to in the text, the exercise of which will be limited only by the statutory duty imposed on a director to act in the way he considers, in good faith, would be most likely to promote the success of the company for the benefit of its members as a whole: see s 172; and PARA 544.

293. Signature on bill or note.

Where, in the case of an individual, a bill of exchange or promissory note is required to be signed¹, it is sufficient, in the case of a company, if it is signed on behalf of the company by any person acting on its authority or if it is sealed with the corporate seal². However, a company's bill or note is not required to be under seal³.

A bill of exchange or promissory note is deemed to have been made, accepted or indorsed on behalf of a company⁴ if made, accepted or indorsed in the name of, or by or on behalf or on account of, the company by a person acting under its authority⁵. It is not necessary that a formal resolution of the directors should be passed that bills should be accepted⁶; and, where a director without authority accepts bills on behalf of a company whose articles give power to delegate the duty of accepting bills to one director, the company is liable to a holder in due course, even though the delegation has not in fact taken place⁷.

295. Liability of company's officers.

If the company is liable on a bill of exchange¹, its authorised agents are not personally liable, even though they used words apparently sufficient to render them so liable, such as 'I promise' or 'We promise'², provided the signatures are expressed to be on behalf of the company as principal or in a representative capacity³. Thus if a bill is directed to a company and accepted by its directors describing themselves as directors of the (named) company, the company alone is liable⁴; but words describing them as being officers of the company may not of themselves exempt them⁵.

Where a company has no power to accept, an acceptance by directors and secretary 'for and on behalf of the company' makes them personally liable on a warranty of authority⁶, but there is no implied warranty that the company has funds at its bank to meet a cheque or acceptance⁷. If a loan is made to a director who has become liable on a bill accepted for the company's purposes, it is a question of evidence whether the loan is made to him personally or to the company⁸.

The company's name is not properly mentioned on a bill of exchange or similar document if the word 'limited' or words 'public limited company' (or their Welsh equivalents) is or are omitted from the name on the document⁹, or if additions are made to it¹⁰; but if the company's name appears on the face of the bill, it is a sufficient mention and the name need not appear again in the acceptance¹¹.

(v) Torts

296. Company's liability in tort for agent's acts.

Although every tort is ultra vires¹, on the basis that no corporation is formed for the purpose of committing wrongs², a company is not thereby exempted from tortious liability³.

A company is liable for torts committed by its agents in the course of their employment, and proceedings may be brought if an individual would be liable for the tort that has been committed, if the agent is acting in the course of his employment (or within the actual or ostensible scope of his authority), and if the act complained of is one which the company might possibly be authorised by its constitution to commit⁴. No express command or privity of the company need be proved⁵ but, in general, the claim arises whenever the relevant person or body (not necessarily the directors) made the relevant decision⁶.

A company may also be liable for the torts and contracts of its agents under the doctrine of estoppel⁷, when they are either acting within their apparent authority⁸ or apparently acting within their actual authority⁹.

Proceedings based on fraudulent misrepresentation as to the credit, trade or dealings of third persons made for the purpose of such persons obtaining credit, money or goods cannot be maintained unless the misrepresentation is in writing signed by the party to be charged¹⁰. For these purposes, a representation signed on behalf of a limited company by a duly authorised agent acting within the scope of his authority, or by an officer or employee of the company acting in the course of his duties in the business of the company, constitutes a representation made by the company and signed by it¹¹, but it may also constitute the personal signature of the agent signing so as to make him personally liable in deceit too¹².

297. Misrepresentation.

Persons who have been induced to enter into transactions with a company for the purchase of chattels or goods by misrepresentation may, instead of claiming rescission with a return of money paid, elect to retain the goods or chattels and recover any damages which have been sustained¹.

The statutory liability² as to misstatements in listing particulars³ or a prospectus⁴ does not affect any liability which any person may incur under the general law apart from that liability⁵. In respect of the liability so incurred, the remedies for misrepresentation open to an allottee of shares, but not necessarily to a transferee of his shares⁶, or to a person in whose favour an allotment of shares is renounced⁷, are:

- 592 (1) rectification of the register of members by the court and consequent relief⁸;
- 593 (2) rescission of the contract⁹;
- 594 (3) damages in a claim of deceit¹⁰ or negligent misrepresentation¹¹ or negligent misstatement¹²;
- 595 (4) compensation or damages under the statutory provisions¹³; and
- 596 (5) criminal proceedings¹⁴.

The issuer of securities that are traded on a regulated market situated or operating in the United Kingdom, and of securities that: (a) are traded on a regulated market situated or operating outside the United Kingdom; and (b) are issued by an issuer for which the United Kingdom is the home member state, is liable to pay compensation to a person who has acquired such securities issued by it, and has suffered loss in respect of them as a result of any untrue or misleading statement in related publications¹⁵, or the omission from any such publication of any matter required to be included in it¹⁶.

298. Defamation at company meetings etc.

At common law, a claim cannot be brought for slanders uttered at a meeting of a company, provided the allegations are germane to its affairs and there is no malice, for to that extent the occasion is privileged; complaints made to the directors or managers touching the conduct of its affairs are similarly privileged¹. Even away from meetings of the company, a shareholder has a qualified privilege in making communications to another shareholder as such².

Neither a company nor its directors are liable in proceedings for libel if, without malice, they circulate among the shareholders an auditor's report reflecting on one of the agents³.

COMPANIES ACTS/(7) CAPACITY/(v) Torts/299. Defamation in published reports of proceedings or in published documents.

299. Defamation in published reports of proceedings or in published documents.

For the purposes of defamation proceedings¹, the publication² of any of the following reports or statements³ is subject to a statutory defence of qualified privilege⁴ unless the publication is shown to be made with malice⁵:

- 597 (1) a fair and accurate report of proceedings at a general meeting of a United Kingdom public company⁶;
- 598 (2) a fair and accurate copy of or extract from any document circulated to members of a United Kingdom public company⁷:
- 27
 - 49. (a) by or with the authority of the board of directors of the company⁸;
 - 50. (b) by the auditors of the company⁹; or
 - 51. (c) by any member of the company in pursuance of a right conferred by any statutory provision¹⁰;
- 28
 - 599 (3) a fair and accurate copy of or extract from any document circulated to members of a United Kingdom public company which relates to the appointment, resignation, retirement or dismissal of directors of the company¹¹;
 - 600 (4) a fair and accurate report of proceedings at any corresponding meeting of, or copy of or extract from any corresponding document circulated to members of, a public company formed under the law of any of the Channel Islands or the Isle of Man or of another member state¹².

However, in defamation proceedings in respect of the publication of such a report or statement, the statutory defence of qualified privilege is not available if the claimant shows that the defendant¹³:

- 601 (i) was requested by him to publish in a suitable manner¹⁴ a reasonable letter or statement by way of explanation or contradiction¹⁵; and
- 602 (ii) refused or neglected to do so¹⁶.

Nor is the statutory defence available to protect the publication of matter the publication of which is prohibited by law¹⁷.

1 As to defamation proceedings generally see LIBEL AND SLANDER.

2 For these purposes, 'publication' and 'publish', in relation to a statement, have the meaning they have for the purposes of the law of defamation generally (see LIBEL AND SLANDER vol 28 (Reissue) PARA 60 et seq): Defamation Act 1996 s 17(1). The provisions of s 15 (see LIBEL AND SLANDER vol 28 (Reissue) PARAS 131-132) do not apply to the publication to the public, or a section of the public, of matter which is not of public concern and the publication of which is not for the public benefit: s 15(3). Publication of a report of charges against a company's officers is not for the public benefit: Ponsford v Financial Times Ltd and Hart (1900) 16 TLR 248 (a meeting of company shareholders is a public meeting). See further LIBEL AND SLANDER vol 28 (Reissue) PARAS 294, 297.

3 A statement may be in the form of words or pictures or visual images or gestures or other methods of signifying meaning: see the Defamation Act 1952 s 16(1); the Defamation Act 1996 s 17(1); and LIBEL AND SLANDER vol 28 (Reissue) PARA 10 et seq.

4 Ie under the Defamation Act 1996 s 15 (see LIBEL AND SLANDER vol 28 (Reissue) PARAS 131-132). As to the defence of qualified privilege generally see LIBEL AND SLANDER vol 28 (Reissue) PARA 109 et seq.

5 Defamation Act 1996 s 15(1). As to malice sufficient to defeat a defence raised in defamation proceedings see LIBEL AND SLANDER vol 28 (Reissue) PARA 149 et seq.

6 Defamation Act 1996 s 15(1), Sch 1 para 13(1). For the purposes of heads (1)-(3) in the text, 'United Kingdom public company' means: (1) a public company within the meaning of the Companies Act 2006 s 4(2) (see PARA 102); or (2) a body corporate incorporated by or registered under any other statutory provision, or by royal charter, or formed in pursuance of letters patent (see PARAS 1-2): Defamation Act 1996 Sch 1 para 13(4) (amended by SI 2009/1941).

12 Defamation Act 1996 Sch 1 para 13(5). Provision may be made by order identifying for these purposes the corresponding meetings and documents: see Sch 1 para 17(1)(b). As to the procedure for making such an order see Sch 1 para 17(2), (3); and LIBEL AND SLANDER vol 28 (Reissue) PARA 133.

13 Defamation Act 1996 s 15(2). See note 4.

14 For this purpose, 'in a suitable manner' means in the same manner as the publication complained of or in a manner that is adequate and reasonable in the circumstances: Defamation Act 1996 s 15(2). The terms of the letter or statement which the claimant requires must be sent by him to the defendant as part of the request: see Khan v Ahmed [1957] 2 QB 149, [1957] 2 All ER 385 (a decision on an earlier similar provision under the Defamation Act 1952).

16 Defamation Act 1996 s 15(2)(b).

17 Defamation Act 1996 s 15(4)(a). See note 4. Nothing in these provisions is to be construed as limiting or abridging any privilege subsisting otherwise: s 15(4)(b).

300. Torts committed against companies.

A company may claim for any damage done to it in its corporate capacity by a tort not of a purely personal nature, such as a libel affecting its property, or a libel reflecting on the management of its trade or business¹, or attacking its financial position². It is not necessary to prove special damage³.

A claim is available to a trading company in respect of the malicious and unreasonable presentation of a winding-up petition against it⁴.

Where the company is a victim of a conspiracy to which its directors acting on its behalf are parties, the company will not be considered a co-conspirator, and may recover damages from the directors if it suffers loss as a result of the conspiracy⁵.

A company is not a 'person' for the purpose of seeking injunctive relief⁶ against harassment⁷.

(vi) Civil Proceedings involving a Company

301. Company's name in litigation.

As from the date of a company's incorporation¹, the subscribers of the memorandum of association², together with such other persons as may from time to time become members of the company³, are a body corporate⁴ by the name stated in the certificate of incorporation⁵. As such, the company may only proceed or be proceeded against in its corporate name⁶.

A change of a company's name has effect from the date on which the new certificate of incorporation is issued⁷; and the effect of the issue of the certificate of incorporation on change of name is not to re-form or reincorporate the company as a new entity but to recognise the continued existence of the company under its new name⁸. The change does not affect any rights or obligations of the company or render defective any legal proceedings by or against it⁹; and any legal proceedings that might have been continued or commenced against it by its former name may be continued or commenced against it by its new name¹⁰.

If the name of the company has been wrongly used as claimant, it will be struck out as claimant¹¹, but may be added as defendant¹². The solicitor¹³ or the person who instructed him and who was also claimant¹⁴ may be ordered to pay the costs of a company improperly made claimant and of the defendant¹⁵. However, where, in bringing the proceedings in the company's name, the claimants substantially represent the wishes of the majority of the shareholders, the claimants' costs may be directed to be paid by the company¹⁶. Where proceedings are properly brought in the company's name, the solicitors for those who unsuccessfully apply in its name for a stay may be ordered to pay the costs personally¹⁷.

A company which purports to have been incorporated in a foreign country may be recognised as a corporation in England and, as such, English law will allow it to sue and be sued in England in its corporate capacity¹⁸.

302. Control of company's litigation.

As regards litigation by an incorporated company¹, where management powers are vested generally in the board of directors², it is the directors who have authority to act for the company³. In the absence of any provision to the contrary in the articles of association, the majority of the members of a company⁴ are not entitled to decide whether an action in the company's name should be begun or allowed to proceed⁵. The secretary⁶ of a company cannot institute proceedings in its name in the absence of express authority to do so⁷; but proceedings begun without proper authority may subsequently be ratified⁸.

Any objection that proceedings in the name of the company are not properly authorised should be raised at the outset by an application to have the name of the company struck out; if not so raised, it may be raised when it comes to the attention of the court or the defendant that this is the case⁹. Where appropriate, the proceedings may be adjourned so that the issue as to the initial authorisation, or subsequent ratification, of the proceedings may be tried¹⁰.

COMPANIES ACTS/(7) CAPACITY/(vi) Civil Proceedings involving a Company/303.
Representative parties.

303. Representative parties.

Where more than one person has the same interest in a claim¹, as where a member of a company seeks to enforce or protect the rights of members generally, the claim may be begun (or the court may order that the claim be continued) by or against one or more of the persons who have the same interest, as representatives of any other persons who have that interest². Unless the court otherwise directs, any judgment or order given in a claim in which a party is acting as a representative under the rules governing representative parties is binding on all persons represented in the claim, but may only be enforced by or against a person who is not a party to the claim with the permission of the court³.

No consent is required from those on whose behalf the claimant purports to sue⁴. A claimant suing on behalf of a class must specify the class as accurately as possible⁵; but the fact that the interest of some members of the class is different from that of the claimant does not make the proceedings defective⁶. The fact that the claimant is suing on behalf of himself and others should be stated in the title of the pleading, and not merely in the statement of claim⁷.

Whatever is a defence against the party making a claim in a representative capacity is a defence to the proceedings, even though other persons on whose behalf he is making a claim might maintain the proceedings⁸. If anyone objects to the claimant suing on his behalf, he should apply to have himself added as a defendant⁹; but the application must be made promptly¹⁰.

The court will not allow a person to represent himself and others as defendants unless it is satisfied that he is authorised to represent the others¹¹.

If the claimant is suing as a creditor and a trustee is appointed in his bankruptcy whilst the proceedings are pending, the right of action vests in his trustee, and, unless the trustee intervenes, the proceedings will be dismissed¹².

304. When representative action may be brought.

A representative action is properly brought¹ by a shareholder to prevent the improper declaration or payment of dividends², or the misapplication of the company's funds³, or purchase by the company of its own shares⁴, or an improper reduction of capital⁵, or improper forfeiture of shares⁶, or to stop directors from making calls unfairly⁷, or to prevent loans to them⁸, or to impeach the validity of resolutions as to the issue of shares or otherwise⁹.

Proceedings may be brought by an applicant for shares on behalf of himself and other depositors when the company is abortive and no shares have been issued¹⁰.

Where another class of shareholders has a conflicting interest, they should be made defendants¹¹.

In proceedings against directors for misrepresentation, several persons may join as claimants¹².

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(7) CAPACITY/(vi) Civil Proceedings involving a Company/305. Procedure for making claims and applications to court under companies legislation.

305. Procedure for making claims and applications to court under companies legislation.

The legislation relating to companies provides for many applications to be made to the court with reference to the companies which are subject to its provisions¹.

The Civil Procedure Rules² apply to proceedings under the Companies Act 1985³, the Companies Act 2006⁴ and other legislation relating to companies and limited liability partnerships⁵, subject to the provision of the relevant practice direction which applies to those proceedings⁶. The claim form will be issued (where issued in the High Court) out of the Companies Court or a Chancery district registry or (where issued in a county court) out of a county court office⁷. Where, in a claim under the Companies Act 2006, the company concerned is not the claimant, the company is to be made a defendant to the claim unless any other enactment, the Civil Procedure Rules or a relevant practice direction⁸ makes a different provision or unless the court orders otherwise⁹; and where an application is made in the course of proceedings to which the company is or is required to be a defendant, the company must be made a respondent to the application unless any other enactment, the Civil Procedure Rules or a relevant practice direction¹⁰ makes a different provision or unless the court orders otherwise¹¹.

Provisions in the Companies Act 2006¹², supplemented by Civil Procedure Rules¹³, introduce a two-stage procedure for permission to continue a derivative claim: (1) the applicant is required to make a prima facie case for permission to continue a derivative claim and the court is required to consider the issue on the basis of the evidence filed by the applicant only, without requiring evidence from the defendant¹⁴; (2) before the substantive action begins, the court may require evidence to be provided by the company, and the matters which the court must take into account in considering whether to give permission and the circumstances in which the court is bound to refuse permission are set out¹⁵.

Questions as to the true meaning of a company's constitution¹⁶ may be decided by the court in the course of proceedings. The court may decide the question as between the company and the shareholder who is the other party to the claim¹⁷, but will not usually appoint a defendant shareholder to represent a class, or decide the question so as to bind the class unless a meeting of the members of the class is first called and nominates a person to represent the class¹⁸.

1 As to the procedure that applies generally to such applications see the text and notes 2-7. See also the Insolvency Rules 1986, SI 1986/1925; and COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 1041 et seq. The mode in which applications are to be made is dealt with in this title where the provisions under which the applications may be made are dealt with.

2 As to the Civil Procedure Rules generally see CIVIL PROCEDURE.

The Practice Direction--Applications under the Companies Acts and Related Legislation PD 49 applies to proceedings under the Companies Act 1985 (as to which see PARA 1541 et seq), under the Companies Act 2006 (except proceedings under Pt 11 Ch 1 (ss 260-264) (derivative claims in England and Wales or Northern Ireland) (see PARA 455 et seq) or under Pt 30 (ss 994-999) (protection of members against unfair prejudice) (see PARA 466 et seq)), under EC Council Regulation 2157/2001 (OJ L294, 10.11.2001, p 1) arts 22, 25 and 26 (see PARA 1643), under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt VII (ss 104-117) (control of business transfers) (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 49 (2008) PARA 590 et seq) and under the Companies (Cross-Border Mergers) Regulations 2007, SI 2007/2974 (see PARA 1451): see Practice Direction--Applications under the Companies Acts and Related Legislation PD 49 para 2. CPR Pt 19, and the practice direction supplementing CPR Pt 19, contain provisions about proceedings under the Companies Act 2006 Pt 11 Ch 1: see Practice Direction--Applications under the Companies Acts and Related Legislation PD 49 para 2; and see PARA 455 et seq.

7 See Practice Direction--Applications under the Companies Acts and Related Legislation PD 49 para 5(2). Proceedings to which Practice Direction--Applications under the Companies Acts and Related Legislation PD 49 applies must be started by a CPR Pt 8 claim form (as to which see CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARAS 117, 127 et seq) unless a provision of Practice Direction--Applications under the Companies Acts and Related Legislation PD 49 or another practice direction provides otherwise, but subject to any modification of that procedure by Practice Direction--Applications under the Companies Acts and Related Legislation PD 49 or any other practice direction: Practice Direction--Applications under the Companies Acts and Related Legislation PD 49 para 5(1). Where Practice Direction--Applications under the Companies Acts and Related Legislation PD 49 requires a party to proceedings to notify another person of an application, such notification must, unless the court orders otherwise, be given by sending to that other person a copy of the claim form as soon as reasonably practicable after the claim form has been issued: see para 5(3).

The claim form in proceedings under the Companies Act 1985 (as to which see PARA 1541 et seq), under the Companies Act 2006, under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt VII (control of business transfers) (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 49 (2008) PARA 590 et seq), under EC Council Regulation 2157/2001 (OJ L294, 10.11.2001, p 1) (see PARA 1643) or under the Companies (Cross-Border Mergers) Regulations 2007, SI 2007/2974 (see PARA 1451), and any application, affidavit, witness statement, notice or other document in such proceedings, must be entitled 'In the matter of [the name of the company in question] and in the matter of [the relevant law]', where the 'relevant law' means the 'Companies Act 1985', the 'Companies Act 2006', 'Part VII of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000', 'Council Regulation (EC) No 2157/2001 of 8 October 2001 on the Statute for a European Company (SE)' or the 'Companies (Cross-Border Merger) Regulations 2007', as the case may be: see Practice Direction--Applications under the Companies Acts and Related Legislation PD 49 para 4(1). A statement of claim against a company, if it states the corporate title, need not allege that the company is a corporation or state how it was incorporated: Woolf v City Steam Boat Co (1849) 7 CB 103. In a debenture holders' claim, the statement of claim must be entitled in the matter of the company: see PARA 1381.

307. Disclosure.

An officer of a company¹ need not be made a party to proceedings in order to obtain disclosure of documents².

If a company is a party to proceedings, the opposite party may apply to the court for an order asking the company to clarify any matter which is in dispute in the proceedings or to give additional information in relation to any such matter, whether or not the matter is contained, or referred to, in a statement of case³.

A response to such a request must be in writing, dated and signed by the party from whom the information is sought or his legal representative⁴, and must be verified by a statement of truth⁵. A responsible or proper officer or member⁶ of the company, normally the company secretary⁷, should make the statement of truth, but the order may name any officer or member who has personal knowledge as to the information in the company's possession⁸.

3 See CPR Pt 18; and CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 611. However, before applying for such an order, the party seeking clarification or information should first serve on the party from whom it is sought a written request for that clarification or information stating a date by which the response to the request should be served; the date must allow the second party a reasonable time to respond: see Practice Direction--Further Information PD 18 para 1; and CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 611. The request should be concise and

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(7) CAPACITY/(vi) Civil Proceedings involving a Company/308. Security for costs in company claims.

308. Security for costs in company claims.

A defendant to any claim may apply¹ for security for his costs of the proceedings².

In exercising its discretion, the court will have regard to all the circumstances of the case, and must balance the injustice to the claimant (if he should be prevented from pursuing a proper claim by an order for security) against the injustice to the defendant (if no security is ordered and at the trial the claim fails and the defendant finds himself unable to recover from the claimant the costs which have been incurred by him in his defence of the claim)³. In considering all the circumstances, the court will have regard to the claimant company's prospects of success but without going into the merits in detail unless it can clearly be demonstrated that there is a high degree of probability of success or failure⁴. The court will not refuse to order security on the ground that it would unfairly stifle a valid claim unless it is satisfied that in all the circumstances, including whether the company can fund the litigation from outside sources, it is probable that the claim would be stifled⁵.

Pre-action costs could be the subject of an application for security but the court should be slow to exercise its discretion in favour of an applicant in such circumstances because of the risk that, if the pre-action period were lengthy, the costs might be extensive and any subsequent attempt to obtain security in respect of such costs might become penal in nature⁶.

The requirement for security does not enable security to be ordered to be given by the liquidator of a company taking proceedings in his own name, even where he has no means, either when he is conducting proceedings for misfeasance or is coming to the court in exercise of any other statutory duty⁷.

The fact of a company being in liquidation is prima facie evidence that it will, if unsuccessful, be unable to pay the defendant's costs, even if the liquidation occurs while proceedings are pending⁸. The mere fact that a company has issued a debenture charging all its assets to secure the repayment of money then or at any time owing to a particular person is not itself a sufficient reason for ordering security⁹. A defendant company is not obliged to give security¹⁰; nor need it do so if it is claimant in proceedings against a person who is suing it in other proceedings in regard to the same subject matter¹¹.

If, however, there is a counterclaim or separate proceedings to impeach the transaction in respect of which the original proceedings are brought, security may be ordered¹², but the amount of the security should be determined by the claim alone, and not by the cross claim¹³.

In interpleader proceedings, if both parties are in substance claimants, and are in a similar financial position, an order for security may only be made by one upon giving the like security as the other is ordered to give¹⁴.

Where the court makes an order for security for costs, it will determine the amount of security¹⁵ and direct the manner in which¹⁶ and the time within which the security must be given¹⁷.

1 le under CPR Pt 25 Section II (CPR 25.12-CPR 25.15): see CPR 25.12(1); and CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 745.

2 See CPR 25.12; CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 745. Security for costs is dealt with among the interim remedies ordered under CPR Pt 25: see Section II; and CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 11 (2009) PARA 745 et seq. As to the court's power to order indemnity against liability for costs in favour of the claimant in derivative claims see PARA 461. The court will only have jurisdiction to award security if it appears by credible testimony that there is reason to believe that the company will, and not merely may, be unable to pay the defendant's costs if successful in its defence: Europa Holdings Ltd v Circle Industries (UK) plc [1993] BCLC 320, CA. There is a critical difference between a conclusion that there is 'reason to believe' that a company will be unable to pay costs and a conclusion that this has been proved to be the case: Jirehouse Capital v Beller [2008] EWCA Civ 908, [2009] 1 WLR 751, [2008] BPIR 1498.

The Companies Act 1985 provided that where a limited company was a claimant in any legal proceeding, the court having jurisdiction in the matter had power, if it appeared by credible testimony that there was reason to believe that the company would have been unable to pay the costs of the defendant if successful in his defence, to require sufficient security to be given for those costs, and to stay all proceedings until the security was given: see s 726 (repealed). This provision, which covered proceedings commenced by petition (Re Unisoft Group Ltd [1993] BCLC 528) and patent proceedings before the Comptroller-General of Patents, Designs and Trade Marks (Abdulhayoglu's Application [2000] RPC 18) has not been re-enacted in the Companies Act 2006. However, the cases cited in the text remain relevant to applications for security for costs under CPR 25.12, which used to interact with the Companies Act 1985 s 726 (repealed). As to the interaction between CPR Pt 25 and the Companies Act 1985 s 726 (repealed) see Classic Catering Ltd v Donnington Park Leisure Ltd [2001] 1 BCLC 537; Anglo Petroleum Ltd v Hocking [2002] EWHC 2375 (Ch), [2002] All ER (D) 444 (Oct) (application made by receivers for security for costs under CPR 25.13 and the Companies Act 1985 s 726 (repealed) allowed as it was clear that, if a costs order were to be made in favour of the receivers following the trial of the claim, the company would be unable to pay it). As to the Comptroller-General of Patents, Designs and Trade Marks see PATENTS AND REGISTERED DESIGNS vol 79 (2008) PARA 577.

Remission of the case to the county court did not deprive the judge in the county court of his power under the Companies Act 1985 s 726 (repealed) to order security: Plasycoed Collieries Co Ltd v Partridge, Jones & Co Ltd (1911) 104 LT 807, DC. Security may be ordered up to a certain stage of the proceedings, with liberty to apply: Western of Canada Oil, Lands and Works Co v Walker (1875) 10 Ch App 628. The fact that there was another claimant, whose claim only slightly overlapped the claimant company's claim, was held not to be a ground for excusing the company from giving security in John Bishop (Caterers) Ltd v National Union Bank Ltd [1973] 1 All ER 707. In Bilcon Ltd v Fegmay Investments Ltd [1966] 2 QB 221, [1966] 2 All ER 513, security was ordered in a reference to arbitration. See also Pearson v Naydler [1977] 3 All ER 531, [1977] 1 WLR 899 (security ordered where there was a natural person as co-plaintiff with the company). A successful claimant will not be entitled to have the security paid out to him where the defendant has lodged an appeal and the interests of justice require that the payment stays with the court: Stabilad Ltd v Stephens & Carter Ltd [1998] 4 All ER 129, [1999] 1 WLR 1201, CA.

3 Sir Lindsay Parkinson & Co Ltd v Triplan Ltd [1973] QB 609, [1973] 2 All ER 273, CA (discretion exercisable according to all the circumstances of the particular case); Porzelack KG v Porzelack (UK) Ltd [1987] 1 All ER 1074, [1987] 1 WLR 420; Keary Developments Ltd v Tarmac Construction Ltd [1995] 3 All ER 534, [1995] 2 BCLC 395, CA.

Account should also be taken of the conduct of the litigation, including any open offer or payment into court, any changes of stance by the parties and the lateness of the application, if appropriate: Keary Developments Ltd v Tarmac Construction Ltd.

5 Trident International Freight Services Ltd v Manchester Ship Canal Co [1990] BCLC 263, CA; Keary Developments Ltd v Tarmac Construction Ltd [1995] 3 All ER 534, [1995] 2 BCLC 395, CA. In this regard, it is for the claimant company to satisfy the court that it would be prevented by an order for security from continuing the litigation (Keary Developments Ltd v Tarmac Construction Ltd); but it is not necessary for the company, in order to have the application dismissed, to adduce evidence that it will or may be unable to pursue the proceedings if the order is granted (Trident International Freight Services Ltd v Manchester Ship Canal Co).

6 Lobster Group Ltd v Heidelberg Graphic Equipment Ltd [2008] EWHC 413 (TCC), [2008] 2 All ER 1173, [2008] 1 BCLC 722. Moreover, the greater the distance in time between the incurring of the costs and the commencement of the proceedings, the greater would be the likelihood that the losing party would have good grounds to dispute its liability to reimburse such costs in any event and/or would have a stronger argument to the effect that the court should not exercise its discretion under CPR Pt 25 and order security in respect of such historic costs: Lobster Group Ltd v Heidelberg Graphic Equipment Ltd.

7 Re Strand Wood Co Ltd [1904] 2 Ch 1, CA. In such a case, the liquidator may be ordered to pay the costs personally: see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 594. 309. Non-party costs orders against directors.

Generally, where the court is considering whether to exercise its power¹ to make a costs order in favour of or against a person who is not a party to proceedings, that person must be added as a party to the proceedings for the purposes of costs only².

Although the circumstances in which it is appropriate to make an order for costs against a person who was not a party to the litigation always have to be exceptional³, liability for costs has been ordered in this way where a non-party director has been described as the 'real party', seeking his own benefit, in controlling or funding a company's litigation⁴, even where he has acted in good faith or without any impropriety⁵.

However, the mere fact that an action brought by a company has been held to be an abuse of process does not necessarily mean that the company's managing director should be personally liable to pay the costs owed by the company⁶.

310. Enforcement of judgments and orders against company.

Judgment against a company may be enforced by writ of fieri facias¹, as in the case of a natural person². Any judgment or order against the company requiring it to do an act within a specified time or requiring it to abstain from doing an act may, with the permission of the court, be enforced by sequestration against its property, or by committal against any of its directors or other officers, or by sequestration against their property³. For this purpose, an undertaking given to the court and embodied in a court order has the same effect as a judgment or order⁴. A company cannot be attached for contempt of court⁵, but the court may inflict an appropriate fine⁶; and sequestration will be ordered if the company contumaciously refuses to obey, though not in the case of casual or accidental and unintentional disobedience⁷.

It was held that where a winding-up petition was presented founded on a judgment debt, the petition was not a mode of enforcing the judgment so as to be covered by a civil aid certificate given in the original proceedings (Re Parker Davies and Hughes Ltd [1953] 2 All ER 1158, [1953] 1 WLR 1349); but following a change in the wording of the relevant rules this decision has become obsolete (Re Peretz Co Ltd [1965] Ch 200, [1964] 3 All ER 633). See also Benabo v William Jay & Partners Ltd [1941] Ch 52, [1940] 4 All ER 196. It was formerly not necessary that the judgment or order which had been disobeyed should have been served personally on the company, as service on the company's solicitors was sufficient (Aberdonia Cars Ltd v Brown, Hughes and Strachan Ltd (1915) 59 Sol Jo 598 (sequestration)), at all events where the order was merely prohibitive (see Ronson Products Ltd v Ronson Furniture Ltd [1966] Ch 603, [1966] 2 All ER 381). Personal service on the director affected is now essential: see CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 45 r 7(3); and CIVIL PROCEDURE vol 12 (2009) PARA 1249. Execution may be issued against shareholders or public officers of joint stock companies which were registered under 7 & 8 Vict c 110 (Joint Stock Companies) (1844), or the Country Bankers Act 1826, and have not been re-registered under the Joint Stock Companies Acts (see PARA 24 note 5); but such a proceeding is now so rare as to be practically obsolete. Where, however, a company is ordered by the court not to do certain acts or to give an undertaking to the like effect and a director of the company is aware of that order or undertaking, the director is under a duty to take reasonable steps to ensure that the order or undertaking is obeyed; and if he wilfully fails to take those steps and the order or undertaking is breached, he may be punished for contempt unless he reasonably believes that some other director or officer of the company is taking them: A-G for Tuvalu v Philatelic Distribution Corp'n Ltd [1990] 2 All ER 216, [1990] 1 WLR 926, CA.

(vii) Company's Liability for Criminal Acts etc

311. Potential criminal liability of a company.

The activities of a registered company¹ are subject to the criminal law in the same way as those of a natural person²; and a company may be convicted of offences both at common law³ and under statute⁴, including those offences which require mens rea⁵. Where an offence requires mens rea, a company may be convicted if the offence is committed in the course of business by a person in control of its affairs to such a degree that the company may fairly be said to think and act through him so that his actions and intent are the actions and intent of the company⁶; in such a case, those who 'constitute the directing mind and will of the company' are the company for this purpose⁷. Although the 'directing mind' may delegate its functions, it is not enough, for criminal liability to attach, that the person whose conduct it is sought to impute to the company is a manager or responsible agent or high executive⁸; whether persons are the 'directing mind and will' of a company, so that their conduct in its affairs becomes the conduct of the company, must depend on all the circumstances⁹.

A company cannot be guilty of any criminal offences which, by their very nature, may be committed only by natural persons¹⁰. Nor can a company be indicted for a crime where the only punishment is imprisonment¹¹.

1 As to the meaning of 'company' generally see PARA 1. As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

2 The subject to the proviso that there are certain offences that can be committed only by natural persons or for which only natural persons may be convicted: see the text and notes 10-11. In any Act, unless the contrary intention appears, 'person' includes a body of persons corporate or unincorporate: see the Interpretation Act 1978 ss 5, 22(1), Sch 1; and STATUTES vol 44(1) (Reissue) PARA 1382. This definition of 'person', so far as it includes bodies corporate, applies to any provision of an Act whenever passed relating to an offence punishable on indictment or on summary conviction: see s 22(1), Sch 2 para 4(5). As to corporate liability for criminal acts generally see CORPORATIONS vol 9(2) (2006 Reissue) PARA 1280; and CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 38 et seq. As to corporate personality generally see PARA 2; and CORPORATIONS vol 9(2) (2006 Reissue) PARAS 1225-1226. 6 One source of difficulty in attaching criminal liability to a company lies in the principle of separate corporate personality: see PARA 120 note 16. Since a company is an artificial person, the knowledge of those who manage and control it must be treated as the knowledge of the company: see Houghton & Co v Nothard, Lowe and Wills Ltd [1928] AC 1, [1927] All ER Rep 97.

Historically, cases of 'corporate manslaughter' have tested this principle: see R v P & O European Ferries (Dover) Ltd (1991) 93 Cr App Rep 72; R v HM Coroner for East Kent, ex p Spooner (1987) 88 Cr App Rep 10, 3 BCC 636, DC. In A-G's Reference (No 2 of 1999) [2000] QB 796, [2000] 3 All ER 182, CA, which was made partly on the question of whether a non-human defendant can be convicted of the criminal offence of manslaughter by gross negligence in the absence of evidence establishing the guilt of an identified human individual for the same crime, the court held that a corporation's liability for manslaughter was based solely on the principle of 'identification', which was just as relevant to actus reus as to mens rea, and that unless an identified individual's conduct, characterisable as gross criminal negligence, could be attributed to the corporation, the corporation was not, at common law, liable for manslaughter; the court on that reference also held that civil negligence rules were not apt to confer criminal liability on a corporation: see A-G's Reference (No 2 of 1999) at 815-816, 191-192. This position, as it relates to the common law offence of manslaughter by gross negligence in its application to corporations, has been modified by statute: see the Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007; and PARA 313.

A corporation may be vicariously liable for a crime committed by its servant or agent in the course of his employment or agency in the same circumstances as an employer or principal who is a natural person: see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 59 et seq.

It is not possible to aggregate the acts and states of mind of two or more controlling officers (none of whom could be criminally liable) so as to render the corporation liable: R v HM Coroner for East Kent, ex p Spooner (1987) 88 Cr App Rep 10, 3 BCC 636, DC; R v P & O European Ferries (Dover) Ltd (1990) 93 Cr App Rep 72; A-G's Reference (No 2 of 1999) [2000] QB 796, [2000] 3 All ER 182, CA. As to the 'identification principle', which attributes the directing mind and will of the company, see PARA 312.

The principle of non-attribution, by which knowledge of a fraud would not be attributed to a company when the fraud was practised on the company itself, could apply where the fraud or dishonesty of the company's directing mind and will was targeted against the company itself, depending on whether the company was to be regarded as the villain or victim of the fraud: see Stone & Rolls Ltd (in liq) v Moore Stephens (a firm) [2008] EWCA Civ 644, [2008] 3 WLR 1146, [2008] 2 BCLC 461 (where a company's sole directing mind and will procured the company to enter into fraudulent transactions with the bank, and it was the company that dealt with the bank, his dishonesty was to be imputed to the company; the company was therefore itself liable for the frauds and, being the fraudster rather than the target of the fraud, the adverse consequences which it suffered from the fraud did not make it a victim; where the fraudulent conduct of the directing mind and will of the company was to be treated as the conduct of the company, ex turpi causa would defeat a claim by the company against its auditors for failure to detect the fraud); affd [2009] UKHL 39, [2009] 3 WLR 455.

It would bring the law into disrepute if every act and state of mind of an individual employee was attributed to a company which was entirely blameless: see Tesco Supermarkets Ltd v Natrass [1972] AC 153 at 169, [1971] 2 All ER 127 at 131, HL, per Lord Reid; and see Canadian Dredge & Dock Co Ltd v R (1985) 19 DLR (4th) 314, 19 CCC (3d) 1, Can SC.

9 An important circumstance is the constitution of the corporation and the extent to which it identifies the natural persons who, by the constitution or as a result of action taken by the directors or by the corporation in general meeting pursuant to the articles, are entrusted with the exercise of the powers of the corporation: see Tesco Supermarkets Ltd v Natrass [1972] AC 153 at 199-200, [1971] 2 All ER 127 at 155, HL, per Lord Diplock. As to the meaning of references to a company's constitution see PARA 227.

10 See DPP v Kent and Sussex Contractors Ltd [1944] KB 146, [1944] 1 All ER 119, DC, where earlier cases are also discussed. There appears to be a conflict in the case law as to whether a corporation can commit perjury: cf R v ICR Haulage Ltd [1944] KB 551 at 554, [1944] 1 All ER 691 at 693, CCA ('[there] are the cases in which, from its very nature, the offence cannot be committed by a corporation, as, for example, perjury, an offence which cannot be vicariously committed, or bigamy, an offence which a limited company, not being a natural person, cannot commit vicariously or otherwise'); Wych v Meal (1734) 3 P Wms 310 (corporation cannot commit perjury); Odyssey Re (London) Ltd (formerly Sphere Drake Insurance plc) v OIC Run-Off Ltd (formerly Orion Insurance Co plc) [2001] Lloyd's Rep IR 1, CA (where a party is a corporation, it is possible for evidence perjured by a natural person to be treated as that of the company, the test to be adopted being whether the natural person in question has the status and authority which in law make his acts in the matter under consideration the acts of the company, so that he is to be treated as the company itself). A corporation cannot be convicted of conspiracy where the only other party to it is the sole director of the corporation: R v McDonnell [1966] 1 QB 233, 50 Cr App Rep 5. As to manslaughter see note 6.

A corporation cannot be guilty as a principal of dangerous driving or of driving without due care and attention. In R v Robert Millar (Contractors) Ltd, R v Millar [1970] 2 QB 54, 54 Cr App Rep 158, CA, the corporation was convicted as a secondary party to the offence of causing death through dangerous driving (contrary to what is now the Road Traffic Act 1988 s 1: see ROAD TRAFFIC vol 40(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 963).

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(7) CAPACITY/(vii) Company's Liability for Criminal Acts etc/312. Directing mind of company.

312. Directing mind of company.

Since a company cannot act of itself, but only through an individual, and even then not necessarily through one and the same individual, the question arises whether, on the one hand, a person so acting is acting as a living embodiment of the company, or whether, on the other hand, he is merely acting as the company's employee or agent¹.

For most civil purposes, it is not necessary to decide the matter, since usually as a result of the doctrine of ostensible authority the company will be bound by the acts of the person acting on its behalf². The question is, however, often a live one so far as the criminal law is concerned, since for the acts of a person who may properly be classified as the 'directing mind of the company'³ the company will undoubtedly be liable criminally⁴ if those acts are in breach of any of the provisions of the criminal law⁵; but if the person who has acted is merely an employee or agent, the company may well be able to refute any charge or take advantage of any exempting provision based on actual fault in the actor⁶.

The directors may delegate part of their functions of management in such a way as to make their delegate an embodiment of the company within the sphere of the delegation; but they do not do this merely because, of necessity, ministerial functions have to be delegated⁷. Once the facts relating to the precise position of the person alleged to form the directing mind of the company have been ascertained, it is a question of law whether that person, in doing a particular act, is or is not to be regarded as the company⁸. The main considerations are the relative position in the company which he holds and the extent to which, as a matter of fact, he is in actual control of its operations or a section of them without effective superior control⁹.

1 See Tesco Supermarkets Ltd v Nattrass [1972] AC 153 at 170, [1971] 2 All ER 127 at 131-132, HL, per Lord Reid. Where a company's rights and obligations cannot be determined either by the primary rules of attribution, expressed in its constitution or implied by law, for determining what acts are to be attributed to the company, or by the application of the general principles of agency or vicarious liability, the question of attribution for a particular substantive rule is a matter of interpretation or construction of that rule. If the court decides that the substantive rule is intended to apply to a company, it then has to decide how the rule is intended to apply and whose act or knowledge or state of mind is for that purpose intended to count as the act, knowledge or state of mind of the company. Although in some cases that can be determined by applying the test of whose was the 'directing mind and will' of the company so that his fault or knowledge becomes the company's fault or knowledge, that test is not appropriate in all cases: Meridian Global Funds Management Asia Ltd v Securities Commission [1995] 2 AC 500, [1995] 3 All ER 918, PC, applying Tesco Supermarkets Ltd v Natrass. See also KR v Royal & Sun Alliance plc [2006] EWCA Civ 1454, [2007] 1 All ER (Comm) 161, [2007] Lloyd's Rep IR 368 (acts of managing director and majority shareholder attributed to company).

2 See PARA 266 et seq. As to cases under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 s 30(1)(f), involving a consideration of the landlord's intention, see LANDLORD AND TENANT vol 27(2) (2006 Reissue) PARA 741 et seq.

3 The line of authority for attributing the 'directing mind of the company' ('identification') is usually traced back to Lennard's Carrying Co Ltd v Asiatic Petroleum Co Ltd [1915] AC 705 at 713, HL, per Viscount Haldane LC ('a corporation is an abstraction. It has no mind of its own any more than it has a body of its own; its active and directing will must consequently be sought in the person of somebody who for some purposes may be called an agent, but who is really the directing mind and will of the corporation, the very ego and centre of the personality of the corporation'). See also HL Bolton (Engineering) Co Ltd v TJ Graham & Sons Ltd [1957] 1 QB 159 at 172, [1956] 3 All ER 624 at 630, CA, per Denning LJ; and Tesco Supermarkets Ltd v Natrass [1972] AC 153 at 170, [1971] 2 All ER 127 at 131-132, HL, per Lord Reid. If there is just one person classified as the 'directing mind of the company', he cannot conspire with the company, since conspiracy requires two minds: R v McDonnell [1966] 1 QB 233, [1966] 1 All ER 193.

4 This doctrine, sometimes known as the 'alter ego' doctrine, has been developed in both civil and criminal jurisdictions with no divergence of approach, the authorities in each being cited indifferently in the other. A company having no mind or will of its own, the need for it arises because the criminal law often requires mens rea as a constituent of the crime and the civil law often requires intention or knowledge as an ingredient of the cause of action or defence: El Ajou v Dollar Land Holdings plc [1994] 2 All ER 685 at 472-473, CA, per Nourse LJ.

5 This will not be so, however, where the directors or other directing minds are acting for their own benefit at the expense of the company, or in order to deprive the company of part of its assets: see eg Belmont Finance Corp Ltd v Williams Furniture Ltd [1979] Ch 250, [1979] 1 All ER 118, CA.

313. Liability for corporate manslaughter.

The common law offence of manslaughter by gross negligence¹ is abolished in its application to corporations², and in any application it has to other organisations to which the Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007³ applies⁴.

Under the 2007 Act, a corporation or other such organisation⁵ is guilty of the offence of corporate manslaughter if the way in which its activities are managed or organised causes a person's death, amounting to a gross breach of a relevant duty of care owed by the organisation to the deceased, but only if the way in which its activities are managed or organised by its senior management is a substantial element in that breach⁶. For these purposes, the term 'relevant duty of care', in relation to an organisation, is defined by reference to specified duties owed under the law of negligence⁷. In assessing whether an organisation's breach of a relevant duty of care was 'gross', the jury is required to consider whether the organisation failed to comply with relevant health and safety legislation, the seriousness of such a failure, how much of a risk of death it posed, and the wider context of the failure⁸.

An organisation that is guilty of corporate manslaughter is liable on conviction on indictment to a fine⁹.

1 As to manslaughter by gross negligence generally see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 100.

2 For these purposes, 'corporation' does not include a corporation sole but includes any body corporate wherever incorporated: see the Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 s 25; and CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE. As to corporations sole see CORPORATIONS vol 9(2) (2006 Reissue) PARAS 1111-1112. As to the criminal liability of companies generally see PARAS 311-312.

4 See the Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 s 20; and CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE. The organisations to which s 1 applies are a corporation (other than a corporation sole: see s 25; and note 2), a government department or other body that is listed in Sch 1, a police force, and a partnership (or a trade union or employers' association) that is an employer: see s 1; and CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE. As to the application of the Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 to the Crown see s 11; as to its application to the armed forces see s 12; and as to police forces see s 13; and see generally CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE. As to partnerships see s 14; and CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE.

6 See the Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 s 1; and CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE. For these purposes, a breach of a duty of care by an organisation is a 'gross' breach if the conduct alleged to amount to a breach of that duty falls far below what can reasonably be expected of the organisation in the circumstances (see also the text and note 8); and 'senior management', in relation to an organisation, means the persons who play significant roles in the making of decisions about how the whole or a substantial part of its activities are to be managed or organised, or in the actual managing or organising of the whole or a substantial part of those activities: see s 1; and CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE.

An individual cannot be guilty of aiding, abetting, counselling or procuring the commission of an offence of corporate manslaughter: see s 18; and CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE.

7 See the Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 s 2, which is subject to the modifications and exceptions contained in ss 3-7; and see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE.

8 See the Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 s 8; and CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE. See also note 6.

9 See the Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007 s 1; and CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE. A court before which an organisation is convicted of corporate manslaughter may make an order (a 'remedial order') requiring the organisation to take specified steps to remedy the relevant breach, and any matter that appears to the court to have resulted from the relevant breach and to have been a cause of the death, and any deficiency, as regards health and safety matters, in the organisation's policies, systems or practices of which the relevant breach appears to the court to be an indication: see s 9; and CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE. A court before which an organisation is convicted of corporate manslaughter also may make an order (a 'publicity order') requiring the organisation to publicise in a specified manner the fact that it has been convicted of the offence, specified particulars of the offence, the amount of any fine imposed and the terms of any remedial order made: see s 10 (not yet in force); and CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE. The fact that an organisation is charged with or has been convicted of corporate manslaughter does not preclude a further charge of a health and safety offence which arises out of the same set of circumstances: see s 19; and CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(7) CAPACITY/(vii) Company's Liability for Criminal Acts etc/314. Criminal liability attaching to officers of a company.

314. Criminal liability attaching to officers of a company.

Where a company is criminally liable for an offence, a natural person involved may also be convicted of it, as a joint principal or as an accomplice¹. In addition, many statutes now provide for the guilt of controlling officers of the company who would not be criminally liable under ordinary principles, or whose guilt it would otherwise be hard to prove².

Directors, officers and members may be liable for the general offences of theft in relation to the company's property (ie if any such person dishonestly appropriates property belonging to the company with the intention of permanently depriving the company of it)³ or for false accounting⁴. Where an offence of false accounting is committed by a body corporate and the offence is proved to have been committed with the consent or connivance of any director, manager, secretary or other similar officer⁵ of the body corporate, he, as well as the body corporate, is guilty of the offence, and is liable to be proceeded against and punished accordingly⁶. A person, on the basis that to do otherwise would incriminate either himself or his spouse or civil partner, cannot refuse to give evidence in civil proceedings, or to comply with any order made in any such proceedings; but no statement or admission made by him in answering a question put or in complying with such an order will be admissible in evidence against that person in proceedings for any offence under the Theft Act 1968⁷.

Where an officer of a body corporate or unincorporated association (or person purporting to act as such), with intent to deceive members or creditors of the body corporate or association about its affairs, publishes or concurs in publishing a written statement or account which to his knowledge is or may be misleading, false or deceptive in a material particular, he is (on conviction on indictment) liable to imprisonment for a term not exceeding seven years⁸.

Any person may become liable under the general offence of fraud, which may be committed by false representation, by failing to disclose information, or by abuse of position⁹. In all cases of fraud where two or more persons such as directors co-operate, an indictment for conspiracy will normally lie¹⁰; but, where only one person is the directing mind of the company¹¹, a charge of conspiracy with the company will not lie, as there are not the necessary two minds concerned¹². Where the conspiracy is to commit a fraud on the company or to deprive it of part of its assets, the natural persons to the conspiracy being the company's directors, a charge of conspiracy will not lie against the company, even though the company, through the agency of the conspiring directors, carries out part of the conspired acts¹³.

The Companies Act 2006, the Insolvency Act 1986 and the Company Directors Disqualification Act 1986 include many provisions rendering directors and others liable to imprisonment¹⁴. Many of the offences punishable are those committed in connection with a company which is being wound up¹⁵.

Provision is made under the Companies Acts in relation to the criminal liability of an officer in default¹⁶.

2 The most pertinent example is the Corporate Manslaughter and Corporate Homicide Act 2007: see PARA 313. However, more commonly, statutes provide that, where an offence created by the particular statute which has been committed by a body corporate is proved to have been committed with the consent or connivance of, or to be attributable to any neglect on the part of, a director, manager, secretary or other similar officer of the body corporate, or any person who was purporting to act in any such capacity, he, as well as the body corporate, is guilty of that offence: see eg the Trade Descriptions Act 1968 s 20(1) (see SALE OF GOODS AND SUPPLY OF SERVICES vol 41 (2005 Reissue) PARA 500); the Insolvency Act 1986 s 432(2) (see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 928); the Consumer Protection Act 1987 s 40(2) (see SALE OF GOODS AND SUPPLY OF SERVICES vol 41 (2005 Reissue) PARA 538); the Food Safety Act 1990 s 36 (see FOOD vol 18(2) (Reissue) PARA 460); the Clean Air Act 1993 s 52 (see ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY AND PUBLIC HEALTH vol 45 (2010) PARA 247); and the Railways Act 1993 s 147 (see RAILWAYS, INLAND WATERWAYS AND CROSS-COUNTRY PIPELINES vol 39(1A) (Reissue) PARA 428). See further CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 38. See also the text and note 16; and the Fraud Act 2006 s 12 (cited in PARA 316).

See also R (on the application of A) v Crown Court at Snaresbrook (2001) Times, 12 July, [2001] All ER (D) 123 (Jun) (director could be found guilty of theft where appropriation was dishonest).

4 See the Theft Act 1968 s 17; and CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 316.

5 This extends also to a person purporting to act as such: see the Theft Act 1968 s 18(1).

6 Theft Act 1968 s 18(1). Where the affairs of a company are managed by its members, s 18 applies in relation to the member's acts and defaults in connection with his management functions as if he were a director: s 18(2).

7 Theft Act 1968 s 31(1). When an act done by a person is first disclosed by him without making any objection during cross-examination in civil proceedings, it is not disclosed by him 'in consequence of any compulsory process of any court of law' (the phrase used in the Larceny Act 1861 s 85 (repealed), which is now replaced by the Theft Act 1968 s 31(1)): R v Noel [1914] 3 KB 848, CCA. 8 Theft Act 1968 s 19(1). For these purposes, a person who has entered into a security for the benefit of a body corporate or association is to be treated as a creditor of it: s 19(2). Where the affairs of a body corporate or association are managed by its members, s 19 applies to any statement which a member publishes or concurs in publishing in connection with his functions of management as if he were an officer of the body corporate or association: s 19(3).

9 See the Fraud Act 2006 ss 1-5; and CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 309. The general offence of fraud mentioned in the text replaces various deception offences contained in the Theft Act 1968 s 15 (repealed) and s 16 (repealed).

An agreement between two or more persons to purchase shares in a company in order to induce persons thereafter purchasing shares in it to believe, contrary to the fact, that there is a bona fide market in the shares, and that there is a real premium, being an offence indictable as a conspiracy, no claim may be maintained in respect of such an agreement or purchase of shares: Scott v Brown, Doering, McNab & Co. See also Taylor v Chester (1869) LR 4 QB 309; Begbie v Phosphate Sewage Co (1876) 1 QBD 679.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(7) CAPACITY/(vii) Company's Liability for Criminal Acts etc/315. Criminal liability of officer in default under the Companies Acts.

315. Criminal liability of officer in default under the Companies Acts.

Certain provisions of the Companies Acts¹ are worded to the effect that, in the event of contravention of an enactment² in relation to a company³, an offence is committed by every officer of the company who is in default⁴. For these purposes, 'officer' includes any director⁵, manager or secretary⁶, and any person who is to be treated as an officer of the company for the purposes of the provision in question⁷; and an officer is 'in default' for the purposes of the provision if he authorises or permits, participates in, or fails to take all reasonable steps to prevent, the contravention⁸.

Where a company is an officer⁹ of another company, it does not commit an offence as an officer in default¹⁰ unless one of its officers is in default¹¹. Where any such offence is committed by a company the officer in question also commits the offence and is liable to be proceeded against and punished accordingly¹².

1 As to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

2 As to the meaning of 'enactment' see PARA 17 note 2.

3 As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24. The provisions of the Companies Act 2006 s 1121 apply to a body other than a company as they apply to a company: s 1123(1). See further notes 5, 6.

4 Companies Act 2006 s 1121(1). See eg s 32(3) (constitutional documents to be provided to members) (see PARA 242); and s 36(3) (documents to be incorporated in or accompany copies of articles issued by company) (see PARA 241).

In most cases under the Companies Act 2006, however, liability falls upon both the company and the 'officer in default': see s 26(3) (registrar to be sent copy of amended articles) (see PARA 236); s 30(2) (copies of resolutions or agreements to be forwarded to registrar) (see PARA 231); 5 As to the meaning of 'director' see PARA 478. As the Companies Act 2006 s 1121 applies in relation to a body corporate other than a company (see note 3), the reference to a director of the company must be read as referring, where the body's affairs are managed by its members, to a member of the body and, in any other case, to any corresponding officer of the body: s 1123(2)(a). As s 1121 applies in relation to a partnership, the reference to a director of the company must be read as referring to a member of the partnership (s 1123(3)(a)); and, as it applies in relation to an unincorporated body other than a partnership, the reference to a director of the company must be read as referring, where the body's affairs are managed by its members, to a member of the body and, in any other case, to a member of the governing body (s 1123(4)(a)). As to the meaning of 'body corporate' for the purposes of the Companies Acts see PARA 1 note 5. As to the meaning of 'member' see PARA 321; and as to the meaning of 'officer' generally see PARA 607. As to companies, corporations and partnerships etc see PARAS 2-4.

6 Companies Act 2006 s 1121(2)(a). As to the company secretary and other officers see PARA 601. As s 1121 applies in relation to a body corporate other than a company, the reference to a manager or secretary of the company must be read as referring to any manager, secretary or similar officer of the body: s 1123(2)(b). As it applies in relation to a partnership, the reference to a manager or secretary of the company must be read as referring to any manager, secretary or similar officer of the partnership (s 1123(3)(b)); and, as it applies in relation to an unincorporated body other than a partnership, the reference to a manager or secretary of the company must be read as referring to any manager, secretary or similar officer of the body (s 1123(4)(b)).

316. Punishment for fraudulent trading.

If any business of a company¹ is carried on² with intent to defraud³ creditors of the company or creditors of any other person, or for any fraudulent purpose⁴, every person who is knowingly a party to the carrying on⁵ of the business in that manner commits an offence⁶ and is liable (on conviction on indictment) to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years or a fine (or to both)⁷ or (on summary conviction) to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 12 months⁸ or a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum⁹ (or to both)¹⁰. The allegation of intent to defraud contains an ingredient of dishonesty without which finding no jury would be entitled to convict¹¹. It must be dishonesty on the part of those who are carrying on the business of the company¹². Where a person carries on the business of two companies with the fraudulent intent of defrauding the companies' customers, he commits the offence of fraudulent trading¹³.

Where a business is carried on by a person who is outside the reach of this offence of fraudulent trading¹⁴, and with intent to defraud creditors of any person or for any other fraudulent purpose¹⁵, and if he is knowingly a party to the carrying on of such a business, that person is guilty of an offence¹⁶. A person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 12 months or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum (or to both)¹⁷ or (on conviction on indictment) to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years or to a fine (or to both)¹⁸. If such an offence¹⁹ is committed by a body corporate²⁰, and if the offence is proved to have been committed with the consent or connivance of a director, manager, secretary or other similar officer of the body corporate, or a person who was purporting to act in any such capacity, he (as well as the body corporate) is guilty of the offence and liable to be proceeded against and punished accordingly²¹.

1 As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

2 'Carrying on of the business' is not necessarily synonymous with actively carrying on trade: Re Sarflax Ltd [1979] Ch 592, [1979] 1 All ER 529. It is necessary to show an act which could be described as carrying on the business of the company: Re Augustus Barnett & Son Ltd [1986] BCLC 170 (letters of comfort provided by parent did not themselves constitute the carrying on of the subsidiary's business). One transaction may be sufficient: Re Gerald Cooper Chemicals Ltd [1978] Ch 262, [1978] 2 All ER 49. However, it does not follow that whenever a fraud on a creditor is perpetrated in the course of carrying on business that the business is being carried on with intent to defraud creditors: Morphitis v Bernasconi [2003] EWCA Civ 289, [2003] Ch 552, [2003] 2 WLR 1521. Where the only allegation is the bare fact of preferring one creditor over another, such preference will not per se be sufficient to constitute fraud: Re Sarflax Ltd. As to the meanings of 'business', 'carry on business' and 'trade' generally see PARA 1 note 1.

3 The persons who actually carry on the business must be guilty of fraud, and a holding company cannot be liable otherwise than as a knowing party to such conduct: Re Augustus Barnett & Son Ltd [1986] BCLC 170. See also note 11. As to the general offence of fraud see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 309 et seq.

4 'Defraud' and 'fraudulent purpose' connote actual dishonesty: Re Patrick & Lyon Ltd [1933] Ch 786. 'Intent to defraud creditors' may in general be properly inferred if the company continues to carry on business and incurs debts when to the knowledge of the persons liable there is no reasonable prospect of those debts being paid: Re William C Leitch Bros Ltd [1932] 2 Ch 71. One transaction may constitute fraudulent trading: Re Gerald Cooper Chemicals Ltd [1978] Ch 262, [1978] 2 All ER 49. Where the only allegation is the bare fact of preferring one creditor to another, such preference per se cannot constitute fraud within the meaning of the Insolvency Act 1986 s 213 (as to which see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 911): Re Sarflax Ltd [1979] Ch 592, [1979] 1 All ER 529. It is not necessary to prove knowledge that there was no reasonable prospect of the debts ever being paid; proof of knowledge that there was no reason for thinking that funds would become available to pay the debt when it became due or shortly thereafter may be sufficient: R v Grantham [1984] QB 675, [1984] 3 All ER 166, CA. See also R v Cox, R v Hodges [1983] BCLC 169, CA; R v Lockwood [1986] Crim LR 244, CA. An intent to defraud customers as potential creditors is sufficient even where those customers, through want of assets, have not obtained judgment or pursued other civil remedies against the company: R v Kemp [1988] QB 645, [1988] 2 WLR 975, CA. The word 'creditor' in its ordinary meaning denotes one to whom money is owed; and whether that debt can presently be sued for is immaterial: R v Smith [1996] 2 BCLC 109, CA. In order to fall within the Insolvency Act 1986 s 213 the behaviour of the respondent must be deserving of real moral blame: Re L Todd (Swanscombe) Ltd [1990] BCLC 454, [1990] BCC 125. A receiver carrying on the business of a company is exposed to a claim for fraudulent trading if he allows debts or liabilities to be incurred by a company under continuing contracts during the receivership for which he has no personal liability and in respect of which he knows that there is no good reason for thinking that they can or will be paid: Powdrill v Watson, Re Leyland DAF Ltd, Re Ferranti International plc [1995] 2 AC 394, [1995] 2 All ER 65, HL (receivers not liable where, in pursuance of their duties to the debenture holder, they postponed the sale of properties on which unoccupied business rates continued to accrue); cf Brown v City of London Corp'n [1996] 1 WLR 1070, sub nom Re Sobam BV (in receivership) [1996] 1 BCLC 446.

5 A person who, although not a director, manages the business in consultation with a director is within this description: Re Peake and Hall [1985] PCC 87, Isle of Man HC. A creditor who knowingly receives money procured by carrying on a business with intent to defraud may be liable (see Re Gerald Cooper Chemicals Ltd [1978] Ch 262, [1978] 2 All ER 49); but not a secretary who merely performs the duties appropriate to that office (Re Maidstone Buildings Provisions Ltd [1971] 3 All ER 363, [1971] 1 WLR 1085). Similarly, a financial adviser who fails to give advice is not liable by reason of that fact alone (Re Maidstone Buildings Provisions Ltd); nor is a director who did not concern himself with the company's financial affairs (Re Peake and Hall). A company which was involved in and assisted and benefited from an offending business or a business carried on in an offending way and did so knowingly and therefore dishonestly may fall within this provision: Re Bank of Credit and Commerce International SA (No 2), Banque Arabe et Internationale D'Investissement SA v Morris [2001] 1 BCLC 263. Where there is an issue as to whether the accused falls within what is now the Companies Act 2006 s 993, that issue must be put to the jury with clear guidance as to the meaning of 'a party to the carrying on of the business of the company': R v Miles [1992] Crim LR 657, CA.

132 (1) a company, as defined in the Companies Act 2006 s 1(1) (see PARA 24) (Fraud Act 2006 s 9(3)(a) (amended by SI 2009/1941));

133 (2) a person to whom the Companies Act 2006 s 993 applies (with or without adaptations or modifications) as if the person were a company (Fraud Act 2006 s 9(3)(b));

134 (3) a person exempted from the application of the Companies Act 2006 s 993 (Fraud Act 2006 s 9(3)(c)).

15 Fraud Act 2006 s 9(2) (as amended: see note 14). For these purposes, 'fraudulent purpose' has the same meaning as in the Companies Act 2006 s 993 (which depends upon common law for that meaning: see note 4): Fraud Act 2006 s 9(5) (amended by SI 2007/2194).

(viii) Ownership and Disposition of Property

317. Company's power to hold land.

Any company incorporated under the Companies Act 2006¹ or the former Companies Acts², or registered, though not formed, under that Act or the former Companies Acts³, has always had power to hold land in the United Kingdom⁴.

The fact that a company holds land does not make its shares an interest in land within the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989⁵, or, where it is established for charitable purposes, render it necessary to obtain any consent of the Charity Commission⁶ to the sale of its land which would not be required if it was not incorporated⁷.

The power of holding land imposes no restriction on the mode in which the company may acquire land, which may therefore be taken on lease⁸. The company may let the land acquired unless the company's objects expressly or impliedly restrict the letting of its property⁹.

1 As to incorporation under the Companies Act 2006 see PARA 102 et seq. As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

2 As to the meaning of the 'former Companies Acts' see PARA 18 note 1.

3 As to predecessor legislation to the Companies Act 2006 and the continuity maintained in the law see PARA 16 et seq.

4 As to the power to hold personal property see PARA 318. As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 1 note 5. Formerly, a company formed for the purpose of promoting art, science, religion, charity or any other like object, not involving the acquisition of gain by the company or by its individual members, could not without the licence of the Board of Trade hold more than two acres of land, although the Board might license any such company to hold land in such quantity and subject to such conditions as the Board thought fit: see the Companies Act 1948 s 14(1) proviso (repealed).

5 I.e. within the Law of Property (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1989 s 2 (see SALE OF LAND vol 42 (Reissue) PARA 31). 8 If the company takes premises which are the best for its purposes, it is no objection to the validity of the lease that the premises are too large and that part will have to be sublet: Re London and Colonial Co, Horsey's Claim (1868) LR 5 Eq 561 (judgment of Wood V-C cited at 562n(1)). 318. Personality.

An incorporated company¹ may hold personal property to any extent without licence from any government department². Its powers in this respect may, however, be limited by its constitution³.

Regardless of whether such limitations exist or not, a company cannot (save in the manner provided by the Companies Act 2006⁴) purchase its own shares⁵, although it may buy up its debentures⁶ for the purpose of redeeming or reissuing them⁷, or redeem redeemable shares⁸.

Where a person transfers property to a company for the purpose of defeating his creditors, its title to the property may in certain cases be displaced in favour of his trustee in bankruptcy⁹.

A bill of sale to a company must state its address and description¹⁰.

319. Joint ownership.

Being a body corporate¹, a company² is capable of acquiring and holding any real or personal property in joint tenancy³ in the same manner as if it were an individual⁴. Where it and an individual, or two or more bodies corporate, become entitled to any such property under circumstances or by virtue of any instrument which would, if the company had been an individual, have created a joint tenancy, they are entitled to the property as joint tenants⁵. Such acquisition and holding of property in joint tenancy are, however, subject to the like conditions and restrictions which attach to the acquisition and holding of property by a body corporate in severalty⁶.

320. Company's power to sell property.

Unless specifically restricted to do so by its constitution¹, a company may have, for example, extensive powers to sell its personal property², or to sell its business for shares in another company³.

Even if its constitution purports to give it power to do so, a company which is proposed to be wound up cannot sell all its assets and undertaking and provide for the distribution of the proceeds in the winding up otherwise than in accordance with the statutory provisions⁴.

An agreement for sale is not necessarily bad on the ground that one of its terms is the payment of a bonus to the directors of the selling company, unless the bonus is in fact a bribe to them⁵; but it is not lawful to make any such payment to a director unless a memorandum setting out particulars of the proposed payment (including its amount) is made available to the members of the company, whose approval is sought, and a resolution approving the payment has been duly passed⁶.

(8) COMPANY MEMBERSHIP

(i) In general

321. Who are members.

The subscribers of a company's memorandum of association¹ are deemed to have agreed to become members of the company and, on its registration², become members and must be entered as such in its register of members³. However, neither this entry in the register nor any allotment⁴ of shares⁵ is a condition precedent to their becoming members⁶.

Every other person who agrees to become a member of a company⁷, and whose name is entered in its register of members, is a 'member of the company'⁸.

As from the date of incorporation⁹, the subscribers of the memorandum of association, together with such other persons as may from time to time become members of the company, are a body corporate¹⁰ by the name stated in the certificate of incorporation¹¹. Accordingly, the members of a company are those persons (including corporations¹², if any) who collectively constitute the company, or, in other words, are its incorporators. A member is not necessarily a shareholder¹³, because an unlimited company¹⁴ or a company limited by guarantee may exist without a share capital¹⁵. However, where a company has a capital limited by shares, the shareholders are the only members¹⁶.

The bearer of a share warrant¹⁷ may, if the articles of the company so provide, be deemed a member of the company within the meaning of the Companies Act 2006, either to the full extent or for any purposes defined in the articles¹⁸.

8 Companies Act 2006 s 112(2).

Under the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, reg 2, Schedule Table C (which applies modified Table A articles of association to companies limited by guarantee and not having a share capital), it is specified that the subscribers to the memorandum of association of the company and such other persons as are admitted to membership in accordance with the articles are members of the company: see Schedule Table C art 3. However, no person may be admitted a member of the company unless he is approved by the directors; and every person who wishes to become a member must deliver to the company an application for membership in such form as the directors require executed by him: Schedule Table C art 3. Such a member may at any time withdraw from the company by giving at least seven clear days' notice to the company but membership is not transferable and it ceases on death: Schedule Table C art 4. As to the meaning of 'company limited by guarantee' see PARA 102. As to the meanings of 'company having a share capital' and 'share capital' see PARA 1042. As to the meaning of references to a company's 'articles' see PARA 228 note 2. As to a company's articles of association generally see PARA 228 et seq. Similar provision is made by the model articles which have been made for the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 and intended for adoption by private companies limited by guarantee (see the Companies (Model Articles) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3229, reg 3, Sch 2; and PARA 228 et seq). Under those model articles, no person may become a member of the company unless that person has completed an application for membership in a form approved by the directors, and the directors have approved the application: see Sch 2 Pt 3 art 21. A member may withdraw from membership of the company by giving seven days' notice to the company in writing: Sch 2 Pt 3 art 22(1). However, membership is not transferable (Sch 2 Pt 3 art 22(2)); and a person's membership terminates when that person dies or ceases to exist (Sch 2 Pt 3 art 22(3)). 322. Subscribers' liability for shares.

By subscribing, each subscriber at once irrevocably agrees to take from the company the subscribed number of shares¹, being at least one share each, unless all its share capital has been duly allotted to other persons². The fact that no shares are allotted to him and that he has ceased to be treated as a member for a considerable time does not relieve him from liability³, though a valid surrender will do so⁴. A subscriber who is a director is bound to see that the allotment is made⁵.

The subscriber's obligation to take shares is not satisfied by a transfer to him, or by an allotment to him of shares, credited as fully paid up, to which a third person is entitled⁶. The obligation of a person who subscribes in his own name, but in fact as an agent, is satisfied by his principal taking the number of shares subscribed for⁷.

Shares taken by a subscriber of the memorandum of association⁸ of a public company⁹ in pursuance of an undertaking of his in the memorandum, and any premium on the shares, must be paid up in cash¹⁰; and if the company contravenes this provision, it, and any officer of it, who is in default¹¹ is liable on conviction on indictment to a fine, or on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum¹². Otherwise, the shares so subscribed for may be paid for either in cash or in money's worth¹³. The shares paid for in money's worth must, however, be identified with the shares subscribed for¹⁴.

A subscriber for preference shares¹⁵ may take the like amount of ordinary shares instead¹⁶. If a person subscribes for shares, some of which are to be allotted as fully paid up, he is liable only as contributory in respect of the others; but, if he subscribes for fully paid up shares only, he is liable for them as unpaid¹⁷, except in so far as he has actually paid for them.

323. Shareholders not debarred from damages.

Formerly a shareholder could not both retain his shares¹ and bring proceedings against a company for deceit inducing him to buy from the company its shares or, by analogy, to take up shares of the company². A person is, however, no longer debarred from obtaining damages or other compensation from a company³ by reason only of his holding or having held shares in the company or any right to apply or subscribe for shares or to be included in the company's register of members⁴ in respect of shares⁵.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(8) COMPANY MEMBERSHIP/(i) In general/324. Service of notice on members of company.

324. Service of notice on members of company.

Provisions in a company's articles of association¹ as to service of notices on members² generally apply only to notices relating to the ordinary business of the company, and service in the manner set out by them is not in itself sufficient to fix a shareholder with knowledge of the falsity of a misrepresentation which would entitle him to repudiate his shares³. Similarly, such a provision that service of a notice at the registered address was to be good did not necessarily apply to give validity to substituted service of a debtor's summons at the address on the company register⁴.

When a member has died⁵, a notice addressed to him at his registered address is good, if the company has no notice of his death⁶; but not if the directors⁷ are aware of the death⁸, in which case, unless the articles themselves otherwise provide⁹, a notice required by the articles to be served on members need not be sent at all, even to the personal representatives, unless they have been registered as members¹⁰.

A notice sent to all the members on the register at the date of sending out is good, even though the register is subsequently rectified with effect retrospective to a day prior to that date¹¹.

1 As to articles of association generally see PARA 228 et seq.

2 The default articles prescribed for the purposes of the Companies Act 1985 ('legacy articles'), ie the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, have not been revoked and may, in their amended form, continue to be used by companies after the commencement of the Companies Act 2006: see PARA 230. They make extensive provision as to the service of notices on members: see the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, reg 2, Schedule, Table A arts 111-116 (art 111 substituted by, arts 112, 115 amended by, SI 2000/3373). The Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, Schedule, Table A arts 112, 113 are modified by Table C arts 12, 13, and arts 114, 116 are disapplied by Table C art 1, in relation to companies limited by guarantee and not having a share capital). Table A arts 112 and 115 do not require that service of a notice on a member by the company by post had to be to his registered address; rather, a notice was 'properly addressed' if it was accurately addressed: Hunter v Senate Support Services Ltd [2004] EWHC 1085 (Ch), [2005] 1 BCLC 175, applying Rayfield v Hands [1958] 2 All ER 194 at 196 per Vaisey J. See also Bradman v Trinity Estates plc [1989] BCLC 757 (notices not timeously served because of postal strike; injunction granted restraining the holding of the meeting until a later date). As to notices which must be served on members to convene a meeting of the company see PARA 634 et seq.

Model articles have been prescribed under the Companies Act 2006 for use by public companies (see the Companies (Model Articles) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3229, reg 4, Sch 3) and these make general provision as to notice. Accordingly, if the company sends two consecutive documents to a member over a period of at least 12 months, and if each of those documents is returned undelivered, or the company receives notification that it has not been delivered, that member ceases to be entitled to receive notices from the company: Sch 3 art 80(1). A member who has ceased to be entitled to receive notices from the company becomes entitled to receive such notices again by sending the company either a new address to be recorded in the register of members or (if the member has agreed that the company should use a means of communication other than sending things to such an address) the information that the company needs to use that means of communication effectively: Sch 3 art 80(2). (ii) Agreement to become a Member 325. Requirement for an agreement.

Except in the case of the subscribers to a company's memorandum of association¹, the Companies Act 2006 requires an agreement to become a member² and entry in the register of members³ in order to constitute membership⁴. No particular form of agreement is required⁵ and it may be express or implied, written or oral⁶.

By agreement it is meant that a person assents to become a member and it does not require that there should be a binding contract between the person and the company⁷. Accordingly, where the name of a person is entered on the register of members with his consent, he is a member of the company, subject to the power vested in the court to rectify the register in cases of error⁸.

2 As to who qualifies as a member of a company see PARA 321. Any contract, so far as it relates to the constitution of a company or the rights or obligations of its corporators or members, is exempt from the prohibitions on exclusion of liability imposed by the Unfair Contract Terms Act 1977: see s 1(2), Sch 1 para 1(d); and PARA 245. 326. Express contract.

While there is no requirement that there should be a binding contract between a person and the company in order for a person to agree to become a member¹, in most instances there will be a contractual relationship² governed by the ordinary law of contract.

To constitute an express agreement to take shares, there must be an absolute and unqualified acceptance of a proposal to take or allot them and a communication of the acceptance to the proposer; but, in the case of a qualified acceptance, there is a contract if the qualification is agreed to, or if the applicant pays for the shares within the specified time³. Where an application for shares is subject to a condition precedent, the condition must be performed to create a liability to take them⁴. Where, however, the application is subject to a condition subsequent, the liability arises although the condition is never complied with⁵. An application for shares, being a mere offer, may be withdrawn before it is accepted⁶.

2 It may be a contract between the shareholder and the company or one between the shareholder and the transferor of shares to him. 327. Implied contract.

An agreement to take shares may be implied from conduct¹. Although a person's name is entered in the register as the holder of shares allotted to him, no agreement will be implied, by reason only of his receiving notice of the allotment, if he forthwith repudiates them², or if he has not acted as the holder of the shares or otherwise accepted them³. In such a case, even when a winding up has supervened, he may have his name removed from the register in respect of the shares⁴.

Where a company's articles of association⁵ require a director to have a share qualification⁶, the fact of a person becoming a director does not in itself constitute an agreement to take the required qualification shares from the company⁷. The company's constitution⁸ may, however, constitute a contract to take shares, as where they require every original holder of a founders' share to apply for and take a specified number of ordinary shares⁹. A statement in a prospectus that the directors will take all the ordinary shares not taken by the vendors does not constitute a contract which can be enforced against them to take such shares¹⁰.

A person may be estopped by his conduct from denying that he agreed to accept shares, as, for example, where, being the registered holder of shares forming part of an irregular or invalid issue of capital, he deals with them as his own, by paying calls or receiving dividends, or by attempting to transfer them¹¹, or where he has held himself out as having in fact subscribed¹².

328. Agent's contract.

A person who agrees, on behalf of another, to take shares, without disclosing the agency, is personally liable to take them¹. Where he purports to agree to take shares on behalf of another, but is without authority², he is liable, unless the other person ratifies the act³, to pay damages for breach of warranty of authority, the measure of damages being the amount which the company has lost by losing the contract to take shares⁴.

A person purporting to contract to take shares on behalf of a fictitious or non-existent person is himself bound to take them⁵.

If an application is made for shares on behalf of a person who is ignorant of the matter, and he is registered as the holder, and the directors know that the person applying does not intend to take the shares himself, neither the person registered nor the applicant is liable as a shareholder; but the applicant is liable to those who are deceived for breach of an implied warranty of authority⁶.

329. Contract by company to take shares.

A contract by a company to take shares in another company is binding¹ even if the former company lacks the capacity to purchase such shares².

1 It is provided that it is not a subsidiary of the latter, unless one of the statutory exceptions applies: see the Companies Act 2006 s 136; and PARA 334. As to the meaning of 'subsidiary' see PARA 25.

2 This is the effect of the Companies Act 2006 s 39: see PARA 265. As to a company's capacity and the effect of s 39 generally see PARA 265 et seq.

330. Effect of minor's agreement to take or transfer shares.

A minor¹ may repudiate his membership and his holding in the company, either during his minority or upon attaining full age, because his agreement to take shares is voidable²; but he cannot recover money paid by him for shares unless there has been a total failure of consideration³. If, however, he does not repudiate⁴ within a reasonable time after attaining full age, he will thenceforth be subject to all the liabilities of membership⁵.

Where shares are transferred into the name of a minor, the transferor remains liable for calls in respect of the shares⁶, whether at the time of the transfer he was aware that the transferee was a minor or not⁷; but, if he was ignorant of that fact, he may claim to have his liability transferred to the person who effected the transaction⁸. If, however, a company or the liquidator of a company, knowing the transferee to be a minor, is guilty of laches in making a claim against the transferor, the transferor is relieved from his liability⁹. He is also relieved by a subsequent transfer by the minor to an adult¹⁰.

332. Enforcement of contract for shares.

Specific performance of an agreement to take and pay for shares¹ or to allot shares² may be obtained³.

In addition to obtaining a decree for the specific performance of a contract to allot shares, the disappointed allottee may obtain damages equal to the dividends at the rates declared by the company between the date when the shares should have been allotted and the date of actual allotment, together with interest on the dividends until payment⁴.

When a contract to take shares is disclaimed by a trustee in bankruptcy, the contract is at an end and the company's remedy is a claim for damages against the bankrupt's estate⁵.

An agreement with a company to take shares proposed to be issued at a discount cannot be enforced and an allottee of shares pursuant to such an agreement may have the register rectified in order to remove his name. He may, however, lose his remedy if he has assented to the registration or has not sought the remedy promptly⁶.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(8) COMPANY MEMBERSHIP/(iii) Prohibition on Subsidiary being Member of its Holding Company/333. General rule against company acquiring own shares.

(iii) Prohibition on Subsidiary being Member of its Holding Company

333. General rule against company acquiring own shares.

The general rule is that a limited company¹ must not acquire its own shares², whether by purchase, subscription, or otherwise³. If a company purports to act in contravention of this prohibition, an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer of the company who is in default⁴; and a person guilty of such an offence is liable (on conviction on indictment) to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or a fine (or both)⁵ and (on summary conviction) to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 12 months⁶ or a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum⁷ (or both)⁸. Also in the event of such a contravention, the purported acquisition is void⁹.

The general prohibition on a limited company acquiring its own shares¹⁰ does not prohibit¹¹:

- 603 (1) acquisition in accordance with the statutory scheme¹² for the purchase by a company of its own shares¹³;
- 604 (2) the acquisition of shares in a reduction of share capital duly made¹⁴;
- 605 (3) the purchase of shares in pursuance of an order of the court¹⁵ under the powers conferred in relation to: (a) proceedings objecting to a resolution proposing that the company be re-registered as a private company¹⁶; (b) an objection to the redemption or purchase of shares out of capital¹⁷; (c) a breach of the prohibition on public offers being made by a private company¹⁸; or (d) the protection of company members against unfair prejudice¹⁹; or
- 606 (4) the forfeiture of shares, or the acceptance of shares surrendered in lieu, in pursuance of the company's articles²⁰, for failure to pay any sum payable in respect of the shares²¹.

As a general rule, shares so acquired are cancelled, save with respect to treasury shares, which may be held by a company²²; and, where shares are held by the company in this way, the company must be entered in its register of members as the member holding the shares²³.

A limited company may acquire any of its own fully paid²⁴ shares otherwise than for valuable consideration²⁵.

334. Membership of holding company.

A body corporate¹ cannot² be a member of a company³ that is its holding company⁴; and any allotment⁵ or transfer of shares⁶ in a company to its subsidiary is⁷ void⁸. The prohibition does not, however, apply:

607 (1) where the subsidiary is concerned only as personal representative⁹ or as trustee unless, in the latter case, the holding company or a subsidiary of it is beneficially interested under the trust¹⁰;

608 (2) where the shares in the holding company are held by the subsidiary in the ordinary course of its business as an intermediary¹¹.

Where a body corporate became a holder of shares in a company before 1 July 1948¹² or on or after that date and before 1 October 2009¹³ in circumstances in which the prohibition on membership as it then had effect¹⁴ did not apply, or at any time on or after 1 October 2009¹⁵ in circumstances in which the prohibition on membership did not apply, it may continue to be a member of that company¹⁶. So long as a body corporate is permitted in this way¹⁷ to continue as a member of a company, an allotment to it of fully paid¹⁸ shares in the company may be validly made by way of capitalisation of reserves of the company¹⁹; but, for so long as the prohibition on membership would otherwise apply²⁰, it has no right to vote in respect of any shares so allotted²¹, or in respect of any shares it acquired before the prohibition came to apply²², either on a written resolution²³ or at meetings of the company²⁴ or of any class of its members²⁵.

1 As to the meaning of 'body corporate' see PARA 1 note 5.

2 Ie except as provided by the Companies Act 2006 Pt 8 Ch 4 (ss 136-144): see s 136(1). The exceptions are provided for in s 138 (subsidiary acting as personal representative or trustee) (see head (1) in the text), and in s 141 (subsidiary acting as authorised dealer in securities) (see head (2) in the text): s 136(2). The provisions of Pt 8 Ch 4 apply to a nominee acting on behalf of a subsidiary as to the subsidiary itself: s 144. As to the meaning of 'subsidiary' see PARA 25. As to shares held by a company's nominee generally see PARA 1199.

4 Companies Act 2006 s 136(1)(a). As to the meaning of 'holding company' see PARA 25. See also note 10.

5 As to the meaning of 'allotted' see PARA 1091.

6 For these purposes, in relation to a company other than a company limited by shares, the references to shares in the Companies Act 2006 Pt 8 Ch 4 are to be read as references to the interest of its members as such, whatever the form of that interest: s 143. As to the meaning of 'company limited by shares' see PARA 102. As to the meaning of 'share' see PARA 1042.

8 Companies Act 2006 s 136(1)(b).

9 As to the meaning of 'personal representative' see EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS vol 17(2) (Reissue) PARA 4.

10 Companies Act 2006 s 138(1). For the purpose of ascertaining whether the holding company or a subsidiary is so interested, the following must be disregarded:

- 135 (1) any interest held only by way of security for the purposes of a transaction entered into by the holding company or subsidiary in the ordinary course of a business that includes the lending of money (s 138(2)(a));
- 136 (2) any interest within s 139 (residual interest under pension scheme or employees' share scheme to be disregarded), or within s 140 (employer's rights of recovery under pension scheme or employees' share scheme to be disregarded) (s 138(2)(b));
- 137 (3) any rights that the company or subsidiary has in its capacity as trustee, including in particular, any right to recover its expenses or be remunerated out of the trust property, and any right to be indemnified out of the trust property for any liability incurred by reason of any act or omission in the performance of its duties as trustee (s 138(2)(c)).

Further to head (2) above, where shares in a company are held on trust for the purposes of a pension scheme or employees' share scheme, there must be disregarded for the purposes of s 138 any residual interest that has not vested in possession: s 139(1). For these purposes, a 'residual interest' means a right of the company or subsidiary (the 'residual beneficiary') to receive any of the trust property in the event of: (a) all the liabilities arising under the scheme having been satisfied or provided for (s 139(2)(a)); or (b) the residual beneficiary ceasing to participate in the scheme (s 139(2)(b)); or (c) the trust property at any time exceeding what is necessary for satisfying the liabilities arising or expected to arise under the scheme (s 139(2)(c)). For the purposes of s 139(2), the reference to a right includes a right dependent on the exercise of a discretion vested by the scheme in the trustee or another person, and the reference to liabilities arising under a scheme includes liabilities that have resulted, or may result, from the exercise of any such discretion: s 139(3). A residual interest vests in possession, in a case within head (a) above, on the occurrence of the event mentioned there (whether or not the amount of the property receivable pursuant to the right is ascertained) or, in a case within head (b) or head (c) above, when the residual beneficiary becomes entitled to require the trustee to transfer to him any of the property receivable pursuant to the right: s 139(4). 'Pension scheme' means a scheme for the provision of benefits consisting of or including relevant benefits for or in respect of employees or former employees (s 139(5)), where 'relevant benefits' means any pension, lump sum, gratuity or other like benefit given or to be given on retirement or on death or in anticipation of retirement or, in connection with past service, after retirement or death, and 'employee' must be read as if a director of a company were employed by it (s 139(6)). Where shares in a company are held on trust for the purposes of a pension scheme or employees' share scheme, there must be disregarded for the purposes of s 138 any charge or lien on, or set-off against, any benefit or other right or interest under the scheme for the purpose of enabling the employer or former employer of a member of the scheme to obtain the discharge of a monetary obligation due to him from the member: s 140(1). In the case of a trust for the purposes of a pension scheme, there must also be disregarded any right to receive from the trustee of the scheme, or as trustee of the scheme to retain, an amount that can be recovered or retained, under the Pension Schemes Act 1993 s 61 (deduction of contributions equivalent premium from refund of scheme contributions) (see SOCIAL SECURITY AND PENSIONS vol 44(2) (Reissue) PARA 924) or otherwise, as reimbursement or partial reimbursement for any contributions equivalent premium paid in connection with the scheme under Pt 3 (ss 7-68) (see SOCIAL SECURITY AND PENSIONS vol 44(2) (Reissue) PARA 878 et seq): Companies Act 2006 s 140(2). For these purposes, 'pension scheme' means a scheme for the provision of benefits consisting of or including relevant benefits for or in respect of employees or former employees, where 'relevant benefits' means any pension, lump sum, gratuity or other like benefit given or to be given on retirement or on death or in anticipation of retirement or, in connection with past service, after retirement or death (s 140(3)); and 'employer' and 'employee' must be read as if a director of a company were employed by it (s 140(4)). As to the meaning of 'director' see PARA 478. As to the meaning of 'employees' share scheme' see PARA 169 note 20.

¹¹ Companies Act 2006 s 141(1). For this purpose, a person is an intermediary if he:

- 138 (1) carries on a bona fide business of dealing in securities (s 141(2)(a));
- 139 (2) is a member of or has access to a regulated market (s 141(2)(b)); and
- 140 (3) does not carry on an excluded business (s 141(2)(c)).

For these purposes, 'securities' includes options, futures and contracts for differences; and rights or interests in those investments: s 141(4)(d). As to the meanings of 'business' and 'carry on business' generally see PARA 1 note 1. In the Companies Acts, 'regulated market' means a multilateral system operated and/or managed by a market operator, which brings together or facilitates the bringing together of multiple third-party buying and selling interests in financial instruments, in the system and in accordance with its non-discretionary rules, in a way that results in a contract, in respect of the financial instruments admitted to trading under its rules and/or systems, and which is authorised and functions regularly and in accordance with the provisions of European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2004/39 (OJ L145, 30.4.2004, p 1) Title III (arts 36-47) (see further FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 88 et seq): art 4.1(14); definition applied by the Companies Act 2006 s 1173(1). Further to head (3) above, the excluded businesses are:

- 141 (a) any business that consists wholly or mainly in the making or managing of investments (s 141(3)(a));
- 142 (b) any business that consists wholly or mainly in, or is carried on wholly or mainly for the purpose of, providing services to persons who are connected with the person carrying on the business (s 141(3)(b));
- 143 (c) any business that consists in insurance business (s 141(3)(c));
- 144 (d) a business that consists in managing or acting as trustee in relation to a pension scheme or which is carried on by the manager or trustee of such a scheme in connection with or for the purposes of the scheme (s 141(3)(d));
- 145 (e) a business that consists in operating or acting as trustee in relation to a collective investment scheme or is carried on by the operator or trustee of such a scheme in connection with or for the purposes of the scheme (s 141(3)(e)).

For these purposes, the question whether a person is connected with another is to be determined in accordance with the provisions of the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1988 s 839 (see INCOME TAXATION vol 23(2) (Reissue) PARA 1258): Companies Act 2006 s 141(4)(a). 'Collective investment scheme' has the meaning given in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 236 (ie an open-ended investment company) (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 49 (2008) PARA 603): Companies Act 2006 s 141(4)(b). 'Insurance business' means business which consists of the effecting or carrying out of contracts of insurance: s 141(4)(c). 'Trustee' and 'operator', in relation to a collective investment scheme, must be construed in accordance with the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 237(2) (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 49 (2008) PARA 606): Companies Act 2006 s 141(4)(e). Expressions used in s 141 that are also used in the provisions regulating activities under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 have the same meaning here as they do in those provisions (see s 22, orders made under s 22, s 22(2), Sch 2; and FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 48 (2008) PARA 80 et seq): Companies Act 2006 s 141(5). Where:

- 146 (i) a subsidiary that is a dealer in securities has purportedly acquired shares in its holding company in contravention of the prohibition in s 136 (see the text and notes 1-8) (s 142(1)(a)); and
- 147 (ii) a person acting in good faith has agreed, for value and without notice of that contravention, to acquire shares in the holding company, either from the subsidiary or from someone who has purportedly acquired the shares after their disposal by the subsidiary (s 142(1)(b)), any transfer to that person of the shares mentioned in head (i) above has the same effect as it would have had if their original acquisition by the subsidiary had not been in contravention of the prohibition (s 142(2)).

(iv) Register of Members

A. CONTENTS

335. Requirement for register of members.

Every company¹ must keep a register of its members²; and there must be entered in the register the following particulars³:

- 609 (1) the names and addresses of members⁴;
- 610 (2) the date on which each person was registered as a member⁵; and
- 611 (3) the date at which any person ceased to be a member⁶.

In the case of a company having a share capital⁷:

- 612 (a) there must be entered in the register, with the names and addresses of the members, a statement of the shares held by each member, distinguishing each share by its number (so long as the share has a number)⁸, and, where the company has more than one class of issued shares⁹, by its class¹⁰, and a statement of the amount paid or agreed to be considered as paid on the shares of each member¹¹;
- 613 (b) where the company has converted any of its shares into stock¹² and given notice of the conversion to the registrar of companies¹³, the register must show the amount and class of stock held by each member, instead of the amount of shares and the particulars relating to shares specified in head (a) above¹⁴.

The subscribers of the company's memorandum of association¹⁵, as well as other persons agreeing to become members¹⁶, must be entered in the register¹⁷.

In the case of a company which does not have a share capital, but has more than one class of members, there must be entered in the register, with the names and addresses of the members, a statement of the class to which each member belongs¹⁸.

If a company makes default in complying with these requirements¹⁹, an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer of the company who is in default²⁰; and a person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale²¹ and (for continued contravention) to a daily default fine²² not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale²³.

An entry relating to a former member of the company may be removed from the register after the expiration of ten years from the date on which he ceased to be a member²⁴.

Liability incurred by a company from the making or deletion of an entry in its register of members²⁵, or from a failure to make or delete any such entry²⁶, is not enforceable more than ten years after the date on which the entry was made or deleted or, as the case may be, the failure first occurred²⁷.

The company must not enter in the register a statement that it has a lien on the shares of a member²⁸, and cannot insist on putting on the register anything except what is required by statute to be inserted in it²⁹.

Where the name of a firm is entered in the register as the holder of shares, the members of the firm are jointly liable for the shares³⁰. A firm which has no separate legal persona is not entitled to be registered in the name of the firm, but only in the names of its partners³¹.

1 As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

2 Companies Act 2006 s 113(1). As to the meaning of 'member' see PARA 321. An overseas branch register is regarded as part of the company's register of members: see s 131; and PARA 359. As to the meaning of 'overseas company' see PARA 1824. The register of members falls within the definition of 'company records' that is used for the purposes of the Companies Act 2006: see PARA 674. As to the form of company records, their inspection and the duty to take precautions against their falsification see PARAS 674- 676. Prior to the Companies Act 1948, it had been held that rough memoranda on sheets of paper intended as materials from which a register might be prepared are not a register (Re Printing, Telegraph and Construction Co of Agence Havas, ex p Cammell [1894] 2 Ch 392, CA), and this is presumably still good law in spite of the relaxations as to the form of company records now provided for under the Companies Act 2006.

References in any enactment or instrument to a company's register of members, unless the context otherwise requires, is to be construed in relation to a company which is a participating issuer as referring to the company's issuer register of members and operator register of members: see the Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, reg 20(4); and PARA 340. As to the meaning of 'participating issuer' see PARA 421 note 9. 4 Companies Act 2006 s 113(2)(a). Any obligation under the Companies Acts to give a person's address is, unless otherwise expressly provided, to give a service address for that person: Companies Act 2006 s 1142. As to service of documents on a company generally see PARA 671.

In the case of joint holders of shares or stock in a company, the company's register of members must state the names of each joint holder: s 113(5). Where two or more persons hold a share or shares jointly, they may insist on having their names registered in such order as they choose, or to have their holding split into several joint holdings with their names in different orders: Re TH Saunders & Co Ltd [1908] 1 Ch 415; Burns v Siemens Bros Dynamo Works Ltd [1919] 1 Ch 225. In other respects, joint holders are regarded for the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 Pt 8 Ch 2 (ss 113-128) (see also PARA 336 et seq) as a single member (so that the register must show a single address): s 113(5). 336. Statement in register that private company has only one member.

If a limited company¹ is formed under the Companies Act 2006² with only one member³ there must be entered in the company's register of members⁴, with the name and address of the sole member, a statement that the company has only one member⁵.

If the number of members of a limited company falls to one, or if an unlimited company⁶ with only one member becomes a limited company on re-registration⁷, there must, upon the occurrence of that event, be entered in the company's register of members, with the name and address of the sole member⁸:

614 (1) a statement that the company has only one member⁹; and

615 (2) the date on which the company became a company having only one member¹⁰.

If the membership of a limited company increases from one to two or more members, there must, upon the occurrence of that event, be entered in the company's register of members, with the name and address of the person who was formerly the sole member, a statement that the company has ceased to have only one member¹¹ together with the date on which that event occurred¹².

If a company makes default in complying with these requirements¹³, an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer of the company who is in default¹⁴; and a person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale¹⁵ and (for continued contravention) to a daily default fine¹⁶ not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale¹⁷.

337. Entries and amendments to be made where there are share warrants.

On the issue of a share warrant¹, the company² must:

- 616 (1) enter in the register of members³: (a) the fact of the issue of the warrant⁴; (b) a statement of the shares⁵ included in the warrant, distinguishing each share by its number so long as it has a number⁶; and (c) the date of the issue of the warrant⁷; and
- 617 (2) amend the register, if necessary, so that no person is named on the register as the holder of the shares specified in the warrant⁸.

The bearer of a share warrant may, if the company's articles⁹ so provide, be deemed a member of the company within the meaning of the Companies Act 2006, either to the full extent or for any purposes defined in the articles¹⁰; and, subject to the company's articles, the bearer of a share warrant is entitled, on surrendering it for cancellation, to have his name entered as a member in the register of members¹¹. The company is responsible for any loss incurred by any person by reason of the company entering in the register the name of a bearer of a share warrant in respect of the shares specified in it without the warrant being surrendered and cancelled¹². Until the warrant is surrendered, the particulars specified in heads (1)(a) to (1)(c) above are deemed to be the particulars required by the Companies Act 2006 to be entered in the register of members¹³. On the surrender of a share warrant, the date of the surrender must be entered in the register¹⁴.

338. Registration requirements where company holds own shares as treasury shares.

Where a company¹ purchases its own shares² in circumstances where it is deemed to be holding them as treasury shares³:

618 (1) the requirements to make entries in the register of members⁴ need not be complied with if the company cancels all of the shares forthwith after the purchase⁵; and

619 (2) if the company does not cancel all of the shares forthwith after the purchase, any share that is so cancelled must be disregarded for the purposes of that requirement⁶.

Subject to these provisions⁷, where a company holds shares as treasury shares the company must be entered in the register as the member holding those shares⁸.

339. Index of names of members.

Every company¹ having more than 50 members² must keep an index of the names of the members of the company, unless the register of members³ is in such a form as to constitute in itself an index⁴. The company must, within 14 days after the date on which any alteration is made in the register of members, make any necessary alteration in the index⁵. The index must contain, in respect of each member, a sufficient indication to enable the account of that member in the register to be readily found⁶; and the index must be at all times kept available for inspection at the same place as the register of members⁷.

If default is made in complying with these requirements⁸, an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer of the company who is in default⁹; and a person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale¹⁰ and (for continued contravention) to a daily default fine¹¹ not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale¹².

12 Companies Act 2006 s 115(6). Although s 115 does not apply to a company which is a participating issuer (Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, reg 23(4), Sch 4 para 7(4) (reg 23(4), Sch 4 para 7(4) amended by SI 2009/1889)), the Companies Act 2006 s 115(5), (6) applies to a participating issuer which is a company which makes default in complying with the Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, Sch 4 para 7 (see PARA 341) and every officer of it who is in default as if such a default were a default in complying with the Companies Act 2006 s 115 (Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, Sch 4 para 7(5) (amended by SI 2009/1889)). An officer of a participating issuer is in default in complying with, or in contravention of the Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, Sch 4 para 7, if, and only if, he knowingly and wilfully authorised or permitted the default or contravention: Sch 4 para 20. As to the meaning of 'participating issuer' see PARA 421 note 9. As to the meaning of 'officer' (in relation to an operator or a participating issuer) see PARA 421 note 4.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(8) COMPANY MEMBERSHIP/(iv) Register of Members/A. CONTENTS/340. Entries to be made in registers regarding uncertificated securities.

340. Entries to be made in registers regarding uncertificated securities.

In respect of every company¹ which is a participating issuer², there must be a register maintained by the participating issuer (an 'issuer register of members')³; and a register maintained by the operator⁴ (an 'operator register of members')⁵. References in any enactment or instrument to a company's register of members, unless the context otherwise requires, is to be construed in relation to a company which is a participating issuer as referring to the company's issuer register of members and operator register of members⁶.

Every participating issuer⁷ which is a company must enter in its issuer register of members⁸:

- 620 (1) the names and addresses of the members⁹;
- 621 (2) the date on which each person was registered as a member¹⁰; and
- 622 (3) the date at which any person ceased to be a member¹¹.

With the names and addresses of the members there must be entered a statement of the certificated shares¹² held by each member¹³, distinguishing each share by its number (so long as the share has a number) and, where the company has more than one class of issued shares, by its class¹⁴, and a statement of the amount paid or agreed to be considered as paid on the certificated shares of each member¹⁵. Where the company has converted any of its shares into stock¹⁶ and given notice of the conversion to the registrar of companies¹⁷, the issuer register of members must show the amount and class of the certificated stock¹⁸ held by each member, instead of the amount of shares and the particulars relating to shares so specified¹⁹. Provision is made in respect of persons who make default in complying with these requirements²⁰.

An entry relating to a former member of the company may be removed from the issuer register of members after the expiration of ten years beginning with the day on which he ceased to be a member²¹.

In relation to every participating issuer which is a company, an operator of a relevant system must, in respect of any class of shares which is a participating security for the purposes of that system, enter on an operator register of members²²:

- 623 (a) the names and addresses of the members who hold uncertificated shares in the company²³;
- 624 (b) with those names and addresses, a statement of the uncertificated shares held by each member, distinguishing, where the company has more than one class of issued uncertificated shares, each share by its class²⁴; and
- 625 (c) where the company has converted any of its shares into stock and given notice of the conversion to the registrar of companies, the operator register of members must show the amount and class of uncertificated stock held by each member, instead of the amount of shares and the particulars relating to shares specified in head (b) above²⁵.

An entry relating to a member of a company who has ceased to hold any uncertificated shares in the company may be removed from the operator register of members after the expiration of ten years beginning with the day on which he ceased to hold any such shares²⁶. Members of a company who hold shares in uncertificated form may not be entered as holders of those shares on an overseas branch register²⁷.

The obligations of an operator to maintain and to keep and enter up any register of securities, imposed by the Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001²⁸:

- 626 (i) does not give rise to any form of duty or liability on the operator, except such as is expressly provided for in the Regulations or as arises from fraud or other wilful default, or negligence, on the part of the operator²⁹;
- 627 (ii) does not give rise to any form of duty or liability on a participating issuer, other than where the operator acts on the instructions of that participating issuer, in the absence of fraud or other wilful default, or negligence, on the part of that participating issuer³⁰; and
- 628 (iii) does not give rise to any form of duty or liability enforceable by civil proceedings for breach of statutory duty³¹.

Without prejudice to the above (or to any lesser period of limitation or to any rule as to the prescription of rights), any liability incurred by a participating issuer or by an operator arising either from the making or deletion of an entry in a register of securities or record of securities pursuant to the Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001³², or from a failure to make or delete any such entry, is not enforceable more than ten years after the date on which the entry was made or deleted or, in the case of a failure, the failure first occurred³³.

A participating issuer which is a company must maintain a record³⁴ of the entries made in its operator register of members (a 'record of uncertificated³⁵ shares')³⁶. Every participating issuer which is a company must enter in its record of uncertificated shares³⁷:

- 629 (A) the same particulars, so far as practicable, as are required³⁸ to be entered in the operator register of members³⁹; and
- 630 (B) a statement of the amount paid or agreed to be considered as paid on the uncertificated shares of each member⁴⁰.

Such a company must, unless it is impracticable to do so by virtue of circumstances beyond its control, ensure that the record of uncertificated shares is regularly reconciled with the operator register of members⁴¹. Provided that it has so complied, a company is not liable in respect of any act or thing done or omitted to be done by or on behalf of the company in reliance upon the assumption that the particulars entered in any record of uncertificated shares which the company is required to keep by the Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001 accord with the particulars entered in its operator register of members⁴².

Such sanctions as apply to a company and its officers in the event of a default in complying with keeping a register of members under the Companies Act 2006⁴³ apply to a company which is a participating issuer and its officers⁴⁴, or an operator and his officers⁴⁵ (as the case may be)⁴⁶.

1 For these purposes, 'company' means a company within the meaning of the Companies Act 2006 s 1(1); Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, reg 3(1) (amended by SI 2009/1889). As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

2 As to the meaning of 'participating issuer' see PARA 421 note 9.

3 Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, reg 20(1)(a). A participating issuer which is a company must keep and enter up the issuer register of members in accordance with reg 23(4), Sch 4 para 2 (see the text and notes 7-21); reg 20(2).

4 As to the meaning of 'operator' see PARA 421 note 1.

5 Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, reg 20(1)(b). In respect of every company which is a participating issuer, the operator must keep and enter up the operator register of members in accordance with Sch 4 para 4 (see the text and notes 22-27); reg 20(3). Every register which an operator is required to maintain by virtue of the Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755 (other than an operator register of eligible debt securities) which relates to securities issued by a company is deemed to be kept (in the case of a company registered in England and Wales), in England and Wales, or (in the case of a company registered in Scotland), in Scotland: Sch 4 para 16 (amended by SI 2009/1889). For these purposes, 'register of members' means either or both of an issuer register of members and an operator register of members: Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, reg 3(1). As to the meanings of 'England' and 'Wales' see PARA 1 note 5. As to the operator register of eligible debt securities see PARA 425.

6 Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, reg 20(4). This provision does not apply in relation to a company's issuer register of members to the extent that any of the particulars entered in that register in accordance with Sch 4 para 2(1) (see the text and notes 7-11) are inconsistent with the company's operator register of members: reg 20(5).

7 The Companies Act 2006 s 123 (see PARA 336) applies to a participating issuer which is a private company limited by shares as if references therein to the company's register of members were references to its issuer register of members: Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, Sch 4 para 3 (amended by SI 2009/1889). As to the meanings of 'company limited by shares' and 'private company' see PARA 102.

8 Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, Sch 4 para 2(1). For these purposes, references to an issuer register of members must not be taken to include an overseas branch register: Sch 4 para 2(7). As to the overseas branch register of members see PARA 358.

9 Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, Sch 4 para 2(1)(a).

10 Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, Sch 4 para 2(1)(b).

11 Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, Sch 4 para 2(1)(c). As to cessation of company membership see PARAS 379, 380.

12 For this purpose, 'certificated shares' means shares which are not uncertificated shares; and 'uncertificated shares' means shares title to which may be transferred by means of a relevant system: Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, Sch 4 para 1. As to the meaning of 'share' see PARA 421 note 2. Nothing in the Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755 requires a participating issuer or its officers to maintain a register which records how many units of a wholly dematerialised security are held in certificated form: reg 45(a). As to the meaning of 'wholly dematerialised security' see PARA 421 note 8. As to the meaning of 'officer' (in relation to an operator or a participating issuer) see PARA 421 note 4. As to the meaning of 'relevant system' see PARA 421 note 1.

- 13 As to who qualifies as a member of a company see PARA 321.
- 14 Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, Sch 4 para 2(2)(a). As to the numbering of shares see PARA 1050; and as to classes of shares see PARA 1057 et seq.
- 15 Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, Sch 4 para 2(2)(b).
- 16 As to the meaning of 'stock' see PARA 1163.
- 17 As to the meaning of 'registrar of companies' see PARA 131 note 2. As to the notice required to be given to the registrar of the reconversion of stock into shares see PARA 1165.
- 18 For these purposes, 'certificated stock' means stock which is not uncertificated stock; and 'uncertificated stock' means stock title to which may be transferred by means of a relevant system: Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, Sch 4 para 1.
- 19 Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, Sch 4 para 2(3).

- 31 Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, reg 23(1)(c).
- 32 Is pursuant to the Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755: see reg 23(2). An entry in a register of securities or in a record of securities (see the text and notes 34-42) relating to a person who no longer holds the securities which are the subject of the entry may be removed from the register or the record (as the case may be) after the expiration of 20 years beginning with the day on which the person ceased to hold any of those securities: Sch 4 para 17(1). It is submitted that the reference to 20 years in Sch 4 para 17(1) should be a reference to ten years. This does not apply in respect of an entry in a register of members: Sch 4 para 17(2).
- 33 Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, reg 23(2) (amended by SI 2009/1889). In relation to the keeping of registers and records of participating securities, the Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, Sch 4, which also excludes, or applies with appropriate modifications, certain provisions of the Companies Act 2006, has effect (see the text and notes 6-27, 32, 37-46): Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, reg 23(4) (amended by SI 2009/1889). As to entries relating to trusts and equitable interests see PARA 343.
- 34 The record must be kept and entered up in accordance with the Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, Sch 4 para 5 (see the text and notes 37-42): reg 20(6)(b).

343. Trusts and equitable interests.

No notice of any trust, expressed, implied or constructive¹, is to be entered on the register of members² of a company³ registered in England and Wales⁴, or to be receivable by the registrar of companies⁵.

The entry of the Public Trustee by that name in the books of a company does not constitute notice of a trust, and a company is not entitled to object to enter the name of the Public Trustee on its books by reason only that the Public Trustee is a corporation, and in dealings with property the fact that the person or one of the persons dealt with is the Public Trustee does not of itself constitute notice of a trust⁶.

Although a member, to the knowledge of the company, is merely a trustee (or legal mortgagee)⁷ of shares registered in his name, he is liable to the company for calls and other obligations of membership⁸, and this liability is not limited to the amount of the trust estate⁹. He is, however, entitled to be indemnified against all such liabilities by the beneficiary¹⁰; but he cannot maintain a claim to enforce this right, unless the liability has been or is about to be enforced against him¹¹. The right of indemnity may be assigned to the liquidator of the company, and enforced by him¹².

Where a company's articles of association¹³ supplement the statutory provision by expressly providing that the company is entitled to treat a shareholder as the absolute owner of his registered shares, and is not to be bound to recognise any equitable interest in shares¹⁴, the company is not bound to accept or preserve notices of equitable interests, and such notices do not affect the company or its officers or agents with any trust¹⁵; but, where the company in which the shares are held claims to have a lien or charge on the shares for its own benefit, the company is liable to be affected with notice of the interests of third parties, and the provisions of the articles will not protect the company if, in the face of notice that the shareholder is not the beneficial owner of the shares, it makes advances or gives credit to the shareholder¹⁶.

Notice to the company does not give any priority as between two persons claiming title to shares registered in the name of a third¹⁷.

No notice of any trust, expressed, implied or constructive, may be entered on an operator register of securities¹⁸, or a part of such a register, or be receivable by an operator¹⁹. Unless expressly prohibited from transferring units of a security²⁰ by means of any computer-based system²¹, a trustee or personal representative is not chargeable with a breach of trust or, as the case may be, with default in administering the estate by reason only of the fact that²²:

- 631 (1) for the purpose of acquiring units of a security which he has the power to acquire in connection with the trust or estate, he has paid for the units under arrangements which provide for them to be transferred to him from a system-member but not to be so transferred until after the payment of the price²³;
- 632 (2) for the purpose of disposing of units of a security which he has power to dispose of in connection with the trust or estate, he has transferred the units to a system-member under arrangements which provide that the price is not to be paid to him until after the transfer is made²⁴; or
- 633 (3) for the purpose of holding units of a security belonging to the trust or estate in uncertificated form and for transferring title to them by means of a relevant system²⁵, he has become a system-member²⁶.

Without prejudice to the Companies Act 2006 s 126 or to the Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, reg 23(3) (see the text and notes 18-19), the operator is not bound by or compelled to recognise any express, implied or constructive trust or other interest in respect of uncertificated units of a security, even if he has actual or constructive notice of the said trust or interest: reg 40(3) (amended by SI 2009/1889). This provision does not prevent, however, in the case of a participating issuer constituted under the law of Scotland, an operator giving notice of a trust to the participating issuer on behalf of a system-member: Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, reg 40(4). 13 As to the meaning of references to a company's 'articles' see PARA 228 note 2. As to a company's articles of association generally see PARA 228 et seq.

14 Provision is made by the model articles which have been made for the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 and intended for adoption by private companies limited by shares (see the Companies (Model Articles) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3229, reg 2, Sch 1; and PARA 228 et seq) and by public companies (see reg 4, Sch 3; and PARA 228 et seq). As to the meanings of 'company limited by shares', 'private company' and 'public company' see PARA 102. Accordingly, where those articles are adopted, it is provided that, except as required by law, no person is to be recognised by the company as holding any share upon any trust, and except as otherwise required by law or the articles, the company is not in any way to be bound by or recognise any interest in a share other than the holder's absolute ownership of it and all the rights attaching to it: Sch 1 Pt 3 (art 23); Sch 3 Pt 3 (art 45). Very similar provision is made in the regulations for management of a company limited by shares contained in the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, reg 2, Schedule

Table A: see art 5 (which is disapplied by reg 2, Schedule Table C art 1, in relation to companies limited by guarantee and not having a share capital). 344. Stop notice and charging order.

A person who has an equitable claim to shares may prevent his claim from being prejudiced by the registered holder dealing with them, by serving upon the company a stop notice¹, after which the company cannot permit the shares claimed to be dealt with by the registered holder, except after proper notice to the claimant².

A charging order³ cannot be made on shares for a debt due from the registered shareholder, if he is a trustee of the shares; for they are not stock (including shares, debentures and debenture stock) in which the judgment debtor has a beneficial interest⁴.

A charging order may, however, be made in respect of a judgment debt due from a debtor who holds any beneficial interest in any shares, debentures or securities of any company incorporated in England and Wales⁵, or incorporated outside England and Wales, or of any state or territory outside the United Kingdom⁶ if registered in a register kept at any place within England and Wales in relation to that interest⁷.

345. Register as evidence.

The register of members¹ is prima facie evidence of any matters which are by the Companies Act 2006 directed or authorised to be inserted in it². Where a company is being wound up³, it is, as between the contributories of the company⁴, prima facie evidence of the truth of all matters purporting to be recorded in it (along with all books and papers of the company and of the liquidators)⁵. However, the register is not conclusive evidence, although the courts endeavour to make it as conclusive as they can consistently with the statutory provisions⁶.

Inaccuracies or omissions do not necessarily prevent the register from being evidence⁷. As, however, it is only prima facie evidence, a person whose name is registered, or omitted from the register, may adduce evidence to show that he ought not or ought to have been registered⁸.

A book or document, intended to be a register of members⁹, may be admitted in evidence as such, although the statutory requirements as to how it should be kept have not been regularly complied with¹⁰.

346. Effect of entries on registers relating to uncertificated securities.

Any purported registration of a transfer of title to an uncertificated¹ unit of a security² other than in accordance with the due provisions³ is of no effect⁴. Subject to this restriction, a register of members⁵ is prima facie evidence of any matters which are by the Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001⁶ directed or authorised to be inserted in it⁷.

The entry of a person's name and address in a company's issuer register of members must not be treated as showing that person to be a member of the company unless⁸:

- 634 (1) the issuer register of members also shows him as holding shares⁹ in the company in certificated form¹⁰;

B. CUSTODY AND INSPECTION

347. Custody of register and index.

A company's register of members¹ must be kept available for inspection² either: (1) at its registered office³; or (2) at a place specified in regulations⁴ made for the purposes of specifying where certain company records are to so kept⁵.

A company must give notice to the registrar of companies⁶ of the place where its register of members is kept available for inspection, and of any change in that place⁷. If a company makes default for 14 days in complying with the requirement to give such notice⁸, an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer of the company who is in default⁹; and a person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale¹⁰ and (for continued contravention) to a daily default fine¹¹ not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale¹². However, no such notice is required if the register has, at all times since it came into existence (or, in the case of a register in existence on 1 July 1948¹³, at all times since then) been kept available for inspection at the company's registered office¹⁴.

The index of the names of members¹⁵ must at all times be kept at the same place as the register of members¹⁶.

Neither the register nor the index may be dealt with by way of charge or otherwise in such a way as to interfere with the purposes for which they must be kept¹⁷.

348. Location of issuer register of members and records of uncertificated shares.

A company's issuer register of members¹ and its record of uncertificated shares² must be kept available for inspection at its registered office³, or at a place specified in regulations⁴. However, the issuer register of members must not be kept available for inspection, in the case of a company registered in England and Wales⁵, at any place elsewhere than in England and Wales or, in the case of a company registered in Scotland, at any place elsewhere than in Scotland⁶. A company's issuer register of members and its record of uncertificated shares must at all times be kept at the same place⁷.

Every participating issuer⁸ which is a company must send notice to the registrar of companies⁹ of the place where its issuer register of members and its record of uncertificated shares are kept available for inspection, and of any change in that place, provided that any notice sent by such a company¹⁰, and which has effect on the coming into force of the Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001¹¹, is treated as being a notice sent in compliance with this provision¹². However, the notice need not be sent if the issuer register of members and the record of uncertificated shares have at all times since they came into existence been kept at the company's registered office¹³.

349. Inspection of register and index.

The company's register of members¹ and the index of members' names² must be open to the inspection³: (1) of any member of the company without charge⁴; and (2) of any other person on payment of such fee as may be prescribed⁵. A person seeking to exercise the right of inspection so conferred must make a request to the company to that effect⁶; and such a request must contain the following information⁷:

- 637 (a) in the case of an individual, his name and address⁸;
- 638 (b) in the case of an organisation, the name and address of an individual responsible for making the request on behalf of the organisation⁹;
- 639 (c) the purpose for which the information is to be used¹⁰; and
- 640 (d) whether the information will be disclosed to any other person¹¹, and if so: (i) where that person is an individual, his name and address¹²; (ii) where that person is an organisation, the name and address of an individual responsible for receiving the information on its behalf¹³; and (iii) the purpose for which the information is to be used by that person¹⁴.

Where a company receives such a request, it must within five working days either comply with the request¹⁵, or apply to the court¹⁶.

If the company applies to the court, it must notify the person making the request¹⁷. If, on such an application, the court is satisfied that the inspection is not sought for a proper purpose¹⁸: (A) it must direct the company not to comply with the request¹⁹; and (B) it may further order that the company's costs on the application be paid in whole or in part by the person who made the request, even if he is not a party to the application²⁰. If the court makes such a direction and it appears to the court that the company is or may be subject to other requests made for a similar purpose (whether made by the same person or different persons), it may direct that the company is not to comply with any such request²¹. The order must contain such provision as appears to the court appropriate to identify the requests to which it applies²². If, on such an application²³, the court does not direct the company not to comply with the request, the company must comply with the request immediately upon the court giving its decision or, as the case may be, the proceedings being discontinued²⁴.

If an inspection required under the right to inspect the register and index²⁵ is refused, otherwise than in accordance with an order of the court, an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer of the company who is in default²⁶; and a person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale²⁷ and (for continued contravention) to a daily default fine²⁸ not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale²⁹. In the case of any such refusal, the court may by order compel an immediate inspection³⁰.

The right of inspection ceases when the company is being wound up³¹. The inspection may be made, under proper restrictions, by an agent of the member desiring inspection³².

It is an offence for a person knowingly or recklessly to make, in a request to inspect the register and/or index³³, a statement that is misleading, false or deceptive in a material particular³⁴; and it is an offence for a person in possession of information obtained by exercise of the right of inspection³⁵ to do anything that results in the information being disclosed to another person³⁶, or to fail to do anything with the result that the information is disclosed to another person³⁷, knowing, or having reason to suspect, that person may use the information for a purpose that is not a proper purpose³⁸. A person guilty of such an offence is liable (on conviction on indictment) to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or a fine (or both)³⁹; and (on summary conviction) to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 12 months⁴⁰ or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum (or both)⁴¹.

When a person inspects the register, the company must inform him of the most recent date (if any) on which alterations were made to the register and there were no further alterations to be made⁴²; and when a person inspects the index of members' names, the company must inform him whether there is any alteration to the register that is not reflected in the index⁴³. If a company fails to provide the information so required⁴⁴, an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer of the company who is in default⁴⁵; and a person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale⁴⁶.

350. Copies of register of members.

Any person may require a copy of a company's register of members¹, or of any part of it, on payment of such fee as may be prescribed². A person seeking to exercise the right that is so conferred³ to require a copy must make a request to the company to that effect⁴; and such a request must contain the following information⁵:

- 641 (1) in the case of an individual, his name and address⁶;
- 642 (2) in the case of an organisation, the name and address of an individual responsible for making the request on behalf of the organisation⁷;
- 643 (3) the purpose for which the information is to be used⁸; and
- 644 (4) whether the information will be disclosed to any other person⁹, and if so: (a) where that person is an individual, his name and address¹⁰; (b) where that person is an organisation, the name and address of an individual responsible for receiving the information on its behalf¹¹; and (c) the purpose for which the information is to be used by that person¹².

Where a company receives such a request, it must within five working days either comply with the request¹³, or apply to the court¹⁴.

If the company applies to the court, it must notify the person making the request¹⁵. If, on such an application, the court is satisfied that the inspection is not sought for a proper purpose¹⁶: (i) it must direct the company not to comply with the request¹⁷; and (ii) it may further order that the company's costs on the application be paid in whole or in part by the person who made the request, even if he is not a party to the application¹⁸. If the court makes such a direction and it appears to the court that the company is or may be subject to other requests made for a similar purpose (whether made by the same person or different persons), it may direct that the company is not to comply with any such request¹⁹. The order must contain such provision as appears to the court appropriate to identify the requests to which it applies²⁰. If, on such an application²¹, the court does not direct the company not to comply with the request, the company must comply with the request immediately upon the court giving its decision or, as the case may be, the proceedings being discontinued²².

If default is made in providing a copy of the register upon such a request²³, otherwise than in accordance with an order of the court, an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer of the company who is in default²⁴; and a person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale²⁵ and (for continued contravention) to a daily default fine²⁶ not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale²⁷. In the case of any such default, the court may by order direct that the copy required be sent to the person requesting it²⁸.

It is an offence for a person knowingly or recklessly to make, in a request that requires a company to provide a copy of its register (or any part of it)²⁹, a statement that is misleading, false or deceptive in a material particular³⁰; and it is an offence for a person in possession of information obtained by exercise of the right to require a copy of the register (or any part of it) to be provided³¹ to do anything that results in the information being disclosed to another person³², or to fail to do anything with the result that the information is disclosed to another person³³, knowing, or having reason to suspect, that person may use the information for a purpose that is not a proper purpose³⁴. A person guilty of such an offence is liable (on conviction on indictment) to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or a fine (or both)³⁵; and (on summary conviction) to imprisonment for a term not exceeding 12 months³⁶ or to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum (or both)³⁷.

When the company provides a person with a copy of the register (or any part of it), the company must inform him of the most recent date (if any) on which alterations were made to the register and there were no further alterations to be made³⁸. If a company fails to provide the information so required³⁹, an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer of the company who is in default⁴⁰; and a person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale⁴¹.

2 Companies Act 2006 s 116(2). As to the provision of copies of company records generally see PARA 676. As to the right conferred on members and others to inspect the register and index see PARA 349. In the Companies Acts, 'prescribed' means prescribed (by order or by regulations) by the Secretary of State: Companies Act 2006 s 1167. As to the making of orders and regulations under the Companies Act 2006 generally see ss 1288-1292. As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6. In exercise of the powers conferred by s 116(2), the Secretary of State has made the Companies (Fees for Inspection and Copying of Company Records) Regulations 2007, SI 2007/2612. Accordingly, for the purpose of the Companies Act 2006 s 116(2), the fee prescribed is: (1) in terms of the amount per number of entries copied by the company, £1 for each of the first five entries, £30 for the next 95 entries or part thereof, £30 for the next 900 entries or part thereof, £30 for the next 99,000 entries or part thereof, and £30 for the remainder of the entries in the register or part thereof (Companies (Fees for Inspection and Copying of Company Records) Regulations 2007, SI 2007/2612, reg 3(1)(a)(i), (2)); and (2) the reasonable costs incurred by the company in delivering the copy of the entries to the person entitled to be provided with that copy (reg 3(1)(a)(ii)).

The Companies Act 2006 ss 116-118 apply to a company which is a participating issuer as if references to the company's register of members were references to its issuer register of members and its record of uncertificated shares; and as if references in s 116 to the company's index of members' names were references to the index required to be kept by the Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, reg 23(4), Sch 4 para 7 (see PARA 341): Sch 4 para 9 (amended by SI 2009/1889). References to the Companies Act 2006 in the Companies (Fees for Inspection and Copying of Company Records) Regulations 2007, SI 2007/2612, and in the Companies (Fees for Inspection of Company Records) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3007, are to be construed accordingly: Uncertificated Securities Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3755, Sch 4 para 9 (as so amended). C. RECTIFICATION OF REGISTER

351. Application to court for rectification of company's register.

A person aggrieved, or any member of the company¹, or the company itself, may apply to the court² for rectification of the register of members³, if⁴:

- 645 (1) the name of any person is, without sufficient cause, entered in or omitted from the register⁵; or
- 646 (2) default is made, or unnecessary delay takes place, in entering on the register the fact of any person having ceased to be a member⁶.

On such an application, the court may decide any question relating to the title of any person who is a party to the application to have his name entered in or omitted from the register, whether the question arises between members or alleged members, or between members or alleged members on the one hand and the company on the other hand; and generally the court may decide any question necessary or expedient to be decided for rectification of the register⁷. The court may either refuse the application, or may order rectification of the register and payment by the company of any damages sustained by any party aggrieved⁸. However, the company may be ordered to pay damages only when the register is ordered to be rectified⁹. If money has been paid on the shares, the amount will be ordered to be returned with interest at an appropriate rate¹⁰, and the amount with costs is provable in a winding up¹¹.

- 4 Companies Act 2006 s 125(1).
- 5 Companies Act 2006 s 125(1)(a). There is no necessity to show any wrongdoing by the company and any question of omission by error or entry by error can be raised. The phrase 'without sufficient cause' is a requirement that the court must be shown at the hearing that there is no sufficient cause for the omission or entry, as the case may be: Re Diamond Rock Boring Co Ltd, ex p Shaw (1877) 2 QBD 463 at 482, CA, per Brett LJ; Re Fagin's Bookshop plc [1992] BCLC 118 at 123 per Harman J. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(8) COMPANY MEMBERSHIP/(iv) Register of Members/C. RECTIFICATION OF REGISTER/352. General jurisdiction to rectify company's register of members.

352. General jurisdiction to rectify company's register of members.

The jurisdiction to rectify a company's register of members is discretionary¹; and it is not limited by the provisions of the Companies Act 2006². Thus the court will rectify the register, apart from that Act, to enable the members of a company to have a fair and reasonable exercise of their rights³.

When the court entertains the application, it is bound to go into all the circumstances of the case, and to consider what equity the applicant has to call for its interposition⁴ and the purpose for which relief is sought⁵.

The power to rectify has been exercised where there has been misrepresentation in the prospectus⁶; where it is expedient to have an order which will bind all the shareholders and effectually bar any subsequent application for restoration of a name struck out by the directors⁷; where shares have been illegally allotted at a discount⁸; where the application for shares has been made in the name of a person, as, for example, an underwriter, without his authority⁹; where there is no valid allotment of shares¹⁰; or the allotment is not made within a reasonable time¹¹, or is irregular¹²; where a transfer of shares has been improperly registered or registration has been refused¹³; where there are joint holders of shares who wish to divide the shares so held into two parts with their names entered in the register in respect of each part in a different order¹⁴; where the company puts on its register matters which are not required by the statute¹⁵; in order to set right allotments of shares which have been issued as fully paid without a proper contract being filed¹⁶; and where an overseas company was entered in the register without the permission of the Treasury, which was at the time required¹⁷.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(8) COMPANY MEMBERSHIP/(iv) Register of Members/C. RECTIFICATION OF REGISTER/353. Procedure on application to court for rectification of register.

353. Procedure on application to court for rectification of register.

The application to the court¹ for rectification of a company's register of members² may be made by the person aggrieved, by any member of the company, or by the company³. Such an application must be made by the issue of a claim form⁴. The jurisdiction of the court is summary in nature with affidavit evidence and ought not to be invoked where there is a substantial dispute as to fact; in such a case, the court will look to actively manage the dispute by making appropriate directions rather than simply striking out the application for rectification⁵.

A claim may be instituted for rectification of the register⁶ without any direction by the court, a course which should be followed where there is much complexity, or where other relief is required. The court will not give substantive relief by way of rectification of the register on an interim application in a claim⁷, nor will it rectify the register in the absence of third parties whose rights will be affected by the rectification⁸. The application to rectify must be made promptly⁹.

The proper respondents to an application to rectify the register are the company and the registered holder or holders of the shares whose registration is in question, if not the applicant¹⁰. It is not necessary to join other shareholders who are registered in respect of shares other than those in respect of which rectification is sought¹¹. Nor is it necessary to join the directors of the company where rectification is sought unless an order for costs is sought against them¹².

The right to challenge the court's exercise of discretion to make an order for rectification must depend upon the applicant having a sufficient interest in the rectification of the share register to give it a right to do so¹³.

354. Rectification after winding up.

Notwithstanding that the winding up of a company has commenced¹, the court has power to rectify the register of members² under the statutory power³. However, a strong case must be made out⁴. When giving directions as to the distribution of surplus assets in a winding up, the court may treat as members those who would be entitled to have their names placed on the register without insisting on the formality of an application to rectify the register⁵.

355. Order for rectification.

In the case of a company¹ required by the Companies Act 2006² to send in its annual return a list of its members³ to the registrar of companies⁴, the court⁵, when making an order for rectification of the register of members⁶, must by its order direct notice of the rectification to be given to the registrar⁷.

Where the court orders the register to be rectified by removing a name from it, the name should not be erased, but a line should be drawn through it, and an abstract of the order signed by the secretary of the company should be added⁸.

Where a company does not rectify the register pursuant to an order of the court, the court may direct that the person by whom the order was obtained or some other person appointed by the court may do so⁹. In ordering rectification, the court has power to fix a particular date at which the registration will become operative, even to the extent of making it retrospective; but subject, if necessary, to conditions protecting the rights of third persons¹⁰.

A participating issuer who rectifies an issuer register of securities in order to give effect to an order of a court in the United Kingdom must immediately give the operator written notification of the change to the entry, if any rectification of the operator register of securities may also be required (unless the change to the issuer register is made in response to an operator-instruction)⁵.

An operator who rectifies an operator register of securities must immediately generate an operator-instruction to inform the relevant participating issuer of the change to the entry (unless the change is made in response to an issuer-instruction)⁶; and generate an operator-instruction to inform the system-members⁷ concerned of the change to the entry⁸.

D. OVERSEAS BRANCH REGISTER AND REGISTERS IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES

358. Overseas branch register of members.

A company¹ having a share capital² may, if it transacts business in any part of Her Majesty's dominions³ outside the United Kingdom⁴, the Channel Islands, the Isle of Man, or certain other overseas countries and territories⁵, cause to be kept there a branch register of members⁶ resident in that country or territory (an 'overseas branch register')⁷. The Secretary of State⁸ may make provision by regulations⁹ as to the circumstances in which a company is to be regarded as keeping a register in a particular country or territory¹⁰.

A company that begins to keep an overseas branch register must give notice to the registrar of companies¹¹ within 14 days of doing so, stating the country or territory in which the register is kept¹². If default is made in complying with this requirement to give notice, an offence is committed by the company and by every officer of the company who is in default¹³; and any person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale¹⁴ and (for continued contravention) to a daily default fine¹⁵ not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale¹⁶.

An overseas branch register is regarded as part of the company's register of members (the 'main register')¹⁷.

1 As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

2 As to the meanings of 'share capital' and 'company having a share capital' see PARA 1042.

3 As to the meaning of 'Her Majesty's dominions' see COMMONWEALTH vol 13 (2009) PARA 707.

4 As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 1 note 5.

5 The Companies Act 2006 Pt 8 Ch 3 (ss 129-135) (see also PARA 359 et seq) applies to a company which transacts business not only in any part of Her Majesty's dominions outside the United Kingdom, the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man, but also in the following countries or territories: Bangladesh, Cyprus, Dominica, the Gambia, Ghana, Guyana, The Hong Kong Special Administrative Region of the People's Republic of China, India, Ireland, Kenya, Kiribati, Lesotho, Malawi, Malaysia, Malta, Nigeria, Pakistan, Seychelles, Sierra Leone, Singapore, South Africa, Sri Lanka, Swaziland, Trinidad and Tobago, Uganda and Zimbabwe: see s 129(1), (2).

6 As to the general duty under the Companies Act 2006 to keep a register of company members see PARA 335 et seq. As to membership of a company see PARA 321 et seq.

7 Companies Act 2006 s 129(1), (2). As to the keeping of the overseas branch register see PARA 359. Under the Companies (Consolidation) Act 1908 s 34(1) (repealed), the corresponding provision in that Act, the register was called the colonial register. References to a colonial register occurring in articles registered before 1 November 1929 (ie the date on which the consolidating act, the Companies Act 1929 (repealed), came into force) are to be read, unless the context otherwise requires, as a reference to an overseas branch register kept under the Companies Act 2006 s 129 (s 129(5)(b)). Under the Companies Act 1948 s 119 (repealed) such a register was called a dominion register. Accordingly, references in any Act or instrument (including, in particular, a company's articles) to a company's dominion register is to be read, unless the context otherwise requires, as a reference to an overseas branch register kept under the Companies Act 2006 s 129 (s 129(5)(a)). COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(8) COMPANY MEMBERSHIP/(iv) Register of Members/D. OVERSEAS BRANCH REGISTER AND REGISTERS IN FOREIGN COUNTRIES/359. How the overseas branch register is kept.

359. How the overseas branch register is kept.

The Secretary of State¹ may make provision by regulations² modifying any provision of the Companies Act 2006, so far as it relates to the main register of members³, as it applies in relation to an overseas branch register⁴. Subject to the provisions of the Companies Act 2006, a company⁵ may by its articles⁶ make such provision as it thinks fit as to the keeping of overseas branch registers⁷. A competent court in a country or territory where an overseas branch register is kept may exercise the same jurisdiction as is exercisable by a court⁸ in the United Kingdom⁹ either: (1) to rectify a register of members¹⁰; or (2) in relation to a request for inspection of, or a copy of, the register¹¹; and the offences of: (a) refusing inspection of, or failing to provide a copy of, the register¹²; and (b) making a false, misleading or deceptive statement in a request for inspection or a copy¹³, may be prosecuted summarily before any tribunal having summary criminal jurisdiction in the country or territory where the register is kept¹⁴.

A company that keeps an overseas branch register must keep available for inspection either the register¹⁵, or a duplicate of the register duly entered up from time to time¹⁶, at the place in the United Kingdom where the company's main register is kept available for inspection¹⁷. If default is made in complying with this requirement to keep the overseas branch register (or a duplicate) available for inspection in the United Kingdom, an offence is committed by the company and by every officer of the company who is in default¹⁸; and any person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale¹⁹ and (for continued contravention) to a daily default fine²⁰ not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale²¹.

Shares²² registered in an overseas branch register must be distinguished from the shares registered in the main register²³; and no transaction with respect to any shares registered in an overseas branch register may be registered in any other register²⁴.

2 As to the making of regulations under the Companies Act 2006 generally see ss 1288-1292. Regulations under s 131 are subject to negative resolution procedure (ie the statutory instrument containing the regulations is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament): see ss 131(3), 1289. At the date at which this volume states the law, no such regulations have been made under s 131.

As to how far Acts of Parliament of the United Kingdom extend to dominions as part of their law otherwise than by consent see COMMONWEALTH vol 13 (2009) PARA 867 et seq. As to the application of the provisions which govern overseas branch registers to other countries see PARA 358 notes 1-7. The Companies Act 2006 s 134 extends only to those countries and territories to which the Companies Act 1985 s 362(1), Sch 14 Pt II para 3 (repealed), which made similar provision, extended immediately before 1 October 2009 (ie immediately before the coming into force of the Companies Act 2006 Pt 8 Ch 3 (ss 129-135) (see also PARAS 358, 360 et seq): see the Companies Act 2006 (Commencement No 8, Transitional Provisions and Savings) Order 2008, SI 2008/2860, art 3(h)): Companies Act 2006 s 134(3). The Companies Act 1985 Sch 14 Pt II para 3 (repealed) provided for the extension of jurisdiction to apply only to those countries and territories where, immediately before 1 July 1985 (ie the date of the coming into force of the Companies Act 1985), provision to the same effect made under the corresponding provision of the Companies Act 1948 s 120(2) (repealed), had effect as part of the local law: see the Companies Act 1985 Sch 14 Pt II para 3(2) (repealed). The Companies Act 1948 ss 119-121 (repealed) applied in relation to the Republic of South Africa (see the South Africa Act 1962 s 2(1), Sch 2 para 4(1) (Sch 2 para 4 now substituted by SI 1986/1035)) and the whole of Malaysia (see the Companies Registers (Malaysia) Order 1964, SI 1964/931, made under the Federation of Malaya Independence Act 1957 s 2(3); and the Malaysia Act 1963 s 4(1)) as if they were parts of Her Majesty's dominions and to Pakistan as if it had not withdrawn from the Commonwealth and as if the Pakistan (Consequential Provisions) Act 1956 had not been repealed (see the Pakistan Act 1973 s 4(1), Sch 3 para 3(1) (repealed)). Such a register was under the Companies Act 1948 known as a dominion register: see s 119(1) (repealed); and PARA 358 note 7.

These statutory provisions might also apply to Kenya, Malawi, Swaziland, Zanzibar and Tanzania (formerly Tanganyika). The first four named countries were the subject matter of an Order in Council dated 26 October 1931, SR & O 1931/931, which applied the Companies Act 1929 ss 103-105 (repealed) and, if it was in force on 1 July 1948, was continued in force as if made under the Companies Act 1948: see s 459(2) (repealed). The provisions were applied to Tanganyika by the Tanganyika (Companies Dominion Register) Order in Council 1951, SI 1951/752. Both these orders were made under, or under provisions corresponding to, the Companies Act 1948 s 122 (repealed) (see PARA 12) and under the Foreign Jurisdiction Act 1890. The countries concerned all became part of the Commonwealth, and, when this happened, they were no longer such countries as are referred to in the Companies Act 1948 s 122 (repealed), more especially as they then became part of Her Majesty's dominions to which ss 119-121 (repealed) applied automatically. These orders would then presumably have lapsed, and would not automatically revive when these countries ceased to be part of Her Majesty's dominions and became independent under the Kenya Independence Act 1963, the Malawi Republic Act 1966, the Swaziland Independence Act 1968, the Zanzibar Act 1963 and the Tanganyika Independence Act 1961 respectively.

A further order made under provisions corresponding to the Companies Act 1948 s 122 (repealed), the Aden Protectorate (Application of Acts) Order 1938, SR & O 1938/1603, applied these provisions in relation to the Aden Protectorate. This order was not revoked, but is considered spent, having been overtaken by events.

The Companies Act 1948 s 122 (repealed) was applied to Pakistan: see the Pakistan Act 1973 s 4(1), Sch 3 para 3(1) (repealed).

Where a register of members of a company is kept in Bangladesh, it is not to be treated as improperly kept by reason only that, at any time after 3 February 1972 and before 1 September 1974, it included members resident in Pakistan: see the Bangladesh Act 1973 s 1(3), Schedule para 10(1).

(v) Liability of Members

362. Liability of members in general.

Merely as such, members of a company¹ are not liable to anyone except on a winding up to the extent and manner provided by the Insolvency Act 1986².

A past member is not liable to contribute (that is, he is not liable as a 'contributory'³) if he has ceased to be a member for one year or more before the commencement of the winding up⁴; nor is he liable to contribute in respect of any debt or liability of the company contracted after he ceased to be a member⁵; nor unless it appears to the court that the existing members are unable to satisfy their required contributions⁶. In the case of a company limited by shares⁷, no contribution is required from any member exceeding the amount (if any) unpaid on the shares in respect of which he is liable as a present or past member⁸.

363. Liability of members of unlimited company.

Where a company which is being wound up¹ is registered² as unlimited³, the liability of each past and present member⁴ extends to the whole amount of the company's debts and liabilities, and the expenses of its winding up⁵, subject to a right of contribution from the other solvent members ('contributories')⁶. With regard to any policy of insurance or other contract, the liability of individual members may, however, by the terms of the policy or contract be restricted, or the funds of the company alone made liable⁷. If an unlimited company has a share capital⁸, the liability on the shares may be defined by its articles of association⁹. The liability on the shares¹⁰, if any, is the only liability which may be enforced by the company whilst it is carrying on business¹¹, although there is then an unlimited liability to creditors¹².

364. Liability of members where company is limited by guarantee.

In the case of a company limited by guarantee¹ being wound up², if the company is without a share capital³, no contribution is required from any member⁴ exceeding the amount undertaken to be contributed by him to the company's assets in the event of its being wound up⁵. The statement of guarantee required to be delivered in the case of a company that is to be limited by guarantee⁶ must state that each member undertakes that, if the company is wound up while he is a member, or within one year after he ceases to be a member, he will contribute to the assets of the company such amount as may be required for: (1) payment of the debts and liabilities of the company contracted before he ceases to be a member⁷; (2) payment of the costs, charges and expenses of winding up⁸; and (3) adjustment of the rights of the contributories among themselves⁹, not exceeding a specified amount¹⁰. If the company has a share capital¹¹, every member of it is liable (in addition to the amount so undertaken to be contributed to the assets), to contribute to the extent of any sums unpaid on any shares¹² held by him¹³; and he may further under the articles of association¹⁴, as regards his fellow members, incur an additional liability, which in the event of winding up must be enforced by bringing proceedings¹⁵.

A past member is not liable to contribute if he has ceased to be a member for one year or more before the commencement of the winding up¹⁶; nor is he liable to contribute in respect of any debt or liability of the company contracted after he ceased to be a member¹⁷; nor unless it appears to the court that the existing members are unable to satisfy their required contributions¹⁸.

Under those model articles, the liability of each member is limited to £1, being the amount that each member undertakes to contribute to the assets of the company in the event of its being wound up while he is a member or within one year after he ceases to be a member, for payment of the company's debts and liabilities contracted before he ceases to be a member, payment of the costs, charges and expenses of winding up, and adjustment of the rights of the contributories among themselves: see Sch 2 Pt 1 (art 2).

365. Liability of members where company is limited by shares.

Save that a past member¹ of a company being wound up, which was at some former time registered as unlimited² but which has re-registered as a limited company³, who was a member of the company at the time of re-registration, is liable to contribute to the assets of the company in respect of its debts and liabilities contracted before that time if a winding up commences within three years of such re-registration⁴, the liability of a past or present member of a company limited by shares⁵ is limited to the amount, if any, unpaid on the shares in respect of which he is liable as a present or past member⁶. A company's articles of association⁷ may, however, impose a further liability on him in relation to other members⁸. Except where the articles otherwise provide, or by the terms of some special contract, there is no liability to pay for shares even in the case of signatories to the memorandum of association⁹, except in pursuance of calls duly made in accordance with the articles¹⁰, while the company is a going concern¹¹, or of calls duly made in the winding up of the company¹².

The liability of a past member can arise only if a winding up supervenes within 12 months of his ceasing to be a member¹³, and he is not liable to contribute in respect of any debt or liability of the company contracted after he ceased to be a member¹⁴. Nor is he liable to contribute unless it appears to the court that the existing members are unable to satisfy the required contributions¹⁵.

A person cannot become a member of a company in a representative capacity so as to be free from personal liability in respect of his shares¹⁶; but a trustee shareholder is entitled to be indemnified out of the trust estate if the shares are an investment authorised by the trust instrument or by statute¹⁷, and he is entitled to be indemnified by a beneficial owner who is sui juris, whether such owner created the trust or accepted a transfer of the beneficial ownership¹⁸.

A person from whom any of the shares were so redeemed or purchased is liable to contribute an amount not exceeding so much of the relevant payment as was made by the company in respect of his shares; and the directors are jointly and severally liable with that person to contribute that amount¹². 370. Statutory rights of members collectively.

The members of a company¹ collectively have statutory rights, some of which are exercisable by a bare majority², others by a particular majority³.

Statutory rights cannot be taken away or modified by any provisions of the company's constitution⁴.

1 As to who qualifies as a member of a company see PARA 321. As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

2 Eg by ordinary resolution under the Companies Act 2006 s 168 (removal of director from office; director's right to protest): see PARA 517. As to ordinary resolutions see PARA 613.

3 For example, shareholders holding an aggregate of 5% or more of the total voting rights can object to the resolution proposing re-registration as a private limited company (see the Companies Act 2006 s 98; and PARA 174); can circulate a written resolution in the case of a private company (see s 292; and PARA 625), or a resolution in the case of a general meeting of a public company (see s 338; and PARA 643); can require directors to call a general meeting (see s 303; and PARA 641); can circulate a statement to a general meeting (see s 314; and PARA 642); can demand an independent report on a poll (see s 342; and PARA 657); can prevent the deemed re-appointment of an auditor (see s 488; and PARA 915); and can publish audit concerns on a website (see s 527; and PARA 949). Shareholders holding an aggregate of 10% or more of the total voting rights can demand a poll (see s 321(1); and PARA 655); can require an audit of accounts to be made where the company would otherwise be entitled to exemption (see s 476; and PARA 906); and can require a company to exercise its powers to give notice requiring information about interests in its shares (see s 803; and PARA 450). Where the rights attached to any class of shares in a company having a share capital are varied, the holders of not less in the aggregate than 15% of the issued shares of the class in question can object to a variation of class rights (see s 633; and PARA 1061). A 'special resolution' of the members (or of a class of members) of a company, being a resolution passed by a majority of not less than 75% (see PARA 614), must be passed eg to amend a company's articles (see s 21; and PARA 232).

4 See PARAS 249, 250. As to the meaning of references to a company's constitution for the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 see PARA 227. A shareholders' agreement as to how to vote on a particular matter may effectively block the exercise of statutory rights: see PARAS 249, 251, 372.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(8) COMPANY MEMBERSHIP/(vi) Exercise of Members' Rights/A. MEMBERS' RIGHTS/371. Members' rights under constitution.

371. Members' rights under constitution.

Rights may be expressly conferred on the members of a company¹ by its constitution².

Some statutory rights of members may be exercised only if expressly authorised by the company's articles of association³ or may require confirmation in any case by the court⁴.

The rights usually conferred on members by the express terms of the articles include those with regard to dividends, the transfer and transmission of shares, attending and voting at meetings of the company, and appointment of directors⁵.

1 As to who qualifies as a member of a company see PARA 321. As to the meaning of 'company' under the Companies Acts see PARA 24; and as to the meaning of the 'Companies Acts' see PARA 16.

2 Whether they are enforceable or not is another matter: see PARA 245. As to the meaning of references to a company's constitution for the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 see PARA 227. As to the necessity of registration of particulars of newly created class rights see PARA 1065.

3 See PARA 245. As to a company's articles of association generally see PARA 228 et seq.

4 Eg in the case of a reduction of capital which must be confirmed by the court: see the Companies Act 2006 s 641(1)(b); and PARA 1173.

5 As to model articles of association prescribed for the purposes of the Companies Act 2006, and their application generally, see PARA 228 et seq. Different versions of model articles have been so prescribed for use by private companies limited by shares (see the Companies (Model Articles) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3229, reg 2, Sch 1), private companies limited by guarantee (see reg 3, Sch 2), and public companies (see reg 4, Sch 3). As to the meanings of 'company limited by guarantee', 'company limited by shares', 'private company' and 'public company' see PARA 102. The default articles prescribed for the purposes of the Companies Act 1985 ('legacy articles'), ie the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, have not been revoked and may, in their amended form, continue to be used by companies after the commencement of the Companies Act 2006: see PARA 230.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(8) COMPANY MEMBERSHIP/(vi) Exercise of Members' Rights/A. MEMBERS' RIGHTS/372. Members' rights under the general law.

372. Members' rights under the general law.

The rights of a company member¹ under the general law include the right, where he has been induced to take shares² by misrepresentation, to recover damages for misrepresentation if fraudulent or negligent³, or to obtain a rescission of his contract to take shares, and rectification of the share register, together with a return of the money paid by him on the shares⁴; and the right to restrain directors⁵ from acting ultra vires the company or in excess of their own powers or acting unfairly to the members⁶.

To supplement their rights under the company's constitution⁷ some or all of the shareholders⁸ may decide to enter into a shareholders' agreement, that is to say a separate contract apart from the articles; and shareholders who are parties to such an agreement can enforce that agreement inter se in the same manner as any other contract⁹.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(8) COMPANY MEMBERSHIP/(vi) Exercise of Members' Rights/A. MEMBERS' RIGHTS/373. Member cannot recover reflective loss.

373. Member cannot recover reflective loss.

Proceedings may be maintained by a member of a company when the matter is one which affects his individual rights¹; and in a proper case he may obtain an injunction against the company in aid of his right². Where a company suffers loss caused by a breach of duty owed to it, only the company may undertake proceedings in respect of that loss³; and no action lies in favour of a shareholder suing in that capacity (and no other) to make good a diminution in the value of the shareholder's shareholding (by taking action against the responsible party) where that merely reflects the loss suffered by the company (the principle of 'no reflective loss')⁴.

However, a personal claim may be brought by a shareholder where he can show: (1) a breach of duty owed personally to the shareholder; and (2) a personal loss separate and distinct from any loss suffered by the company⁵. A shareholder's claim may survive also in circumstances where a defendant's wrong has disabled the company from pursuing its own claim against him⁶.

A shareholder seeking to enforce an individual right against the company is not entitled to an advance order for an indemnity as to costs: Re a Company (No 005136 of 1986) [1987] BCLC 82. The principle in Wallersteiner v Moir (No 2) [1975] QB 373, [1975] 1 All ER 849, CA, is confined to derivative claims: see PARAS 455 et seq.

See also Stein v Blake [1998] 1 All ER 724, [1998] 1 BCLC 573, CA (loss sustained by a member by a diminution in the value of his shares, by reason of the misappropriation of the company's assets, is recoverable by the company only, as the member has not suffered a distinct loss); Ellis v Property Leeds (UK) Ltd [2002] EWCA Civ 32, [2002] 2 BCLC 175 (director of company precluded from suing in personal capacity as his loss reflected the company's loss). The principle in Prudential Assurance Co Ltd v Newman Industries Ltd (No 2) is not precluded from applying simply because the defendant also owes fiduciary duties to the claimant, unless the defendants could show that the whole of the claimed profit reflected what the company had lost and which it had a cause of action to recover: Shaker v Al-Bedrawi [2002] EWCA Civ 1452, [2003] Ch 350, [2002] 4 All ER 835 (proceedings brought by a claimant not as a shareholder but as a beneficiary under a trust, against his trustee for a profit). See also Gardner v Parker [2004] EWCA Civ 781, [2004] 2 BCLC 554. The rule against reflective loss is not concerned with barring causes of action but with barring recovery of certain types of loss and therefore whether the cause of action lay in common law or equity and whether the remedy lay in damages or restitution makes no difference as to its applicability: Shaker v Al-Bedrawi; Gardner v Parker.

5 Johnson v Gore Wood & Co [2002] 2 AC 1, [2001] 1 All ER 481, HL.

Where there is a risk of double recovery created by a wrong done both to the company and to the shareholder, the shareholder's claim must give way: Johnson v Gore Wood & Co; Day v Cook [2001] EWCA Civ 592, [2002] 1 BCLC 1 (where the company's cause of action was in fact statute-barred). See also Gardner v Parker [2004] EWCA Civ 781, [2004] 2 BCLC 554 (since the foundation of the rule against reflective loss was the need to avoid double recovery, there was a powerful case for saying that it should be applied in a case where, in its absence, both the beneficiary and the company would be able to recover effectively the same damages from a defaulting trustee-director, even where the cause of action that may be asserted by the shareholder is different from the one that may be asserted by the company). Cf Barings plc (in administration) v Coopers & Lybrand [1997] 1 BCLC 427, CA. See also Pearce v European Reinsurance [2005] EWHC 1493 (Ch), [2005] 2 BCLC 366 (reflective loss principle did not prevent a member from bringing a claim against auditors simply because his claim involved allegations that the auditors' valuation of shares had failed to take into account in their valuation claims which the company had against a director).

6 Giles v Rhind [2002] EWCA Civ 1428, [2003] Ch 618, [2002] 4 All ER 977; Perry v Day [2004] EWHC 3372 (Ch), [2005] 2 BCLC 405. In Gardner v Parker [2004] EWCA Civ 781, [2004] 2 BCLC 554, where the claim was judged on the facts to have failed to fall within this exception, it was held that the mere fact that the company chose not to claim against the defendant, or settled with him on comparatively generous terms, would not, without more, justify disapplying the principle in Prudential Assurance Co Ltd v Newman Industries Ltd (No 2) [1982] Ch 204, [1982] 1 All ER 354, CA. Since this principle is an exclusionary rule, denying a claimant what otherwise would be his right to take action, the onus is on the defendants to establish its applicability: Shaker v Al-Bedrawi [2002] EWCA Civ 1452 at [83], [2003] Ch 350 at [83], [2002] 4 All ER 835 at [83] per Peter Gibson LJ.

As the law stands, the principles in Johnson v Gore Wood & Co [2002] 2 AC 1, [2001] 1 All ER 481, HL (see the text and notes 4-5) as qualified by the Court of Appeal in Giles v Rhind are binding: Webster v Sanderson [2009] EWCA Civ 830 at [36], [2009] All ER (D) 352 (Jul) at [36] per Lord Clarke of Stone-cum-Ebony MR (refusing to follow Waddington Ltd v Chan Chun Hoo Thomas [2008] HKCU 1381 at [85]-[87], [2009] 2 BCLC 82 at [85]-[87] per Lord Millett, where doubt had been expressed as to whether it was right that Giles v Rhind should allow the shareholder to bring an action for his own benefit, as this would entail recovery by the wrong party to the prejudice of the company and its creditors and would produce the result which was identified as unacceptable in Johnson v Gore Wood & Co).

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(8) COMPANY MEMBERSHIP/(vi) Exercise of Members' Rights/B. EXERCISE OF MEMBER'S RIGHTS BY NOMINEE/374. Provisions of articles as to enjoyment and exercise of members' rights by nominated person.

B. EXERCISE OF MEMBER'S RIGHTS BY NOMINEE

374. Provisions of articles as to enjoyment and exercise of members' rights by nominated person.

Where provision is made by a company's articles¹ enabling a member² to nominate another person or persons as entitled to enjoy or exercise all or any specified rights of the member in relation to the company³, then, so far as is necessary to give effect to that provision, anything required or authorised by any provision of the Companies Acts to be done by or in relation to the member must instead be done (or, as the case may be, may instead be done) by or in relation to the nominated person (or each of them) as if he were a member of the company⁴. This applies, in particular, to the rights conferred in relation to the following:

- 665 (1) the right⁵ to be sent a resolution that is proposed to be moved as a written resolution⁶;
- 666 (2) the right⁷ to require circulation of a resolution that is proposed to be moved as a written resolution⁸;
- 667 (3) the right⁹ to require directors¹⁰ to call a general meeting¹¹;
- 668 (4) the right¹² to receive notice of general meetings¹³;
- 669 (5) the right¹⁴ to require circulation of a statement¹⁵;
- 670 (6) the right¹⁶ to ask questions at a meeting of a traded company¹⁷;
- 671 (7) the right¹⁸ to appoint a proxy to act at a meeting¹⁹;
- 672 (8) the right²⁰ to require circulation of a resolution for a general meeting of a public company²¹;
- 673 (9) the right²² to request a traded company to include in the business to be dealt with at an annual general meeting any matter (other than a proposed resolution) which may properly be included in the business²³; and
- 674 (10) the right²⁴ to be sent a copy of annual accounts and reports²⁵.

However, these provisions²⁶ do not confer rights enforceable against the company by anyone other than the member²⁷; nor do they affect the requirements for an effective transfer or other disposition of the whole or part of a member's interest in the company²⁸.

As regards the rights conferred by such a nomination²⁹:

- 675 (a) enjoyment by the nominated person of the rights conferred by the nomination is enforceable against the company by the member as if they were rights conferred by the company's articles³⁰; and
- 676 (b) any enactment³¹, and any provision of the company's articles, having effect in relation to communications with members has a corresponding effect (subject to any necessary adaptations) in relation to communications with the nominated person³².

The rights conferred by the nomination are in addition to the rights of the member himself³³, and they do not affect any rights exercisable by virtue of any provisions of company's articles as to the enjoyment or exercise of members' rights³⁴.

A failure to give effect to the rights conferred by the nomination does not affect the validity of anything done by or on behalf of the company³⁵.

The Secretary of State³⁶ may by regulations³⁷ amend the provisions relating to information rights³⁸ so as to extend or restrict the classes of companies to which the nomination of a person to enjoy information rights applies³⁹, so as to make other provision as to the circumstances in which such a nomination may be made, or so as to extend or restrict the rights conferred by such a nomination⁴⁰.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(8) COMPANY MEMBERSHIP/(vi) Exercise of Members' Rights/B. EXERCISE OF MEMBER'S RIGHTS BY NOMINEE/375. Information rights enjoyed by person nominated by member of traded company.

375. Information rights enjoyed by person nominated by member of traded company.

A member of a company¹, whose shares² are admitted to trading on a regulated market³, who holds shares on behalf of another person may nominate that person to enjoy information rights⁴. However, a company need not act on a nomination purporting to relate to certain information rights only⁵.

If the person to be nominated wishes to receive hard copy communications⁶, he must request the person making the nomination to notify the company of that fact⁷, and provide an address to which such copies may be sent⁸; and this must be done before the nomination is made⁹. If, having received such a request, the person making the nomination notifies the company that the nominated person wishes to receive hard copy communications¹⁰, and provides the company with that address¹¹, the right of the nominated person is to receive hard copy communications accordingly¹². If no such notification is given (or no address is provided), the nominated person is taken to have agreed that documents or information may be sent or supplied to him by the company by means of a website¹³. However, that agreement may be revoked by the nominated person¹⁴, and it does not affect his right¹⁵ to require a hard copy version of a document or information provided in any other form¹⁶.

Where a company sends a copy of a notice of a meeting to a person nominated to enjoy a member's information rights¹⁷, the copy of the notice must be accompanied by a statement that: (1) he may have a right under an agreement between him and the member by whom he was nominated to be appointed, or to have someone else appointed, as a proxy for the meeting¹⁸; and (2) if he has no such right or does not wish to exercise it, he may have a right under such an agreement to give instructions to the member as to the exercise of voting rights¹⁹.

4 Companies Act 2006 s 146(1), (2). For these purposes, 'information rights' means: (1) the right to receive a copy of all communications that the company sends to its members generally or to any class of its members that includes the person making the nomination (s 146(3)(a)); and (2) the rights conferred by s 431 or s 432 (right to require copies of accounts and reports) (see PARA 860), and s 1145 (right to require hard copy version of document or information provided in another form) (see PARA 681) (s 146(3)(b)). The reference in head (1) above to communications that a company sends to its members generally includes the company's annual accounts and reports; and as to the application of s 426 (option to provide summary financial statement) (see PARA 853) in relation to a person nominated to enjoy information rights see s 426(5): s 146(4). As to the termination or suspension of a nomination to enjoy information rights see PARA 376.

5 Companies Act 2006 s 146(5).

6 The Companies Act 2006 s 147 applies as regards the form in which copies are to be provided to a person nominated under s 146 (see the text and notes 1-5): s 147(1). However, this is subject to the provisions of s 1144(2), Sch 5 Pt 3 (paras 5-7) (communications in electronic form) (see PARA 682) and Sch 5 Pt 4 (paras 8-13) (communications by means of a website) (see PARA 683) under which the company may take steps to enable it to communicate in electronic form or by means of a website: s 147(4). As to the Secretary of State's power to amend s 147 see s 151; and PARA 374. As to documents or information in electronic form see PARA 679.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(8) COMPANY MEMBERSHIP/(vi) Exercise of Members' Rights/B. EXERCISE OF MEMBER'S RIGHTS BY NOMINEE/376. Termination or suspension of nomination to enjoy information rights.

376. Termination or suspension of nomination to enjoy information rights.

The nomination of a person to enjoy a member's information rights¹ may be terminated at the request either of the member or of the nominated person².

In any case, such a nomination ceases to have effect on the occurrence, in relation either to the member or to the nominated person, of: (1) in the case of an individual, death or bankruptcy³; or (2) in the case of a body corporate⁴, dissolution or the making of an order for the winding up of the body otherwise than for the purposes of reconstruction⁵.

The effect of any nominations made by a member is suspended at any time when there are more nominated persons than the member has shares in the company⁶; and where the member holds different classes of shares⁷ with different information rights⁸, and where there are more nominated persons than he has shares conferring a particular right⁹, the effect of any nominations made by him is suspended to the extent that they confer that right¹⁰.

Where the company inquires of a nominated person whether he wishes to retain information rights¹¹, and where the company does not receive a response within the period of 28 days beginning with the date on which the company's inquiry was sent¹², the nomination ceases to have effect at the end of that period¹³.

The termination or suspension of a nomination means that the company is not required to act on it¹⁴; but it does not prevent the company from continuing to do so, to such extent or for such period as it thinks fit¹⁵.

1 The Companies Act 2006 s 148 has effect in relation to a nomination under s 146 (see PARA 375); s 148(1). As to the Secretary of State's power to amend s 148 see s 151; and PARA 374. As to the meaning of 'information rights' see PARA 375 note 4. As to the meaning of 'member' see PARA 321.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(8) COMPANY MEMBERSHIP/(vi) Exercise of Members' Rights/B. EXERCISE OF MEMBER'S RIGHTS BY NOMINEE/377. Exercise of members' rights where shares held on behalf of others.

377. Exercise of members' rights where shares held on behalf of others.

Where a member¹ holds shares² in a company³ on behalf of more than one person, then rights attached to the shares⁴, and rights under any enactment⁵ exercisable by virtue of holding the shares⁶, need not all be exercised (and, if exercised, need not all be exercised in the same way)⁷. A member who exercises such rights, but does not exercise all his rights, must inform the company to what extent he is exercising the rights⁸; and a member who exercises such rights in different ways must inform the company of the ways in which he is exercising them and to what extent they are exercised in each way⁹. If a member exercises such rights without informing the company either that he is not exercising all his rights¹⁰, or that he is exercising his rights in different ways¹¹, the company is entitled to assume that he is exercising all his rights and is exercising them in the same way¹².

A company is required to act under any of the following provisions¹³:

- 677 (1) the members' power¹⁴ to require circulation of a statement¹⁵;
- 678 (2) the members' power¹⁶ to require circulation of a resolution for a general meeting of a public company¹⁷;
- 679 (3) the members' power¹⁸ to request a traded company¹⁹ to include in the business to be dealt with at an annual general meeting any matter (other than a proposed resolution) which may properly be included in the business²⁰;
- 680 (4) the members' power²¹ to require an independent report on a poll taken at a meeting²²; and
- 681 (5) the members' power²³ to require website publication of audit concerns²⁴, if it receives a request in relation to which the following conditions are met²⁵:

- 682 (a) it is made by at least 100 persons²⁶;
- 683 (b) it is authenticated by all the persons making it²⁷;
- 684 (c) in the case of any of those persons who is not a member of the company, it is accompanied by a statement²⁸: (i) of the full name and address²⁹ of a person (the 'member') who is a member of the company and holds shares on behalf of that

- person³⁰; (ii) that the member is holding those shares on behalf of that person in the course of a business³¹; (iii) of the number of shares in the company that the member holds on behalf of that person³²; (iv) of the total amount paid up on those shares³³; (v) that those shares are not held on behalf of anyone else or, if they are, that the other person or persons are not among the other persons making the request³⁴; (vi) that some or all of those shares confer voting rights that are relevant for the purposes of making a request under the provision in question (listed in heads (1) to (5) above)³⁵; and (vii) that the person has the right to instruct the member how to exercise those rights³⁶;
- 685 (d) in the case of any of those persons who is a member of the company, it is accompanied by a statement³⁷: (i) that he holds shares otherwise than on behalf of another person³⁸; or (ii) that he holds shares on behalf of one or more other persons but those persons are not among the other persons making the request³⁹;
- 686 (e) it is accompanied by such evidence as the company may reasonably require of the matters mentioned in heads (c) and (d) above⁴⁰;
- 687 (f) the total amount of the sums paid up on⁴¹: (i) shares held as mentioned in head (c) above⁴²; and (ii) shares held as mentioned in head (d) above⁴³, divided by the number of persons making the request, is not less than £100⁴⁴;
- 688 (g) the request complies with any other requirements of the provision in question (listed in heads (1) to (5) above) as to contents, timing and otherwise⁴⁵.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(8) COMPANY MEMBERSHIP/(vi) Exercise of Members' Rights/B. EXERCISE OF MEMBER'S RIGHTS BY NOMINEE/378. Information as to exercise of voting rights by institutional investors.

378. Information as to exercise of voting rights by institutional investors.

The Treasury¹ or the Secretary of State² may make provision by regulations³ requiring the institutions listed in heads (1) to (6) below to provide information about the exercise of voting rights attached to the shares⁴ listed in heads (a) and (b) below⁵.

The institutions to which this provision⁶ applies are⁷:

- 689 (1) unit trust schemes⁸ in respect of which an order declaring them to be authorised unit trust schemes⁹ is in force¹⁰;
- 690 (2) open-ended investment companies¹¹ incorporated by virtue of regulations under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000¹²;
- 691 (3) companies¹³ approved as investment trusts¹⁴ as respects any accounting period¹⁵;
- 692 (4) pension schemes as defined in the Pension Schemes Act 1993¹⁶;
- 693 (5) undertakings authorised under the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 to carry on long-term insurance business¹⁷;
- 694 (6) collective investment schemes that are authorised in designated countries or territories¹⁸; and the shares to which this provision¹⁹ applies are²⁰:

- 695 (a) shares of a description traded on a specified market²¹; and
- 696 (b) shares in which the institution has, or is taken to have, an interest²².

Regulations so made²³ may require the provision of specified²⁴ information about²⁵:

- 697 (i) the exercise or non-exercise of voting rights by the institution or any person acting on its behalf²⁶;
- 698 (ii) any instructions²⁷ given by the institution or any person acting on its behalf as to the exercise or non-exercise of voting rights²⁸; and
- 699 (iii) any delegation by the institution or any person acting on its behalf of any functions in relation to the exercise or non-exercise of voting rights or the giving of such instructions²⁹.

Where instructions are given to act on the recommendations or advice of another person, the regulations may require the provision of information about what recommendations or advice were given³⁰.

The regulations may provide that an institution may discharge its obligations under the regulations by referring to information disclosed by a person acting on its behalf³¹, and that, in such a case, it is sufficient, where that other person acts on behalf of more than one institution, that the reference is to information given in aggregated form³², that is: (A) relating to the exercise or non-exercise by that person of voting rights on behalf of more than one institution³³; or (B) relating to the instructions given by that person in respect of the exercise or non-exercise of voting rights on behalf of more than one institution³⁴; or (C) relating to the delegation by that person of functions in relation to the exercise or non-exercise of voting rights, or the giving of instructions in respect of the exercise or non-exercise of voting rights, on behalf of more than one institution³⁵.

2 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 6 et seq.

3 As to the making of regulations under the Companies Act 2006 generally see ss 1288-1292. Regulations under s 1277 are subject to affirmative resolution procedure (ie the regulations must not be made unless a draft of the statutory instrument containing them has been laid before Parliament and approved by a resolution of each House of Parliament): see ss 1277(6), 1290. Regulations under s 1277 may make different provision for different descriptions of institution, different descriptions of shares and for other different circumstances: s 1277(5). At the date at which this volume states the law, no such regulations had been made under s 1277.

4 As to the meaning of 'share' see PARA 1042. As to classes of shares and class rights see PARA 1057 et seq.

5 Companies Act 2006 s 1277(1). This power is exercisable in accordance with s 1278 (see the text and notes 6-18), s 1279 (see the text and notes 19-22) and s 1280 (see the text and notes 23-35): s 1277(2). The obligation imposed by regulations under s 1277 is enforceable by civil proceedings brought either by any person to whom the information should have been provided, or by a specified regulatory authority: s 1277(4). For the purposes of ss 1277-1280, 'specified' means specified in the regulations: s 1277(3)(b).

21 Companies Act 2006 s 1279(1)(a). As to the meaning of 'specified' see note 5.

22 Companies Act 2006 s 1279(1)(b). For this purpose, an institution has an interest in shares if the shares, or a depositary certificate in respect of them, are held by it, or on its behalf: s 1279(2). A 'depositary certificate' means an instrument conferring rights (other than options) in respect of shares held by another person, and the transfer of which may be effected without the consent of that person: s 1279(2). Where an institution has an interest in a specified description of collective investment scheme, within the meaning of the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 (ie an open-ended investment company) (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 49 (2008) PARA 603), or in any other specified description of scheme or collective investment vehicle, it is taken to have an interest in any shares in which that scheme or vehicle has or is taken to have an interest: Companies Act 2006 s 1279(3). For this purpose, a scheme or vehicle is taken to have an interest in shares if it would be regarded as having such an interest in accordance with s 1279(2) if it was an institution to which s 1277 applied: s 1279(4). As to the meaning of 'specified' see note 5.

23 le made under the Companies Act 2006 s 1277 (see the text and notes 1-5): see s 1280(1).

24 As to the meaning of 'specified' see note 5.

25 Companies Act 2006 s 1280(1). The regulations may require information to be provided in respect of specified occasions or specified periods (s 1280(2)) and in such manner as may be specified, and to such persons as may be specified, or to the public (or both) (s 1280(4)). As to the meaning of 'specified' see note 5.

26 Companies Act 2006 s 1280(1)(a). For these purposes, references to a person acting on behalf of an institution include any person to whom authority has been delegated by the institution to take decisions as to any matter relevant to the subject matter of the regulations, and such other persons as may be specified: s 1277(3)(a). As to the meaning of 'specified' see note 5.

(vii) Cessation of Membership

379. Cessation of membership.

Membership of a company¹ ceases:

- 700 (1) on death²;
- 701 (2) on the registration of a transfer of all the shares held by a member³;
- 702 (3) by a valid surrender or forfeiture of his shares⁴;
- 703 (4) on the registration as a member of a purchaser of shares under a sale to satisfy a lien⁵; or 704 (5) on the dissolution of the company⁶.

Provision may be made in a company's articles of association⁷ for cessation of membership in accordance with these principles⁸.

1 As to who qualifies as a member of a company see PARA 321.

2 See PARA 398. A company's articles may make provision for the transmission of shares by operation of law, including devolution by death or bankruptcy: see PARA 434.

8 Under the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, reg 2, Schedule Table C (which applies modified Table A articles of association to companies limited by guarantee and not having a share capital), it is specified that a member of the company may at any time withdraw from the company by giving at least seven clear days' notice to the company but membership is not transferable and it ceases on death: Schedule Table C art 4. As to the meaning of 'company limited by guarantee' see PARA 102. As to the meanings of 'company having a share capital' and 'share capital' see PARA 1042. As to 'Table A' and 'Table C', and as to the treatment of legacy articles under the Companies Act 2006, see PARA 230. Similar provision is made by the model articles which have been made for the purposes of the Companies Act 2006 and intended for adoption by private companies limited by guarantee (see the Companies (Model Articles) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3229, reg 3, Sch 2; and PARA 228 et seq). Under those model articles, a member may withdraw from membership of the company by giving seven days' notice to the company in writing: Sch 2 Pt 3 art 22(1). However, membership is not transferable (Sch 2 Pt 3 art 22(2)); and a person's membership terminates when that person dies or ceases to exist (Sch 2 Pt 3 art 22(3)). As to the meaning of 'private company' see PARA 102.

380. Bankruptcy or insolvency of member.

A company member¹ who becomes bankrupt ceases to be a member when the trustee is registered as a member in his place, as he may be, if the company's articles of association permit it², or when the trustee disclaims the share and the name of the bankrupt is removed from the register³, or when the trustee's transferee is registered⁴. Where a company is a member, its membership ceases when the transferee of the liquidator is registered or when the liquidator disclaims the shares⁵.

(9) CERTIFICATION AND TRANSFER OF SECURITIES

(i) Shares

A. IN GENERAL

381. Share certificates as evidence of title.

In the case of a company¹ registered in England and Wales² or Northern Ireland, a certificate under the common seal³ of the company specifying any shares⁴ held by a member⁵ is prima facie evidence of his title to the shares⁶. This provision does not, however, apply to any document issued with respect to uncertificated shares; and a document issued by or on behalf of a participating issuer purportedly evidencing title to an uncertificated unit of a participating security is not evidence of title to the unit of the security⁷.

A company has power⁸ to issue a certificate certifying that the shareholder named in the certificate is the registered holder of the shares specified in it, the object being to give shareholders the opportunity of more easily dealing with their shares in the market and at once showing a marketable title⁹. The certificate is the only documentary evidence of title in the possession of a shareholder¹⁰. It is not a negotiable instrument or a warranty of title by the company issuing it¹¹. It declares to all the world that the person who is named in it is the registered holder of certain shares in the company¹², and that the shares are paid up to the extent mentioned in it¹³; and it is given with the intention that it shall be used as such a declaration¹⁴.

Share certificates are the proper subject of interpleader proceedings¹⁵.

1 As to the meaning of 'company' see PARA 24.

2 As to the registration of companies see PARA 111. As to the meanings of 'England' and 'Wales' see PARA 1 note 5.

3 A company may have a common seal, but need not have one: see Companies Act 2006 s 45; and PARA 283. A company that has a common seal may have an official seal for use for sealing securities issued by the company, or for sealing documents creating or evidencing securities so issued: see s 50; and PARA 291. A share certificate is not a deed within the meaning of the word as used in the Law of Property Act 1925 s 74 relating to the execution of deeds by or on behalf of corporations (see DEEDS AND OTHER INSTRUMENTS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARAS 40-42): South London Greyhound Racecourses Ltd v Wake [1931] 1 Ch 496 at 503 per Clauson J. As to the meaning of 'unregistered company' see PARA 1665.

While membership of a company requires entry on the register of members, a liquidator may distribute surplus assets in a winding up to the possessors of share certificates without requiring them to perfect their title by registration where the liquidator is satisfied that they are beneficially entitled to the shares to which the certificate relates; but, where certificates have been purchased by collectors for their ornamental value, the holders of those certificates are not beneficially entitled to the shares to which the certificate relates: Re Baku Consolidated Oilfields Ltd [1994] 1 BCLC 173.

382. Share warrants.

A company limited by shares¹ may, if so authorised by its articles², issue with respect to any fully paid shares³ a warrant (a 'share warrant') stating that the bearer of the warrant is entitled to the shares specified in it⁴. A share warrant issued under the company's common seal⁵ entitles the bearer to the shares specified in it and the shares may be transferred by delivery of the warrant⁶. A share warrant is a negotiable instrument⁷.

A company that issues a share warrant may, if so authorised by its articles, provide (by coupons or otherwise) for the payment of the future dividends on the shares included in the warrant⁸.

Unless the company's articles provide otherwise⁹, a company must, within two months¹⁰ of the surrender of a share warrant for cancellation, complete and have ready for delivery the certificates of the shares specified in the warrant¹¹. If default is made in complying with this requirement an offence is committed by every officer¹² of the company who is in default¹³.

In Pilkington v United Railways of the Havana and Regla Warehouses Ltd [1930] 2 Ch 108, it was unsuccessfully contended that the corresponding provision of the Companies Act 1929 had altered the law so as to preclude the issue of warrants in respect of stock.

3 The fact that in the Companies Act 1867 s 31 (see now the Companies Act 2006 s 122; and PARA 337) each share must, so long as the share has a number, be distinguished by that number in the statement to be inserted in the register of members on the issue of a warrant is not sufficient indication of an intention that the provisions of the Act relating to share warrants do not apply to stock: see Pilkington v United Railways of the Havana and Regla Warehouses Ltd [1930] 2 Ch 108.

Issue of certificates on the allotment of shares.

B. ISSUE OF CERTIFICATES ON ALLOTMENT OF SHARES

383. Issue of certificates on the allotment of shares.

A company¹ must, within two months² after the allotment of any of its shares³, complete and have ready for delivery, the certificates of the shares allotted⁴. This requirement does, however, not apply: (1) if the conditions of issue of the shares provide otherwise⁵; (2) in the case of allotment to a financial institution⁶; or (3) in the case of an allotment of shares if, following the allotment, the company has issued a share warrant⁷ in respect of the shares⁸.

If default is made in complying with the requirement to complete and have ready for delivery the certificates of the shares allotted, an offence is committed by every officer of the company who is in default⁹. A person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale¹⁰ and (for continued contravention) a daily default fine¹¹ not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale¹².

As to the model articles see PARA 228.

5 Companies Act 2006 s 769(2)(a).

6 Companies Act 2006 s 769(2)(b). A company of which shares are allotted to a financial institution (s 778(1)(a)), or with which a transfer for transferring shares to a financial institution is lodged (s 778(1)(c)), is not required in consequence of that allotment or transfer to comply with s 769(1) (s 778(1)). For these purposes, a 'financial institution' means:

148 (1) a recognised clearing house acting in relation to a recognised investment exchange (s 778(2)(a)); or

149 (2) a nominee of a recognised clearing house acting in that way (s 778(2)(b)(i)), or a recognised investment exchange (s 778(2)(b)(ii)), designated for these purposes in the rules of the recognised investment exchange in question (s 778(2)(b)).

Expressions used in s 778(2) have the same meaning as in the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 Pt 18 (ss 285-313): Companies Act 2006 s 778(3). Accordingly, 'recognised clearing house' means a clearing house in relation to which a recognition order is in force; and 'recognised investment exchange' means an investment exchange in relation to which a recognition order is in force: see the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 ss 285(1)(b), 417(1); and FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 49 (2008) PARA 684.

The provisions of the Companies Act 2006 s 778 apply to unregistered companies by virtue of the Unregistered Companies Regulations 2009, SI 2009/2436, reg 3, Sch 1 para 12, but as modified thereby: see PARA 1666. As to the meaning of 'unregistered company' see PARA 1665.

384. Enforcement of issue of certificate of shares allotted.

If a company¹ on which a notice has been served² requiring it to make good any default in complying with the duty³ of the company to complete and have ready for delivery the certificates of shares allotted⁴, or the duty⁵ of the company as to issue of share certificates on the surrender of share warrants⁶, fails to make good the default within ten days after service of the notice, the person⁷ entitled to have the certificates delivered to him may apply to the court⁸. The court may on such an application make an order directing the company and any officer⁹ of it to make good the default within such time as may be specified in the order¹⁰; and the order may provide that all costs of and incidental to the application are to be borne by the company or by an officer of it responsible for the default¹¹.

387. Estoppel.

A company is estopped¹ from disputing the truth of any statement in a share certificate² as against any person not knowing that the statement is untrue, who has acted or refrained from acting on the faith of it, and has thereby altered his position to his detriment³.

Where a person, who lends money to a company on the terms of having as security fully paid shares, receives certificates of the shares as fully paid, and the shares are allotted, and he is registered accordingly⁴, the company is estopped from asserting against him any liability in respect of them⁵. The company is also estopped where an allottee accepts a certificate for fully paid shares in such circumstances that he may have reason to believe, when he accepts it, that the balance of the money due on the shares had been paid by another person⁶.

The test is whether the shares were taken honestly on the faith of the certificate, and, if so, whether the holder afterwards honestly acted on the certificate or relied on it to his detriment⁷. If a person did not take the shares on the faith of the certificate, or ought to have known that the statements in it were untrue, there is no estoppel as against the company⁸. A company may be estopped although the certificate was signed by a director in favour of a firm of which he is the partner, provided that the director can prove that he did not at the time of signing know the true facts⁹. The company is, however, estopped or liable in respect of its share certificate only where it is issued by those who have authority or apparent authority to issue it; where the certificate is a forgery, as where the secretary forges the signatures of directors, the company is not estopped¹⁰. Payment of dividends on shares does not estop the company from denying the title of the payee to the shares¹¹.

If the company is estopped from denying that a share is fully paid as against a holder without notice, such a holder can give a good title to the share as fully paid even to a transferee who has notice that the shares are not fully paid¹².

A person who by reason of the issue of a certificate is entitled to shares by estoppel, and who acts on the certificate to his detriment, may recover from the company as damages the value of the shares at the time of the refusal of the company to recognise him as a shareholder, together with interest from that date¹³. Similarly, a person who as a consequence of relying on a certificate loses his power to get redress against a third party may recover damages from the company¹⁴. If, however, he has not altered his position on the faith of the certificate, he cannot recover damages¹⁵.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(9) CERTIFICATION AND TRANSFER OF SECURITIES/(i) Shares/C. TRANSFER OF CERTIFICATED SHARES/(A) Contract of Sale/390. Vendor's obligation.

390. Vendor's obligation.

Under an ordinary contract for sale of shares¹, made subject to the rules of the Stock Exchange, the vendor's only duty is to execute a valid transfer, hand it and the certificate to the purchaser, and do all that is necessary on his part to enable the purchaser to be registered, it being the purchaser's duty to obtain registration of the transfer². Unless registration is refused because the transferor has no right to execute the transfer, the transferee must pay the consideration for the transfer, although registration is refused³ in which case the transferor, so long as his name remains on the register, holds the shares in trust for the transferee⁴ unless the transferor annuls the bargain⁵. Unless the transferor takes this course, the transferee becomes in equity the owner of the shares⁶ and the transferor is bound not to prevent or delay the registration of the transferee as owner⁷. A vendor who contracts to sell registered shares is not entitled to complete the transaction by delivery of share warrants⁸.

For breach of the vendor's obligations, a claim for damages will lie at the suit of the purchaser⁹. Alternatively, unless the shares are freely available in the market, a claim for specific performance will lie¹⁰.

COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(9) CERTIFICATION AND TRANSFER OF SECURITIES/(i) Shares/C. TRANSFER OF CERTIFICATED SHARES/(B) Transfer in general/392. Restrictions on transfer of shares.

(B) TRANSFER IN GENERAL

392. Restrictions on transfer of shares.

The shares¹ or other interest of any member² in a company³ are transferable in accordance with the company's articles⁴. The articles of many companies contain restrictions on the right of transfer of shares⁵.

A restriction on the right to transfer shares is not repugnant to the absolute ownership of the shares, but is one of the original incidents of the shares attached to them by the contract contained in the articles⁶. Any condition precedent to transfer, such as obtaining the consent of the directors, must be observed⁷, although the consent may be inferred from entries in the company's books⁸, or from a constant disregard of the prescribed mode⁹. The rule against perpetuities has no application in such cases¹⁰.

Restrictive provisions are strictly construed¹¹ because shares, being personal property, are prima facie transferable¹². Nevertheless if the intent and existence of the restrictions are sufficiently certain, they will not be rejected as being unworkable if a term can be implied which will give them business efficacy¹³. Articles restricting the transfer of a share are construed as restricting only a transfer of the legal title, and not as preventing the transfer of a beneficial interest therein¹⁴. Accordingly, a transfer for full consideration made in defiance of binding restrictive provisions will suffice to pass the equitable as distinct from the legal interest in the shares¹⁵, although the transferor is entitled to annul the transaction if registration cannot be effected within a reasonable time¹⁶. Depending on the context¹⁷, a restriction on transfer may include parting with the shares by way of gift¹⁸.

Where the scheme and intent of the restrictions are to accord rights of pre-emption¹⁹ to the other members of the company, if there is no substantial compliance with the procedure laid down, the shareholder denied such rights is entitled to an appropriate injunction to protect his position²⁰.

Where shares have been issued to an officer of a company, and a provision, which prohibits the transfer of the shares for a period of years, has been inserted in the articles for the protection of the company, a valid transfer may be effected in spite of the prohibition, prior to the expiration of the period, if the consent of the company is obtained²¹.

1 As to the meaning of 'share' see PARA 1042.

2 As to the meaning of 'member of a company' see PARA 321.

3 As to the meaning of 'company' see PARA 24.

4 See the Companies Act 2006 s 544(1); and PARA 1055. This provision is subject to certain requirements: see s 544(2); and PARA 1055. As to the meaning of references to a company's 'articles' see PARA 228 note 2.

5 As to model articles of association prescribed for the purposes of the Companies Act 2006, and their application generally, see PARA 228 et seq. Different versions of model articles have been so prescribed for use by private companies limited by shares (see the Companies (Model Articles) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3229, reg 2, Sch 1), private companies limited by guarantee (see reg 3, Sch 2), and public companies (see reg 4, Sch 3). As to the meanings of 'company limited by guarantee', 'company limited by shares', 'limited company', 'private company' and 'public company' see PARA 102. The default articles prescribed for the purposes of the Companies Act 1985 ('legacy articles'), ie the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, have not been revoked and may, in their amended form, continue to be used by companies after the commencement of the Companies Act 2006: see PARA 230.

The Companies (Model Articles) Regulations 2008, SI 2008/3229, Sch 1 provides that directors of a private company limited by shares may refuse to register the transfer of a share, and if they do so, the instrument of transfer must be returned to the transferee with the notice of refusal unless they suspect that the proposed transfer may be fraudulent: see art 26(5).

Similarly, the directors of a public company may refuse to register the transfer of a certificated share if:

150 (1) the share is not fully paid (Sch 3 art 63(5)(a));

151 (2) the transfer is not lodged at the company's registered office or such other place as the directors have appointed (art 63(5)(b));

152 (3) the transfer is not accompanied by the certificate for the shares to which it relates, or such other evidence as the directors may reasonably require to show the transferor's right to make the transfer, or evidence of the right of someone other than the transferor to make the transfer on the transferor's behalf (art 63(5)(c));

153 (4) the transfer is in respect of more than one class of share (art 63(5)(d)); or

154 (5) the transfer is in favour of more than four transferees (art 63(5)(e)).

If the directors refuse to register the transfer of a share, the instrument of transfer must be returned to the transferee with the notice of refusal unless they suspect that the proposed transfer may be fraudulent: art 63(6). As to a company's registered office see PARA 129. As to classes of shares generally see PARA 1057 et seq.

For companies still using the 'legacy articles' (ie the Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805) provision is made for the directors to refuse to register the transfer of a share which is not fully paid to a person of whom they do not approve and they may refuse to register the transfer of a share on which the company has a lien: Table A art 24. They may also refuse to register a transfer unless:

- 155 (a) it is lodged at the office or at such other place as the directors may appoint and is accompanied by the certificate for the shares to which it relates and such other evidence as the directors may reasonably require to show the right of the transferor to make the transfer (Table A art 24(a));
- 156 (b) it is in respect of only one class of shares (Table A art 24(b)); and
- 157 (c) it is in favour of not more than four transferees (Table A art 24(c)).

If the directors refuse to register a transfer of a share, they must within two months after the date on which the transfer was lodged with the company send to the transferee notice of the refusal: Table A art 25. The registration of transfers of shares or of transfers of any class of shares may be suspended at such times and for such periods (not exceeding 30 days in any year) as the directors may determine: Table A art 26. The Companies (Tables A to F) Regulations 1985, SI 1985/805, Schedule, Table A provides regulations for the management of a company limited by shares but arts 24-26 are applied by Table D Pt III (regulations for the management of a company limited by guarantee and having a share capital), and Table E (an unlimited company having a share capital) but are disapplied by Table C art 1 (regulations for the management of a company limited by guarantee and not having a share capital). As to the meaning of 'unlimited company' see PARA 102. As to the meanings of 'company having a share capital' and 'share capital' see PARA 1042. As to the exercise by the directors of the power to refuse registration see PARA 393.

The discretion to refuse transfers of shares refers only to transfers and does not apply to a renunciation of a rights issue (Re Pool Shipping Co [1920] 1 Ch 251) or to an allotment of shares or a renunciation of an allotment (System Control plc v Munro Corporate plc [1990] BCLC 659 at 662-663 per Hoffmann J) or to a transmission of shares (Re Bentham Mills Spinning Co (1879) 11 ChD 900, CA; Moodie v W and J Shepherd (Bookbinders) Ltd [1949] 2 All ER 1044, HL). In some cases articles provide that no transfer shall be made without the consent of the directors; to comply with such an article it is not necessary to obtain their consent before executing the transfer; consent to the registration of the transfer is sufficient: Re Copal Varnish Co Ltd [1917] 2 Ch 349.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(9) CERTIFICATION AND TRANSFER OF SECURITIES/(i) Shares/C. TRANSFER OF CERTIFICATED SHARES/(B) Transfer in general/393. Exercise of power to refuse registration of transfer of shares.

393. Exercise of power to refuse registration of transfer of shares.

The power of refusal to register a transfer of shares¹ may be conferred on the directors of a company², and in such a case must be exercised by a decision of the board of directors³. This power must be exercised within two months of the transfer being lodged with the company⁴. Thereafter the directors will no longer be able to exercise their discretion⁵ and an application can be made to have the register rectified by the inclusion of the name of the transferee⁶. If a company⁷ refuses to register a transfer of shares⁸, it must provide the transferee with such further information about the reasons for the refusal as the transferee may reasonably request⁹. If a company fails to comply with this provision¹⁰, an offence is committed by the company, and by every officer of the company who is in default¹¹. A person guilty of such an offence is liable (on summary conviction) to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale¹² and (for continued contravention) a daily default fine¹³ not exceeding one-tenth of level 3 on the standard scale¹⁴.

The power to refuse to register a transfer is a discretionary power and must be exercised reasonably and in good faith for the company's benefit, and not arbitrarily¹⁵, although, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the power will be presumed to have been properly exercised¹⁶. Where there are several grounds on which the power may be exercised, the directors are bound to state on which ground they act¹⁷. They need not in any case give the reasons which influenced them in exercising their discretion on that ground¹⁸, whether they do so under an absolute power¹⁹ or under a power to refuse in specified circumstances²⁰. Where shares may be freely transferred to other members of the company, registration of a transfer to another member may not be refused because that member has entered into equitable obligations with a non-member affecting such shares²¹.

Where the directors' consent is required to a transfer, they must exercise their powers as trustees for the company and a consent given corruptly for their own benefit may be treated as a nullity²². Where their consent is necessary, they may refuse to consent to a transfer where the price payable is merely nominal, and the company is insolvent²³, but they may approve of an out-and-out transfer for a nominal consideration to the transferor's clerk if the transferor agrees to guarantee the payment of a call about to be made²⁴. It is their duty to refuse to register a transfer giving a misleadingly false description of the transferee and falsely stating the consideration²⁵.

Having given their reasons, the court will examine them, but it will not overrule the decision of the directors because it disagrees with the conclusion they reached as to the advisability of refusing the transfer²⁶. It will, however, do so if the directors have acted on a wrong principle²⁷.

As a general rule, a director is just as free to deal with his shares as any other person, although he may, by parting with his qualification shares, cease to hold office as a director²⁸. The mere fact that a transfer of shares is made in order to increase the voting power of the transferor, or in his interest, is no ground of objection to the transfer²⁹, nor is the fact that the transfer is made to avoid a prospective call³⁰. If a transfer is real, in the sense that it was intended to effect an out-and-out assignment, and there is no covert agreement or understanding to the contrary, it is immaterial that the transferee is insolvent and unable to pay any future calls³¹, but a colourable transfer, as to a clerk or other nominee of the transferor, will not discharge the transferor from liability³², nor will a transfer in a case where some benefit is reserved to the transferor³³. A purported transfer by a member in breach of the articles of the company³⁴ is defeasible at the suit of a member³⁵ and no transfer of shares so made may be registered and the board of directors is bound to refuse registration accordingly³⁶.

Halsbury's Laws of England/COMPANIES (VOLUME 14 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-692; VOLUME 15 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 693-1841)/2. COMPANIES REGULATED BY THE COMPANIES ACTS/(9) CERTIFICATION AND TRANSFER OF SECURITIES/(i) Shares/C. TRANSFER OF CERTIFICATED SHARES/(B) Transfer in general/394. Provisions for compulsory transfer of shares.

394. Provisions for compulsory transfer of shares.

Provisions made in good faith for the compulsory sale and transfer of shares at a fixed price, on the happening of a certain event, such as bankruptcy, are valid¹. It is common for the articles of a company to grant pre-emption rights to existing members so that a member wishing to transfer may find himself obliged to offer his shares first to the existing members, and at a price to be fixed by the company's auditors, although in appropriate circumstances a member may be able to prevent the company from exercising such powers by relying on statutory provisions protecting shareholders against inequitable or unfairly prejudicial conduct².

The articles of a company often provide that such a pre-emption provision is triggered by a member 'wishing' or 'desiring' or 'intending' to transfer his shares and much will depend on whether, on a proper construction of the articles, and in the light of the conduct of the member, such an intention has been evidenced³. A shareholder who has made a contract to sell his shares and has been paid the purchase price and is ready but not asked to execute an instrument of transfer, cannot say that he does not propose to, or is not desirous of, or does not wish to, sell his shares⁴. The mere fact that a shareholder is under a duty to transfer or sell when called upon to do so does not, however, mean that he desires or proposes to transfer⁵. A conditional agreement to sell shares subject to several events occurring (which were not within the control of either party to the agreement) did not constitute a present and unequivocal desire to transfer or dispose of the shares⁶. A gift of shares will trigger a pre-emption provision arising on the 'transfer' of a share where, in the articles, the term 'transfer' has a business meaning and, properly construed, means to 'part with' or to 'hand over'⁷.

When the company has power to fix the purchase price not below a minimum stated in the articles, if it fixes the price at the minimum, which is in fact far less than the actual value of the shares, its action is not of itself fraudulent or oppressive⁸. When the value of the shares is to be ascertained by reference to the proportion of the value of the assets appearing in the books of the company to which the holders of the shares would be entitled in a winding up, deduction for depreciation of the assets is allowed⁹.

Where the value of the shares¹⁰ is to be certified by the auditors or other independent valuer¹¹, and their opinion is expressed to be final and binding for all purposes, a valuation can be questioned only where the valuer departs from his instructions in a material respect¹², though an action will lie against the auditors for making their valuation negligently¹³.

Such provisions may constitute a contract of which the transferring shareholder is entitled to the benefit, so as to force the directors to purchase his shares where the articles designate the directors as the purchasers of shares of which the holder wishes to dispose¹⁴.

3 On a pre-emption provision being triggered, a member is commonly required to serve a transfer notice on the existing members indicating the number of shares that he is 'wishing' or 'desiring' or 'intending' to sell. A requirement in the articles to 'specify' a price in the transfer notice and to 'state' that price in the offer notice, properly construed, is a requirement that the price must be stated in detail, wholly and completely, and the use of a formula to determine the price renders the notice invalid: BWE International Ltd v Jones [2003] EWCA Civ 298, [2004] 1 BCLC 406. The addition of the word 'fair' (as in 'fair market value') adds nothing except to remind the valuer that the market price is to be ascertained on the assumption that no one is excluded from the bidding and to exclude the exceptional or freak price which might otherwise have to be taken into account if an agreement as to valuation refers to the 'open market price': Re Howie and Crawford's arbitration above.

11 The appointment by directors of auditors as valuers who are not 'independent' and who have compromised their ability to be an independent valuer as required by the articles may warrant a petition under the Companies Act 1985 s 459 (unfair prejudice) (see now the Companies Act 2006 s 994; and PARA 466): Re Benfield Greig Group, Nugent v Benfield Group plc [2001] EWCA Civ 397, [2002] 1 BCLC 65. Agreed formal requirements are aimed at eliminating, or at least reducing, the risk of avoidable, time wasting and cost consuming disputes about whether or not a person has been appointed to a position and on what terms. There is, in general, more to the appointment of a person to perform any duties than simply selecting a name to fill the position. Having agreed that the expert's opinion will be conclusive and binding for all purposes, it is not sufficient to allege that the expert's opinion is mistaken; it must be shown that the expert departed from his instructions in a material respect, eg if he valued the wrong number of shares, or valued shares in the wrong company, or the wrong person had acted as valuer: Jones v Sherwood Computer Services plc [1992] 2 All ER 170 at 179, [1992] 1 WLR 277 at 287, CA, per Dillon LJ. In assessing the validity of a valuation there was a distinction between the identity of the object (eg shares) being valued and the attributes of that object, since only a mistake as to the object's identity could found an attack on a valuation certificate: Doughty Hanson & Co Ltd v Roe [2007] EWHC 2212 (Ch), [2008] 1 BCLC 404 (even if it could be shown that the valuation of the defendant's shares had been made on the basis of a hypothesis that would not be adopted by other valuers, all that would show is that, in applying a particular valuation technique, the valuers had valued the right thing but on an erroneous hypothesis, which was a mistake that an expert was permitted to make without invalidating the certificate). Where a limited number of shares only may be held by a shareholder¹, a transfer to a person already holding the prescribed number by a transferor with notice of the fact is invalid. If the transferor is a director, he is deemed to have notice, and will remain a contributory².

In the absence of express power to do so¹, directors cannot decline to register transfers of shares² because calls on them are in arrear; but, if empowered to decline to register a transfer by a member³ who is indebted to the company, they may refuse to register a transfer made by a shareholder who is indebted to the company on any account whatever⁴, and whether solely or jointly with others⁵. If directors with such a power register transfers, the transfers are valid, although the directors may be liable to make good any loss thereby caused to the company⁶. The power to decline to register for indebtedness is exercisable although the company holds unmatured bills of the shareholder in respect of the debt⁷. If a company delays registration of a transfer because of indebtedness where there is no indebtedness, nominal damages are recoverable by the transferor⁸.

Where articles give a discretion to refuse registration of a transfer by a shareholder who is indebted to the company, the time for ascertaining whether he is so indebted is when the transfer is sent to the proper officer for registration, and not when it afterwards comes before a board meeting for registration⁹.

398. Persons who may transfer shares.

The proper person to transfer shares is the registered holder¹ or his attorney², or such other person as is by the articles³ or by statute empowered to transfer.

An instrument of transfer of the share⁴ or other interest of a deceased member of a company⁵ may be made by his personal representative⁶ although the personal representative is not himself a member of the company⁷, and is as effective as if the personal representative had been such a member at the time of the execution of the instrument⁸.

Shares or stock registered in the name of a person who, by reason of mental disorder, is incapable of managing his affairs may only be transferred under the authority of the person having jurisdiction in relation to his affairs under the Mental Capacity Act 2005⁹. Where he is a trustee, a vesting order of shares may be made by the court¹⁰.

A transfer of shares by or to a minor is voidable during his minority or within a reasonable time after his attaining full age¹¹. Shares held by a married woman as registered holder, or one of several registered joint holders, may be transferred without the concurrence of her husband¹².

Any shares or stock belonging to a bankrupt will vest automatically in his trustee in bankruptcy and may be transferred by him accordingly¹³.

(C) FORMALITIES REQUIRED BY TRANSFER

399. Necessity for proper instrument of transfer of shares.

A company¹ may not register a transfer of shares² in the company unless: (1) a proper instrument of transfer has been delivered to it³; or (2) the transfer is an exempt transfer⁴ or is in accordance with regulations⁵ relating to the evidencing and transfer of title to securities without written instrument⁶. However, this does not affect any power of the company to register as shareholder a person⁷ to whom the right to any shares in the company has been transmitted by operation of law⁸. When a transfer of shares in a company has been lodged with the company⁹, the company must, as soon as practicable and in any event within two months¹⁰ after the date on which the transfer is lodged with it¹¹, either register the transfer¹², or give the transferee notice of refusal to register the transfer, together with its reasons for the refusal¹³. If a company fails to comply with these requirements, an offence¹⁴ is committed by the company¹⁵ and every officer¹⁶ of the company who is in default¹⁷.

Articles of association usually require that shares to be transferred in any usual form or any other form approved by the directors¹⁸. Registration of a transfer cannot be refused because it omits particulars which would be found in the form but are in the circumstances immaterial¹⁹; and irregularities in the form of transfer have been often condoned on such grounds as the usage of the company, lapse of time, and the acceptance of the transfer as valid²⁰.

In order to ascertain whether a transfer is valid, and whether the transferee ought to be registered, the directors must have a reasonable time to consider the matter²¹; but this is subject to the obligation to notify the transferee within two months of the transfer being lodged²². Usually the directors notify the registered holder that a transfer has been lodged for registration²³. If the registered holder does not reply to such a notification and a forged transfer is registered, he is not estopped from having the register rectified by substituting his name for that of the transferee²⁴.

On the application of the transferor of any share or interest in a company, the company must enter in its register of members the name of the transferee in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as if the application for the entry were made by the transferee²⁵. However, this does not affect the transferee's duty²⁶ to obtain registration²⁷. The transferor may enforce the registration by obtaining an order for rectification of the register²⁸.

The secretary has no implied authority from the directors or the company to register transfers²⁹.

As to the provision made for the sending or supplying of documents or information to or from a company (the 'company communications provisions') see PARA 678 et seq. For the purposes of an equitable assignment of shares by way of gift, delivery of the share transfer form, though required, may be dispensed with in some circumstances, as where it would have been unconscionable for the donor to have recalled the gift: Pennington v Waine [2002] EWCA Civ 227, [2002] 4 All ER 215, [2002] 1 WLR 2075 (donor had intended to make an immediate gift, and gift had been perfected, but the share transfer form, though signed by the donor, had not been delivered either to the donee or to the company).
